TEXAS FACTS FOR TEXANS.

According to a publicity expert, Texas ranks first among the states in the production of cotton, in the number of mules, in number of cattle, in number of sheep, in wool production, in number of goats and production of mohair, producing about $5 per cent of the mohair in the United States. Texas trend towards increasing its urban population is shown by the fact that in the 1900 census 17.1 per cent was classified as urban; in 1910 24.1 per cent; in 1920 32.4 per cent and in 1930, according to preliminary reports, 41 per cent.

Abilene is considering a 25 billion gallon reservoir near Phantom Hill as a permanent solution of future water supply problems. It will cost around a million dollars. According to the Breckenridge American the Texas-Louisiana Power company, spending several thousand dollars on improvements in that vicinity, "handled the labor situation to make the work as generally helpful as possible." Needing only a hundred men at a time on the job the company gave a week's work to the first hundred, then put on another hundred for the second week and is continuing the program to furnish jobs for the jobless and food for their dependents.

It is said that irrigation of West Texas farms is highly profitable and when pumping is done by electricity inexpensive. This was shown by a recent survey made in the San Angelo district by the representatives of the power company. Irrigation is on the way in the rural districts of Texas and the farmers are taking advantage of the facilities provided by a modern civilization. Five million dollars in gasoline tax money will be invested in public highway building by order of the Texas highway commission during the winter months. This should help along the program for "jobs for the jobless" in order to keep down the number of idle workers in many of the farming districts of the commonwealth.

Those taking the course will be given certificates to teach the course in their respective communities.

Book's Opened Is Subject Of Markley Sermon

With a tense spiritual atmosphere prevailing the Presbyterian church last night, Chaplain Markley held the congregation for nearly an hour as he spoke from the subject, "The Book's Opened." Speaking extemporaneously and with deep spiritual fervor, he portrayed very vividly the opening of the books at the judgment bar of God. Basing his statements on the 29th chapter of the Revelation, he said that in his opinion among the books that would be opened would be those of Knowledge, Conscience, Influence, Service and Life.

Living in a day and age of higher education, he said, brought increasing responsibility in public office as nature's laws, also those of the great commonwealth of our nation brought with this violation the penalty. Certainly no one could consistently plead ignorance. The same holds good with the laws of God. Ignorance, said the Chaplain, is caused by ignoring. And if we ignore the Word of God it is rather inconsistent to plead ignorance. The Book of Conscience was very forcefully used by the speaker to demonstrate the fallacy of following or using the conscience as a safe guide. If the conscience has never been violated it is comparatively a safe guide. By many pointed and timely illustrations he showed that there was only one safe guide for the Christian and that is the Word of God. The conscience only comes through knowledge.

He seemed at his best again as he dwelt on the matter of influence. Many church members, he said, remained away from the church. Ignorance, said the Chaplain, is caused by ignoring. And if we ignore the Word of God it is rather inconsistent to plead ignorance. The Book of Conscience was very forcefully used by the speaker to demonstrate the fallacy of following or using the conscience as a safe guide. If the conscience has never been violated it is comparatively a safe guide. By many pointed and timely illustrations he showed that there was only one safe guide for the Christian and that is the Word of God. The conscience only comes through knowledge.

CRACKS IN THE DOME

An aerial photograph of the entire estate of Texas has been foregrounded by one of the state's foremost engineers in public affairs. It is a necessity for the state, and as one of the greatest economies which can be obtained. The photograph would cover over 253,000 square miles. The work was done in cooperation with the federal government, and cost the state less than 40 cents per square mile. For the state as a whole, the cost of surface topographic surveying.

Markets

Final Stocks NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—Lower priced railroad stocks and a few industrial specialties advanced on the stock exchange today, but the main body of stocks reacted to losses of 1 to 7 points.

Due to unloading of a few issues, the sales total was swelled above yesterday's figure. In the last few minutes of trading a rally restored some of the losses but the close generally was lower.

Heavy selling occurred in Richfield Oil common stock on the big board, the preferred on the curb and the 6 per cent convertible bonds on the bond market. The company today was placed in the hands of a receiver. This had a bad effect on the market in general and the oil shares in particular. All of them reacted fractions to more than a point.

Preliminary estimates placed Missouri-Kansas-Texas earnings for 1930 at a level sufficient for dividends, brought out heavy buying in that issue that sent the common stock up more than 3 points to above 25, and the preferred up five to 8 1/2.

Spies Lurk in Hotels and Cafes of European Cities Gathering Armament Information For Their Employers

NOTE: Following is the first of a series of six articles by Ralph Heinzen, United Press Paris manager, on the spy activities in peace time Europe. The first article is generally the spies and their duties. Others will be devoted to the spy organizations which flourished across Europe before the outbreak of the war.

Find Joffre's Sword in Pawnshop

NEA New Orleans Bureau
The golden-hilted sword, said to have been the one presented to a Marshal Joffre by the city of Paris in July, 1917, is shown here in the hands of Albert Louis Leloutaud, attaché of the French consulate at New Orleans, who bought it from a New Orleans man who, in turn, had bought it in a pawnshop in Paris. M. Leloutaud plans to present it to the Joffre family.

Dempsey May Fight Sharkey For Charity

By United Press
BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 15.—Jack Dempsey will give consideration to Jack Sharkey's challenge to meet him in a charity bout if the challenge is "repeated in good faith," the former champion said last night in a statement. He charged the Boston sailor with insincerity because of the six weeks' clause in the challenge.

The feud was precipitated by a magazine article in which Dempsey was quoted as saying that if he ever returned to fighting there would be one man I can lick, and that man is Jack Sharkey.

Dempsey's reply to Sharkey's challenge follows in part: "I note that Jack Sharkey, who has gained considerable publicity as a foul erier and also as a dealer in low blows, is trying to establish himself by challenging me to fight with the proceeds to go to charity." In his usual cautious way, Sharkey specifies "within six weeks," realizing that it is not possible to get in condition in that time.

"Sharkey devotes the main portion of his challenge to praising himself because he was in the U. S. navy. This I presume was done to stir me by redirecting attention to the fact that along with 20,000,000 others who had dependents I was not in the war."

Dempsey then cited the reasons why he was not in the war, recounting that he was married, was supporting a mother, and invalid sister and was exempted by the draft board.

"Sharkey challenged me to fight him. If he is really sincere about the challenge, let him repeat it in good faith and I will then give him an answer," Dempsey said.

"In reply to what is wrong with the fight game, it is Jack Sharkey of Boston."

Minor League Accepts Draft

By United Press
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Unqualified acceptance of the major league draft proposals today enabled American association baseball teams to resume business relations with the American and National Leagues. Official notice of the draft acceptance was forwarded to commissioner Landis yesterday by President T. J. Hickey of the American Association.

Five association clubs, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Toledo, Columbus and Indianapolis, voted to accept the draft. Kansas City and Louisville cast negative votes and Minneapolis, originally aligned with the draft opponents, failed to vote.

Indiana Coach Asked To Resign

By United Press
CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Resignation of H. O. (Pat) Page as football coach at Indiana University today provided the big ten conference with its first—and probably only—coaching vacancy for the 1931 season.

Page's resignation, announced in Chicago last night, came as a distinct surprise. It was even more surprising to learn that Page did not leave Indiana of his own accord, but was invited by President William Lowe Bryan to turn in his resignation three weeks ago. His successor has not been named and Page said he had no position in view.

"While I knew a certain alumni group was trying to undermine me," Page said, "the action of the faculty board in requesting President Bryan to ask for my dismissal was a surprise and a disappointment. I have a contract which has another year to run and I shall expect Indiana to pay my

Yarr Is Elected Captain of The Notre Dame Team

By United Press
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 15.—Tommy Yarr of Cincinnati, Wash., will captain Notre Dame's 1931 football team. Yarr, a junior, played center on the 1930 team and was an outstanding linesman.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Jan. 15.—Hartley (Hank) Anderson will return to Notre Dame next fall as first assistant to head football coach Knute Rockne. The former Irish line star, coach of the 1930 line, has signed a new one-year contract.

Jack Cheslavy, 1930 backfield coach, has not accepted the contract offered him and it is rumored he may leave Notre Dame to assist Navy Billz Ingram at California.

Earthquake Felt In Mexico City
By United Press
MEXICO CITY, Jan. 15.—A strong earthquake, continuing for two minutes in Mexico City, was recorded in several sections of the country late yesterday. The quake was the strongest felt here for several years.

One child died from injuries. A score of houses were demolished or badly damaged in various parts of the capital.

A report to the newspaper El Universal from the city of Oaxaca, near the center of the disturbance, said that six persons were known dead and nine seriously injured. Many houses were reported destroyed.

Telegraphic reports from points as far distant as Merida, capital of Yucatan in the extreme southeastern section of the country, indicated that a strong quake was felt throughout most of the republic.

The quake disrupted Mexico City's electric light system, throwing the entire city into darkness.

Radical Changes In "A" Districts Are Proposed

DALLAS, Jan. 15.—Radical changes in the district lines that traverse the Interscholastic League map of Texas were foreseen today in athletic director Roy B. Henderson's plans for overhauling the high school athletic structure of the state.

Henderson's proposal would add eight new districts, making a total of 16 divisions in the interscholastic league. This doubling the number of entrants in the play-off for the state football title would reduce the finals only one week, Henderson pointed out today.

Local athletic officials and coaches forecast immediate action on the proposal in order to facilitate the making of 1931 gridiron schedules. Even if Henderson's proposal should be rejected for the coming season, it is generally believed here the plan will be effective by 1932.

Economy and efficiency in the management of the football squads, which now travel many miles to meet some of their opponents, are stressed as points favorable to the change.

Under Henderson's proposal, league districts would be divided as follows: District 1—Amarillo, Lubbock, Pampa and Plainview. District 2—Childress, Electra,

New Gas Line Aids Business

BY UNITED PRESS

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 13.—Employment will be given a large number of workmen throughout this section when the Oklahoma Natural Gas Co. begins work soon on a pipe line from Texas to Rio Pecos and San Angelo. The project is to cost more than $2,000,000.

Engineers are expected to arrive here within the next few days to begin the work. The gas company is to supervise the project, hiring local workmen, according to E. R. Bradbury, manager of the local branch.

A 12 inch line is to be laid to San Angelo, giving the city 32,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily. An eight-inch line will extend to Rio Pecos to supply the huge power plant of the Pecos Valley Power and Light Co.

The gas will come from the Reagan-co pool. The University of Texas oil and gas revenues will be increased thru utilization of the gas.

Scores Hoover

Republican party in 1932 to confess its failure to solve prohibition either by admitting after eight years of inefficiency by saying nothing or by asking the repeal of prohibition.

The 20-page detailed summary of the state's business was attached to the message and filed with the clerks of both houses.

In the message proper, Moody declared his belief in the short range modernization of the prison system, the acceptance by the state government of the debts of counties in building statewide roads and for equal opportunities through a proper division of educational funds among rural and city schools.

Gov. Moody declared that "some of our natural resources are being taken out of Texas without those who profit by their removal paying any considerable portion of the burden of supporting the government or of educating the children. A present failure to make these resources pay their just part of the cost of supporting the government will not be regarded by posterity as a credit to the business foresight and ability of those who had the power, but failed to properly exercise that power for the benefit of the state."

It said that "there is more than a mere suggestion that monopolies and monopolistic tendencies are a degree responsible for the present low prices of crude petroleum. There appears to be a partial monopoly in the facilities for transporting petroleum, and what is almost an absolute monopoly in the facilities for refining and marketing products of petroleum. The spread between the price of crude oil and the sale price of gasoline is so great as to suggest that the consumer of gasoline is paying an excessive price, or that the oil resources of the state are being hammered down and sold on a market that deprives Texas of wealth rightly belonging to it, or that both are happening. This is a proper subject for legislative consideration and it is nothing short of legislative duty to see that neither the vice of monopoly nor waste result in depriving Texas of the value of its natural resource."

The low price of oil, he pointed out, "is a business calamity to the University of Texas and school funds, and to thousands of private citizens."

Gov. Moody told the new legislators he believed they have the "progressive thought and intelligent outlook on the future" essential to bring about reforms that he declared were urgently needed. He commended the constitutional amendments giving the legislators more time in sessions to attend to general legislation and more nearly repaying them the financial sacrifice of their service.

Gov. Moody advocated a state driver's license law.

Oil Charters of State Increase During Year

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 13.—In the number of charters granted to oil companies in the state during 1935 is reflected the spreading network of petroleum interests in the financial structure of Texas, according to L. B. Williamson, assistant statistician in the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas.

"In a year which witnessed the sharpest decline of the decade in the number of new corporations organized, oil companies increased from 248 to 275, reaching the second highest figure in ten years and leading all other types of business," Williamson said. "In addition to Texas companies, six out-of-state corporations were authorized by the Secretary of State to engage in oil transactions in the state."

"Manufacturing companies, which headed the 1929 list, fell off in 1930 from 382 to 255 but remained above any other year on record except 1929. The total number of banking and financial corporations organized was the smallest since 1922, the year following the last important business depression. In the year preceding the 1921 downturn in business, 164 such companies were organized, followed by only 59 in the depression year itself. During 1929, charters granted banking and financial corporations totaled 139, followed by 95 in 1930.

"Real estate and building activity in Texas continued to increase through the 1921 slump, so far as the number of charters granted indicates, but suffered sharply during 1930, when only 173 corporations of this character were organized, compared to 295 the preceding year. The 1930 decline followed a boom which began in 1926 and continued till November of 1929.

"Expansion in public service business reached its peak in Texas in 1928, when 72 companies were organized. Only 59 were authorized in 1929 and 36 in 1930.

"The total number of charters granted by the Secretary of State during 1935 was 2,195, compared to 2,550 in 1929, a decline of more than 20 per cent. Capitalization fell from $285,612,000 in 1929 to $74,436,000 in the year just closed, the smallest figure in ten years.

"Permits granted to out-of-state companies to do business in Texas increased from 329 in 1929 to 378 in 1930, but did not equal the record figure of 454 in 1928.

"December charters totaled 154, an increase over the low November figure of 127. The capitalization of these 154 firms amounted to $10,212,500, a marked increase over the $4,895,900 for the preceding month, but a large part of the December figure was made up by one machinery manufacturing unit."

Potash Beds in Texas Are Found

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—Mineral beds containing important potash minerals, possibly of commercial importance, have been discovered in New Mexico and West Texas, the Department of Interior has announced. Test holes, drilled by the Bureau of Mines under the potash act, which provides for joint exploration by the Interior and Commerce Departments, have shown beds of carnallite, sylvite and polyhalite, the most important potash minerals of European fields. Potassium, magnesium and calcium chlorides and sulphates are the chief ingredients.

Indiana Digs Up a Mastodon

If you had lived several million years ago in what is now Indiana, probably you would have met monsters like the one shown above, for near Cromwell, Ind., scientists are now digging up the bones of a recently discovered mastodon. Dr. Ira Edwards, of the Milwaukee public museum, is shown with a leg bone almost as big as a man's body. Donald Harper, 16-year-old farm boy, is holding an eight-pound molar tooth which he found while playing in an old bog on Charles Feldheiser's farm and which led to the discovery of the huge skeleton. The picture of a mastodon, loaned by the Field Museum, Chicago, shows what these great mammoths looked like.

Wheeler-Woolsey In A Delirious Comedy Today

Of course it's funny—this Radio Pictures' "Hook, Line and Sinker" which opens today at the Lyric theatre!

It goes without saying, with such a battery of professional fun-makers contributing to the story's hilarious success!

In the starring roles are Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, who can't point to four positive "hits" since they entered the talkie field—"Rio Rita," "The Cuckoos," "Half Shot at Sunrise" and "Dixiana."

Dorothy Lee In Cast

In the leading feminine role is Dorothy Lee, who combines charm, rare beauty with a boyishish comedy flair.

Jobyna Howland, with a comedy history of more than twenty years, inspires bursts of laughter whenever she appears on the screen. She is six-foot-three in her French heels.

Other Stars

Hugh Herbert and George Marion contribute fun mixed with vigorous characterizations.

And last but not least, the Whelan, humorous writer, is responsible for the story. "Hook, Line and Sinker"; Ralph Spence, one of the best known "wise-crackers" and dialogue specialists in films collaborated with Whelan on the lines; and Eddie Cline, a graduate of the Mack Sennett sure-fire comedy school, directed the picture. It's claimed to be the best yet by the screen's funniest twosome—and those who have seen Wheeler and Woolsey will agree that plenty of laughs are guaranteed.

Two Year Old Missouri Cow Breaks Worldwide Record

Professing more butterfat than any junior 2-year-old Jersey cow has ever produced in an official 305-day test, Observer's Queen owned by Longview Farm, Lee's Summit, Mo., has recently captured a world production championship of her breed with a record of 677.42 lbs. of butterfat, 12,840 lbs. of milk yielded in 305 days.

no other Jersey cow, any age, in the State of Missouri has ever yielded as much butterfat in a 305-day official test. Observer's Queen was 2 years and 3 months of age when started on her test and eight different supervisors from the University of Missouri, College of Agriculture, checked her yield during the test.

Famous Texan's Relics Will Be On Exhibition

AUSTIN, Tex., Jan. 14.—Centering around a picture of Samuel A. Maverick, Texas pioneer whose name is indissolubly linked with the history of Texas lands, an exhibit of Maverick relics and documents has been prepared for display in the archives of the University of Texas by Mrs. Mattie Austin Hatcher, archivist.

lease. Powder and shot pouches used by Maverick in early Texas days are shown while the display is completed by a book entitled, "The Prisoners of Perote," a journal kept by William Preston Stapp while he was a prisoner at the Mexican fortress from December 25, 1842 to May 10, 1844.

Several of these items are recent acquisitions of the archives. The chain which Maverick wore in prison was presented to the University by Lewis Terrell of Seattle, Wash., while the surveyor's chain and the shot and powder pouches are the gifts of Mrs. Agatha M. Welsh of San Antonio.

With these new items, we are gradually rounding out the marvelous collection of Maverick letters, diaries, memoirs and invaluable relics that have been presented to the archives by various members of the family," Mrs. Hatcher said.

Cattle Receipts In Fort Worth Decline

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 14.—Combined deliveries of cattle, calves and sheep at Fort Worth markets totaled 1,401,038 head during 1930 as compared to 1,628,819 head during 1929, according to I. B. Williamson, assistant statistician in the Bureau of Business Research at the University of Texas.

The sharpest loss was in receipts of sheep, which fell from 529,637 head in 1929 to 432,082 head during the year just closed.

New Heavyweight Is Uncovered At Chicago Fight

By DIXON STEWART United Press Staff Correspondent CHICAGO, Jan. 15.—Charlie Retzlaff, 194 pound "Duluth dynamite" loomed today as a solution to the problem of boxing promoters who have been seeking a sensational young heavyweight.

Knocking out Neron does not qualify Retzlaff as a great fighter. Max Schmeling scored at least a dozen knaves over Neron, who the workmanlike manner in which the Duluth youth won convinced the 12,749 spectators who paid $34,859 to witness the show that he has possibilities.

For GINGER'S SAKE

by ETHEL HUESTON © 1930 THE BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

CHAPTER I

SHE WANTED ACTION

"The trouble with us," declared Ginger fiercely, "is that we're too good."
 "I might even go so far as to say," she added, glancing with some apprehension at the parsonage windows where ministerial ears might overhear, "I might even go so far as to say," she repeated softly but with increasing firmness, "that we're too—damn—good."
 "Soap and water for Ginger Ella!" called Eddy Jackson. "Too," she swallowed deeply, "too—damn—good."
 "Yeh?" Eddy Jackson grinned. "I doubt if you could get many subscribers to that theory around Red Thrush."
 "I know what you mean, Ginger," said Wesley Meeker sympathetically. "And you're darn well tootin'—we are too good." Wesley Meeker always showed a flattering deference to Ginger's opinions, he being—albeit a junior in college—a mere minister's son, while she was daughter of the District Superintendent.
 "But Ginger," protested Patty Sears anxiously, "it doesn't do us any real harm to be good, does it?"
 "Well, it jolly well doesn't do us any good either!" declared Ginger. "For my part, I'm pretty well fed up with it. Why, we're so good we don't even get into any interesting scrapes to tell our children about."
 "What children?" inquired Eddy Jackson, with interest.
 "When we get them," she added hastily.
 "You might tell them about the time you locked your sister Helen in the attic on her wedding day," suggested Eddy Jackson. "And about your being arrested for using the mails to defraud. And about your startling mismanagement of your erstwhile Home for the Blind."
 "Those," said Ginger coldly, "were mere incidents."
 The four of them sat under the budding maples beside the old parsonage, the very parsonage that had been Ginger's own home until her father's marriage to Phil Van Doorn.
 It was Easter Week, and Wesley Meeker was home from college for his spring vacation. The maples were just curling out into leafy tendrils, and the first hardy tulips were showing bright colors in the narrow beds under the bay windows. The grass seemed fairly springing up beneath their restless tapping feet, for spring was in their nature as it was in the nature of earth.

Ginger Was Bored

Ginger took a morbid pleasure in visiting the familiar old parsonage of which she had called herself official head for so many years. Long, long ago, those days seemed now.
 It was her father's marriage to Phil Van Doorn, Miss Philadelphia Van Doorn, of Doorndee, which had effected the change in the worldly estate of Ginger Ella Tolliver, and incidentally, of her father also. Even the powers of his church could see the incongruity of retaining as a plain minister in a modest pastorate a man whose wife had more money than the whole Southeastern Iowa Conference put together.
 Something had to be done about it, and the only thing that could be done was to make him a District Superintendent, independent of local charges—which presto, was accomplished. The Reverend Mr. Tolliver moved out to Doorndee, the beautiful estate of his wife, taking with him Ginger Ella, the one remaining daughter of his original four, the others, as Ginger often plaintively stated, having "degenerated into a state of total marriage."
 The fact is that Ginger was bored. For a while she had experienced a tingling satisfaction in the mere possessiveness of her new and enviable estate. She had been thrilled with her pretty home; with her own thoroughbred riding horse, as good and as well accoutered as Phil's own; with the rich and simple elegance of her wardrobe. There had been a particular joy in showing off before the properly impressed, familiar, friendly eyes of Red Thrush and Eddy Jackson.
 But as the novelty of possession ebbed, the tide of boredom flowed. Gone were the old mad merry days of scheming to make one dollar do the work of three or four—and the even more desperate scheming to get hold of a dollar in the first place.
 Ginger had a bank account of her own now, founded on a check for $5,000 given her by Phil when she was graduated from high school. Gone were the days of flying in a panic to the kitchen to gather together scraps and remnants of food to be stretched into a meal for three or four, and expanded again at the last minute to provide for the inevitable unexpected guest.
 There was a cook at Doorndee, a large Scotch woman, to whom Phil had taken a fancy on a trip abroad and, in the offhand way of rich people, had imported for her private use. Goobins, her name was, but Ginger, her innate spirit of democracy rebelling at the proletarian discard of a formal prefixed title, had shortened it to an affectionate "Gooby."
 Why Go To College?

Ginger had always been a bit unusual, and her sudden acquisition of wealth with its accompanying prestige had done nothing to render her more-to-be-expected. In the first place, although it was certainly the proper thing to do, she refused to go to college.
 "Go to college?" she queried blandly. "What for? I am neither going to teach school nor marry a minister."
 "But a little cultural background," suggested her father mildly.
 Ginger's grin disconcerted him. "Listen, precious," she said, "the post-graduate preachers who comprise the faculty of Wesleyan are far more up on orthodoxy than they are on culture. They know a lot more about the Discipline than about the Fine Arts. I was brought up on the Bible and oatmeal porridge, just like they were. And in some respects, I think the results in my case were better."
 "But what are you going to do?"
 "Phil wants to support me," said Ginger moodily. "Let her! We've always been supported by somebody. Might as well be Phil as a Ladies' Aid. Better, if you ask me."
 Ginger, having been born and bred in the cheerful charity of a parsonage, had none of the temperamental prejudice against the acceptance of gratuities to those who are accustomed to giving and receiving little.
 Phil, for her part, was more than satisfied. It was what she desired of all things in the world. In the privacy of her most secret thoughts she admitted that her marriage to the minister had been prompted more by a desire to get hold of Ginger than to surrender her future to the keeping of a husband.
 For Mr. Tolliver she had a cordial and affectionate regard, for Ginger a passionate and gay devotion. Certainly the two Tollivers had brought purpose and plan into the useless, well-ordered, complacent routine of Doorndee and its mistress, Ginger beyond a shadow of doubt was the most amazing and musing human being Phil had ever encountered, and she often told herself that she would gladly have married half a dozen preachers if it had been necessary to gain the charge of Ginger Ella.

 As long as she could keep the girl with her, she was well content. Indeed she was inclined slyly to encourage Ginger in her defiance of what-was-to-be-expected. Phil did not want her to become like everybody else in Red Thrush.

A Little Flame Needed

"Red Thrush," Ginger was confiding hotly to her particular intimates on the parsonage lawn that mild spring day, "Red Thrush is fatal. I've made up my mind to that. It gets under your skin before you know it, like a flea on a dog."
 "I don't see how the others stand it," agreed Wesley Meeker. "We're brought up on it, and sort of used to it by this time, but it sure must rile the heathen."
 "It not only riles the heathen," Ginger went on. "It riles me. Eddy, you weren't there, you didn't see it. It was the last straw, and I'm a camel's back. Saturday night at the Country Club! Heaven knows it isn't much of a Country Club, and Saturday night there is nothing to brag about. All husbands and wives, with two or three children apiece, clattering up the floor in the beginning, and sleeping all over the best chairs toward the end.
 "Heaven knows it's not much—but it's all we have. But last Saturday night—Bishop Stains was here, so father and Phil took him to the Country Club to dinner. Well, it's the only place to take anybody, and you've got to take a bishop somewhere. And I ask you—Wes, you were there—I ask you—is it your idea of a wild night when they get up before a dinner dance and call on the Bishop to ask a blessing?"
 Eddy laughed, but after a moment he, with the others, lapsed into a trouble and throbbing silence. Plainly, Red Thrush had sunk pretty low.
 Mutely, each for himself, they considered it in comparison to the goings-on in the rest of the world: the dance marathons, the pocket flasks, the midnight swimming parties, the strip poker—all commonplaces of social intercourse as portrayed by modern novels and magazine stories, and emphasized a hundredfold by the betrayals of the silver screen, so lately bursting into speech.
 All Red Thrush could give them was Saturday night at the Country Club, with everybody's babies falling asleep on their evening wraps and the Bishop asking a blessing before dinner.
 "Phil says she will take you to Canada this summer if you want to go," suggested Patty, yearning to be of comfort.
 "I don't want to go," said Ginger darkly. "I'm not the type to go tripping from resort to resort. I can't flirt with people until I've known them from the cradle up and understand their line. These piazza petters who offer you a flask for life in the first intermission give me a pain in the neck. I don't want to go any place. I want to do something."
 "I say so too, Ginger," said Wesley Meeker. "What this town needs is a little flame for its youth."
 "What this town needs," said Ginger, "is a place where its youth can get away by itself—away from its fathers and mothers and nieces and nephews and family dogs and bishops—and do its flaming without benefit of clergy. Nothing puts a wet blanket on the incandescent like a family reunion in public."

A Home For the Bored

"A bit mixed," said Eddy Jackson, "but on the whole, true. I suppose you're grouching because you had to nurse Helen's baby through the last strawberry festival."
 "I'd rather nurse anybody's baby than attend the best strawberry festival in the world!" cried Ginger. "I never want to see another strawberry festival. The next person that offers me a strawberry I'll—I'll—"
 "Yeh, but you're lucky," said Wesley drearily. "Look at me. I've got to go. Your father's Superintendent. You can make excuses and cut off somewhere in the car. Us—we got to go! We've just got to. No cutting away for us."
 "Wait," Ginger stood up suddenly. "Wait." Her eyes darkened with the strange far-away intendment that from her early childhood had been a warning signal that she was up to something. "I've—got—an—idea. Let's have a Home—"
 "For the Blind," suggested Eddy Jackson brightly. Ginger did not smile. "For the Bored," she said dreamily. "Wait."

She struck off briskly across the lawn in the direction of the street.

"Ginger," called Patty Sears plaintively, "are you going home? Aren't you going to take me with you—you brought me here?"

"Wait," Ginger tossed back over her shoulder without turning. "I'm just going up to Jenky's a minute."
 In the village of Red Thrush, Ginger Ella Tolliver had two staunch and unflinching allies, poor, faithful, blind old Benny Brooks, and his wife, the former Miss Jenkins. Of these two Ginger was more sure than of her very self. Her plans might be wild, her hopes intangible, even her intentions not above reproach, but they two saw never a flaw in them or her.

Miss Jenkins had served as a doting, gratuitous companion to the four Tolliver girls during the hectic years of their growth from a troubled motherless childhood to a romantic young maturity; had indeed, as Ginger Ella stoutly believed, hoped one day to officiate in place of a parent, as the wife of their reverend father.

But coming, and largely by the machinations of that same Ginger Ella, to realize the futility of her fond and foolish fancy, in a final desperation at the prospect of the dreadful and futile loneliness which threatened her declining years, in a sudden accession of great sweet courage, she had become the wife—and at no instigation but her own!—of poor, blind, shrinking Benny Brooks.
 During nine months of the year she continued her work in the kindergarten schools of Red Thrush, thus financing their modest menage, and saving every possible penny against the inevitable rainy years that lay ahead.

In a small, three-room apartment on the second floor of the old house across the street from the parsonage, she made a happy home for the lucky man, while he assisted in every way possible—making baskets, weaving rugs—to further the financial good that plays so large a part in spiritual contentment.

Upon the support of these two Ginger could unfailingly count, and the occasions when she required support were not infrequent. In her young girlhood she had known no intimate friendships.

The boundless enthusiasm with which she, the youngest of four, had assumed active management of the parsonage and its inmates; her feverish devotion to her father and everything that concerned him; her passionate determination to marry off her sisters as best became their separate charms and values; her eagerness to enhance the family fortunes by means either fair or almost foul; all these interests had united to occupy both all her time and her affection.

Ginger Gets Into Action

But with her sisters happily married—albeit not entirely to her own best judgment; with her father comfortable in the companionship of Phil Van Doorn; and with no financial needs to egg her on, Ginger wanted a chum.

It was natural that of all the girls in Red Thrush, her fancy should center upon Patty Sears, pretty, ambitious and unopinionated, a happy satellite to revolve around irrepresible Ginger. "Ginger's central moon," Eddy Jackson called her.

But Ginger had learned much. For one thing, she had discovered that a secret shared is not a secret kept. And she had found by bitter experience that plans only half perfected may be easily prevented. Patty Sears, for all her love and loyalty, was susceptible to friendly overtures, and the suspicious nature of Eddy Jackson rendered him dangerously adept at ferreting out Ginger's intentions.

When she went to Ben and Jenky Brooks, on the other hand, it was not to confide a secret, but merely to place it in a private and practical repository all her own. Neither the sweetly sympathetic Patty nor the insidiously sly Eddy Jackson could pry a secret of Ginger's from that faithful pair.

Ginger's mind was apt to leap kangaroo-like from crag to crag of high accomplishment. She never bothered to blaze a trail for herself through the studied valleys of detail that lay between the mountain peaks of inspiration.

From her sudden grand concept of a Home for the Bored Youth of Red Thrush, it was but one flying five-mile leap to an old, neglected, run-down farmhouse on a wooded curve of the Rabbit river, a house which had borne a For Sale sign so many years it was all but obliterated by time and weather. From this abandoned house on the Rabbit, in another deep breath she was back the five miles talking it over with Ben and Jenky Brooks. And as this peak was more physically accessible to her at that moment, being right across the street, she was practical enough to turn to first things first.

She tore breathlessly up the stairs and bounded through the open door of their cheery sitting room. Jenky was tearing old clothes into long thin rags and tying them together end to end in a seemingly eternal chain for the small rug Benny was weaving.

"Darlings," Ginger began explosively, "what in the world are you going to do all summer when school is out?"

"Finish this rug," said Benny, with an apologetic little cough.

"What have you thought of?" inquired Jenky, who knew Ginger much better than Benny did.

"Well," said Ginger impressively, "I think you ought to go out in the country and get a lot of fresh air and exercise and sunshine and build up rosy cheeks and backbones and what-have-you. I thought maybe you would like to act as caretakers for my little place out in the country!"

Ginger's Big Idea

"I didn't know you had a place in the country," said Jenky breathlessly, dropping the pile of rags in a great heap at her feet.

"Well, I've practically got it," said Ginger. "A sort of get-together ground for the Junior Country Club."

"Why, I didn't know there was a Junior Country Club," protested Jenky.

"Oh, of course there is a Junior Country Club—or practically so, at any rate. What do you think of it?"

"I'd like to finish this rug," said Benny modestly.

"You can finish it out in the country," said Ginger. "Right out in the fresh air and sunshine with the birds and bees all around."

"Where is it?" asked Jenky.

"It's the old Mill Rush Farm out on Rabbit river," said Ginger.

"Why, I didn't know it had even been sold."
 "Well, it's just the same as sold. To tell the truth, you've practically bought it," said Ginger, with a faint smile.

"I've bought it!" gasped the amazed woman.
 "Yes. For me, of course. I want you to go to old Jop Westbury and get it on the best terms you can and I'll give you the money to pay for it. Pay as little down as you can and stretch the payments out as long as possible. A then you can give me a bill of sale for it or a note or whatever you call it. Because I'm not altogether sure the father would be heartily in favor of my owning a road-house."

"A road-house!" gasped Jenky. "How terrible! Is it Rush a—a road-house?" She almost whispered the terrible words.

"Well, practically so," said Ginger. "Anyhow, it'll be a road-house as soon as we get it fixed up, and you and Benny are running it for the Junior Country Club. You don't run along uptown now and find out what Joy wants for it? You've got enough rags tied to car half of the Middle West. Pretend you want it for yourself and don't mention me. And whatever he asks, bring him down."

"I will," said Jenky, who loved to transact business with other people. "I'll go this very minute. We won't have pay any rent if we live out there, will we?"

"Not a cent! And we'll pay all your living expenses too, and maybe give you something to boot—if there's money left over after we get it fixed up."

"I'll go this very minute," said Jenky excitedly.

"And for goodness' sake, don't say anything about it before Eddy Jackson, or somebody'll put a stop to it before we get started."

"Are you sure you've got enough money to pay for it?" suggested Benny, with a meek cough.

"Well, practically," said Ginger. "I can mortgage Dido if I have to." The Dido was the small smart roadster Phil had given her for her birthday.

Jenky's hands trembled nervously as she put on her hat. "I've always liked the country," she said. "We'll call it of fruit and put up enough jelly to last all next winter. It'll be good for Benny. He doesn't get outdoors enough. We'll raise chickens, Benny."

"Be sure you argue his price down," cautioned Ginger. "Half of what he asks will be about right. And prettily you're buying it for yourself."
