RAIL HEADS HAVE THEIR GRIEVANCES.

Heads of American railways have their grievances. They uncovered some few before the annual association in the city of New York. They condemned government operation of barge lines on tax-built and supported inland water and private operation of motor bus and truck routes over taxation-built and supported highways in competition with railroads.

By the way, railway executives representing 90 per cent of the mileage of the United States reported expenditure on construction and equipment for the first nine months of 1930 of $125,000,000 more than in 1929 and pledged themselves to continue that program as an aid to employment. Jobs for the jobless is their slogan.

TWO NATIONS AND THE GOLD SUPPLY.

Sixty per cent of the world's gold lies in the coffers of two nations—the United States and France. Never since the world war have any two countries held such a stupendous share of the world's wealth. France is the most prosperous of European nations. There are no soup houses or bread lines in the French republic and yet France was bled white when the treaty of peace was signed. Now the issue of unemployment is not acute and the nation that was bled white has a huge gold reserve.

Senators weren't the least bit chummy with newspapermen in the old days, Jim Preston recalls. Legislators elected them and if they controlled the legislatures they never had to worry about publicity. Some had journalistic favorites, but the present custom whereby correspondents call senators to talk to them was undreamed of. Today, in marked contrast, nearly all Senate correspondents have personal contacts with the more distinguished members. The Senate, according to Jim, is now recognized as a bigger and better source of news than it used to be. Those Advance Copies "They never used to give us advance copies of speeches," Preston says. The story of the Breckenridge-Cisco football game Tuesday might be written in two words, "Boyce Magness," but due credit must be given to the rest of the Buckeros for the splendid support they gave the spark plug of their machine in the form of line play and interference. The final score was 13 to 0 in favor of Magness and company.

Breck Wins The District Title In Game Tuesday

The game started with a bang and Breckenridge early showed superiority even though they were held scoreless for the first half. The ball was in deep Cisco territory most of the game and the Lobos did not make a serious threat throughout the game. At the opening of the second half the Bucks were driven to their 20 yard line by a good punt where they lost three yards before Magness got away for an 83 yard to a touchdown. Neat interference and splendid support aided materially in the run. The trial for goal was good, making the score 7 to Cisco received after the score and after their pass had been intercepted on the 35 yard line the Bucks again failed to gain. On the fourth down Magness backed up to the 40 yard line but failed to find an open man so he continued to fall back, finally finding Blackburn open after he had reached mid-field he tossed the ball over the goal line for the final score of the game. The attempted kick for goal was blocked.

Turknett, Jeter and Steen starred for the Lobos. By winning the play-off game with the Lobos, Breckenridge earns the opportunity to meet Amarillo for the bid district title and chance at the State championship.

Forgery Case Is Puzzle To Appeals Court

AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 3.—The court of Criminal Appeals here today refused the state a rehearing and again reversed and remanded the case of J. H. Byers who had been given a sentence of five years in Limestone county on a charge of forgery of land title. The court withdrew a former opinion in the case and wrote a new one answering points raised in the rehearing application. Byers, an attorney, was one of several persons charged in connection with a loan made in 4465 acres of land in Houston county, 15 miles southwest of Crockett. In making the loan, a deed purporting to have been made by W. S. Potter of Lafayette, Ind., was used. Potter's son asserted that his father had not been at the place where the deed purported to have been executed. The father had died a short time after the date of the deed. Byers claimed that he acted only as an attorney in consummating the loan and that he acted without any knowledge that a forgery had been committed. The trial court charged the jury to acquit Byers if they found he did not have knowledge of the forgery. The court of Criminal Appeals held he was entitled to an acquittal even if he had received knowledge of the forgery. "The entire record shows" says the new opinion "that the loan was attempted to be procured after the commission of the crime of forgery was complete. The legal question

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

Flora Miles seemed to be dazed by Dundee's vehement question. "Why, yes—Nita's own tune. That's what she called it—her own tune."

"But Mrs. Miles," Dundee protested, ashamed that the hair on his scalp prickled with horror, "do you mean to tell me that Nita was not dead THEN—when Karen Marshall screamed?"

"Dead?" Flora repeated, more bewildered. "Of course she was, or at least, they all said so—Oh, I know what you mean! And you don't mean what I mean at all—"

"Steady, honey-girl!" Tracey Miles urged, putting his arm about his wife. "I'll better tell you, Dundee. When we all came running into the room, there was Nita's powder box playing its tune over and over—"

"Oh!" Dundee wiped his forehead. "You mean it's a musical box?"

"Yes, and plays when the lid is off," Tracey answered, obviously delighted to have the limelight again. "Well, of course, since Nita couldn't put the lid back on, it was still playing... What was the tune, honey?" she asked his wife tenderly. "I haven't much ear for music at best, but at a time like that—"

"It was playing 'Juanita,'" Flora answered wearily. "Over and over—'Nita, Juanita, be my own fair bride,'" she quavered obligingly. "Only not the words, of course, just the tune. That's why Nita bought the box, I suppose, because it played her namesake song—"

"Maybe one of her beaux gave it to her," Tracey suggested lightly, patting his wife's trembling shoulder. "Anyway, Dundee, the thing ran on and on, until it ran down, I suppose. I confess I wanted to put the lid back on, to stop the damn thing, but Hugo said we mustn't touch anything—"

"And quite right!" Dundee cut in. "Now, Mrs. Miles, about that noise you heard... Did you hear anyone enter the room?... No?... Well, then, did you hear Nita speak to anyone? You said you thought it might be Lydia, coming to get something out of the closet."

"I didn't hear Nita speak a word to anybody, though she might and I wouldn't have heard, all muffled up in that velvet evening wrap and so far back in the closet—"

"Did you hear the door onto the porch—it's QUITE near the closet—"

"The door was open when we came in, Dundee," Tracey interposed. "It must have been open all the time."

"I didn't hear it open," Mrs. Miles confirmed him wearily. "I tell you I didn't hear ANYTHING, except Nita's coming in singing, then the powder box playing its tune, and that bang or bump I told you about."

"And just where was that?" Dundee persisted.

"I DON'T KNOW!" she shrielled, hysteria rising in her voice again. "I told you it sounded fairly near the closet, as if—as if somebody bumped into something. That's what it was like. That's exactly what it was like! And I was so frightened of being found in the closet that I fainted, and didn't come to till Karen screamed—"

"She was babbling on, but Dundee was thinking hard. A very convenient faint—that! For the murderer, at least! But—why not for Mrs. Miles herself? Odd that she should FAINT! Why hadn't she trumped up some excuse immediately and left the closet as

Senate Veteran

NEA Washington Bureau

With another session of Congress soon to open, James D. Preston, above, is preparing to begin his 35th year as superintendent of the Senate press gallery. He probably knows more editors and correspondents than any other man and has been on the floor longer than any senator.

Nita was entering the room? Was it, possibly, because she could think of nothing but the great relief of finding it was Sprague, not her husband, who had been writing love letters to Nita Selim? ... A jealous woman—

"Miles," he began abruptly. "I think you'd better tell me how your wife became so jealous of you and Nita Selim that she could get herself into such a false position."

Tracey Miles reddened, but one of his sunburned hands restrained his wife's passionate defense of him. "It's the truth that Flora is jealous-natured. And I suppose—"

"he faltered a moment, and his eyes did not meet his wife's—"that I liked seeing her a little bit jealous of her old man. Sort of makes a man feel—well, big, you know. And pretty important to somebody."

"So you were just having a bit of fun with your wife, so far as Mrs. Selim was concerned?" Dundee asked coldly.

The blood flowed through the thinning blond hair. "We-ell, not exactly," he admitted frankly. "You see, I DID take a shine to Nita, and if I do say so myself, she liked me a lot... Oh, nothing serious! Just a little flirtation, like most of our crowd have with each other—"

"Mrs. Miles," Dundee interrupted with sudden harshness, "are you SURE you did not know that that letter was from Dexter Sprague before you looked for it?"

"Sir, if you are insinuating that MY WIFE carried on a flirtation—or an AFFAIR with that Sprague insect—" Tracey began to bluster.

But Dundee's eyes were on Flora Miles, and he saw that her sorrow

Fleet of 12 Italian Planes to Dare Atlantic

On the most ambitious group flight yet attempted by any nation, 12 Italian military seaplanes will hop off from Orbetello, near Rome, about Dec. 15, for a flight to South America, terminating at Rio de Janeiro. This map shows the route and the points at which stops will be made. Above is Major Umberto Maddalena, Italy's famous ace, who will lead the group; below, General Italo Balbo, Italy's minister of aeronautics, who will pilot one of the planes. The flyers plan to travel by easy stages and make the 1200-mile hop across the South Atlantic—between Bolama, capital of Portuguese Guinea, and Porto Natal, Brazil—about Jan. 1 in order to get the advantage of the full moon.

skin had tightened like grayish silk over her thin cheek bones, and that her eyes looked suddenly dead and glassy.

"You FAINTED, you say, Mrs. Miles," Dundee went on inexorably. "Was it because, by any chance, that this note—and he tapped the sheet which had caused so much trouble—"revealed the fact that Nita Selim and Dexter Sprague were sweethearts or—lovers?"

It was a battle between those two now. Both ignored Tracey's red-faced rage.

Flora licked her dry lips. "No—no," she whispered. "No! It was because I was jealous of Tracey and Nita—"

"Yes, and I'd given her cause to be jealous, too!" Tracey forced himself into the conversation. "One night, at the Country Club, Flora saw me and Nita stroll off the porch and down onto the grounds, and she had a right to be sore at me when I got back, because I'd been with her, with my own wife, and it was only this very morning that I made a point of driving—out of my way, too—by this house to see Nita. Not that I meant any harm, but I was being a little silly about her—and she was about me, too! Not that I'd leave my wife and babies for any Broadway beauty under the sun—"

"Oh, Tracey! And you weren't going to tell me—?" Was there REAL jealousy now, or just pretense on Flora's part?

"You understand, don't you, Dundee?" Tracey demanded, man to man. "I was just having a little fun on the side—nothing serious, mind you! But of course I didn't tell Flora every little thing. No man does! There've been other girls—other women—"

"Tracey isn't worse than the other men!" Flora flamed up. "He is such a darling that all the girls pet him, and spoil him—"

Dundee could stand no more of Miles' complacent acceptance of his own rakishness. And certainly a girl like Nita Selim would have been able to bear precious little of it... Conceited ass! But Flora Miles was another matter—and so was Dexter Sprague!

"You can join me in the living room, if you like," Dundee said shortly, as he wheeled and strode toward the door. Was that quick, passionate kiss between husband and wife being staged for his benefit?

"Pretty near through, boy?" Strawn, who had been silent and bewildered for a long time, asked anxiously, as the two detectives passed into the hall.

"Not quite. I've got to know several things yet," Dundee answered absently.

But in the living room his mind was wholly upon the business in hand.

"I'll keep you all no longer than is absolutely necessary," he began, and again the close-knit group—in which only Dexter Sprague was an alien—grew taut with suspense. "From the playing out of the 'death hand' at bridge," he went on, using the objectionable phrase again very deliberately, "I found that no two of you men arrived together... Mr. Hammond, you were the first to arrive, I believe?"

"It seems that I was!" Clive Hammond answered curtly.

"And yet you did not enter the living room to greet your hostess?"

"I wanted a private word with Polly—Miss Beale—my fiancée," Hammond explained briefly.

"How and when did you arrive?"

"I don't know the exact time. Never thought of looking at my watch," Hammond offered. "I came out in my own roadster. As for how I entered the house, I leaned upon the porch and opened a door of the solarium. I walked across the solarium, saw Polly just finishing with bridge for the afternoon, and beckoned to her. She joined me in the solarium, and we stayed there until Karen screamed—"

"That's all."

"Have you been engaged long, Mr. Hammond—you and Miss Beale?" Dundee asked, as if quite casually.

"Nearly a year—if it's any of your business, Dundee!"

"And just when had you seen Miss Beale last, before late this afternoon?" Dundee asked.

"I refuse to answer!" Hammond flared. "That at least is none of your damned business!"

"I believe I can answer my own question, Mr. Hammond," Dundee said very softly.

It Costs Less To Have Paved Roads Than To Go Without Them

- It costs you, as the owner of a passenger automobile, about 2 1/2¢ more per mile to operate your car on dirt roads than on good pavement. The difference in cost in driving 10,000 miles is thus about $250 in favor of the paved road.
- If you use trucks to take your produce from farm to market or from store to customer, it costs you, on the average, about 2¢ more per ton-mile to operate a truck on unpaved roads than on paved roads and streets. (The figures in these paragraphs are from Bulletin 69, Iowa State College Engineering Experiment Station.)
- If your business necessitates your traveling by automobile, you use up more time and more energy on a dirt road than on a good pavement—and time is money.
- A number of Texas counties have realized the savings effected by good pavements and have already adopted large paving programs. Join the movement for paved roads in your county.
- "It costs more to go without good pavements than to have them."

Plan To Force Cotton Reduction Is Worked Out

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 2.—A plan for forcing a 25 per cent reduction of cotton acreage for five years was today announced for submission to meetings of the executive committees of Southern State Bankers' associations. The plan was approved in principle last night by representative bankers of a half dozen cotton states. J. M. E. Garrett, Corpus Christi, Tex., president of the Southern Reducers' association, submitted the proposal that all cotton belt bankers unite in withholding credit for the five year period from any farmer who does not agree to acreage reduction. CHICAGO, Dec. 2.—The Federal Farm Board does not know of any way it can help growers who continually produce more of their product than the market absorbs, Chairman Alexander Legge said in an address today before the National Association of Marketing Officials. Emergency stabilization operations such as now are in progress for wheat can be utilized to stabilize prices if the overproduction is merely seasonal, Legge said. If the average production is in line with demand, he said, the years of excess will be offset by years of under production. "But there is no possible way we can cope successfully with the situation where there is continuous production of any commodity in an amount greatly in excess of what the market will consume," the chairman said. Legge urged all farm groups and individuals to unite behind the farm board's program of developing cooperative marketing agencies.

Condemned Man Who Should Have New Trial Still Lives In Hope

By TOM MAHONEY United Press Staff Correspondent MOUNT PLEASANT, Tex., Dec. 2.—Though the court of criminal appeals and the governor have refused to intercede in his behalf, Dave Goodwin, tenant farmer "who didn't get a fair trial" but who must die nevertheless, still hopes to escape the electric chair, he said in his cell here today. The man, a nearly illiterate man of 41, said that Goodwin had been improperly tried last March on charges of murdering Lloyd Elliott but that because his attorneys did not do certain things at the trial that the higher court was powerless to act. "I won't give up," says Goodwin, "a nearly illiterate man of 41, who says that he has never been to school a day in his life. 'My lawyers are doing everything that they can. I have no money and they have no money but I'm sure everything's going to come out all right and I'll go back to my wife and girls in Sulphur Bottom. 'No, I don't blame my lawyers for what happened at the trial. The highest priced lawyers in the world couldn't have kept the jury from convicting me that day with the man milling around the courthouse.' H. H. Taylor and G. C. Barkman, attorneys for Goodwin, asked for another trial on the ground that a score of armed officers surrounded Goodwin at New Boston and that the influence of the mob which surrounded the court was so great that it was impossible for the jury to return any sentence other than death. Taylor said that he was appointed as defense counsel only the night before the trial opened. Ten months in various jails of Northeast Texas have failed to break Goodwin either physically or mentally. He weighs many pounds more than when he was first imprisoned though he complains some of pellagra. He does not pray and there are tears in his eyes only when he talks of his wife and three small daughters. "They won't break my nerve, partner," he declares. "If I had my rights I'd be out of here and I'm not going to be scared into religion." "You bet. I believe in God and used to go to a church once in a while but never joined one. I don't need one now. If they set me in the chair, I'll die game." Goodwin maintains that he killed Elliott, a 23-year-old hog raiser, in self defense following a quarrel over a slaughtered hog. A physician, an undertaker and a fire-arms expert, however, testified that Elliott was shot in the back with a rifle and a shotgun. Goodwin says that he was starting rabbit hunting and met Elliott who ordered him out of the woods.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS

By Laufer

Company Counts LITTLE Albie Booth, of course, is a great halfback. This is no attempt to take away any of the glory he earns for Yale by those snaky runs through the enemies of the Blue. But is Booth greater than Scalzi of Georgetown, or Weller of Haskell, Gott of Rhode Island, O'Neil of Detroit? You don't hear much about these lads, but in the districts where they play, they are appreciated as stars. In a few years you may never remember that there was a Scalzi or a Weller. You will remember Booth, though, because Booth went to Yale. You will compare the great feats of the backs in a future day with what Schwartz or Carideo did for Notre Dame. These men have been published not only because they have done great things but because they traveled in very good company when they accomplished their gridiron works.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—THE New York University school paper takes exception to the way N. Y. U. students were treated after the Violet victory over the Panther this year... It seems police guarded the goal posts against any overt acts... there were 15 or 20 policemen at each exit, to see that the posts were not uprooted... Ralph Davis, of the Pittsburgh Press, promises that it shall not happen thus when the teams meet at Pittsburgh again in 1932... Ralph is going to have it arranged so the N. Y. U. boys can take home with them the City-County building to use as a gymnasium... The University of California, which has been taking it on the chin in a football year this year, has 18,000 students, forming the third largest student body in the United States... Columbia, which also has been taking it on the whiskers, has the most students, something like 25,000... N. Y. U. has about 27,000.

The Difference Is—JOHNNY SCALZI went to Stamford high school when Booth was at New Haven high. There are plenty of Massachusetts people who will tell you to this day that Scalzi was a better football player than Booth. But Booth went to Yale. Scalzi went to Georgetown. Louis Weller is an Indian, for your information, and plays with Haskell. On the western plains, where Louis has been a scourge to the football teams that stood in his path, he is an idol. The people who select him play during the last two years will tell you that Booth couldn't carry Weller's headgear into the park. Jack Grover, veteran western official, calls him one of the greatest players of this football generation. Lone Star Dietz, coach at Haskell, says he is the greatest since Jim Thorpe, and, next to Thorpe, the greatest open field runner he ever has seen. How often have you seen the name of Weller, compared with the printing of the deeds of Albie Booth? How many selectors will choose Louis Weller this year on the All-American eleven?

Last Year, for Example YOU can die for dear old Rutgers, but that's about the only way you'll be noticed there. This very year Rutgers has a great halfback named Johnny Grossman. You won't see his name on the All-American selections, probably, unless he runs 95 yards every time he gets his hands on the ball. But he is one of the finest halfbacks in the country. Compared with the players who knew Carideo last year, those who knew Schooner of Arkansas were but a handful. When several All-American selectors named Schooner at end, most of the readers of newspapers in districts alien to Arkansas, asked "Who's he?" It's not what you do sometimes that is as important as the company you keep.

Jasper Loses Road Aid By A Gain In Population AUSTIN, Tex., Dec. 2.—Jasper, Texas, was naturally proud when the latest U. S. census raised its population to 3,400. Now the increase isn't so good. Because the municipality is raised above 2,500, the State Highway Department has been obliged to revise the basis on which it will help build State highway 8 and 63 through it. More liberal aid is authorized for places under 2,500 population. "We are building roads on the 1930 census, not the 1920 census," said Chairman W. R. Ely of the commission in ordering a revision of allowable aid to be made by the State Highway engineers.

Sophisticated Debutantes Are Glamorous in White

By FRANCES PAGET Copyright 1930, by Style Sources NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The debutante season is always glamorous and this year proves no exception, as the open season for deb is upon us. A resume of the fashion picture presented at these events emphasizes the popularity of white, and brings out the point of glittering embellishment, including silver, in the form of spangles, paillettes, brocaded taffet or satin lame and metallic lace. Dozens of frocks of white satin were observed, many with cowl section and rippling hem, touching the ground all around, and many also of white flat crepe, white taffet with lace or net. Comparatively few frocks of tiered or ruffled tulle, the type of costume generally associated with debutante. Gowns on princess or semi-princess lines, skirts gaining fullness well below the hips, even at a point slightly above the knees, were worn. Rhinestone shoulder straps were noted many times, also straps or silver bugle beads outlining the décolleté, front and back. The draped neckline and off-the-shoulder effect were equally popular. Black costumes were in small minority at these debutante festivities, and were confined to the older women. Two thrills of the debutantes were shoulder clusters of real sometimes gardenias.

FAMILY MENU

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

This happens to be the host's "first Thanksgiving" and consequently his first venture in carving the noble turkey. It will more than pay him to assist in the scrubbing and cleaning of the bird and carefully watch the trussing. This will give him the "feel" of the joints and a more intimate knowledge of the anatomy of the turkey than he otherwise could have. Half the beauty of the dinner is the sight of the luscious brown bird as it arrives on the table for carving, so don't cut up the turkey and send it to the table disjointed and in slices. "Practice makes perfect" and it is the duty and privilege of the man of the house to practice until he can carve the Thanksgiving turkey with skill and ease. In the first place, be sure that the carving knife is sharp. A dull knife is bound to mean trouble and consequent embarrassment. The serving platter must be large enough to comfortably accommodate the bird and leave room for the joints and slices as they are cut. The placing of the turkey on the table also is important. The breast or neck should be at the left hand of the carver. This brings the drumsticks to the right and the side of the bird directly in front of the carver. He may carve the bird standing or sitting, whichever way is easier. Must Hold Securely Plunge the carving fork over the breast bone at the highest point. Force the fork in deep, one prong on one side of the bone and the other on the other side, to secure a firm hold. Unless you have a strong and well-balanced grasp with the fork, the disjointing and slicing of the white meat will be difficult. First remove the whole leg, thigh and drumstick in one piece. To do this make a downward cut through the skin between the thigh and the body continuing in a circular cut around the joint. With the blade of the knife press the leg back and cut through the ligaments. Quickly twist the leg and the two joints of the leg remain on the platter while the wing is detached and the white meat carved. Remove the wing by making a circular cut around the joint and pressing back with the knife — just as the leg was carved. With the fork still in position, cut the slices lengthwise from the breast, beginning close to the place where the wing was removed and working up the ridge of the breast bone. Now remove the fork from its position over the breast bone and thrust it into the leg cut off. Separate the drumstick from the thigh by cutting down to the joint. Again a quick twist and firm pressure with the knife does the trick of forcing the joint from its socket. The dark meat on the thigh and drumstick is divided into small, inviting portions. If the host asks each guest his preference when serving and the answer is the bromide "anything", he will serve a piece of white meat and dark meat on each plate. If the preference is expressed he will, of course, observe it. After the turkey is carved and all the plates served, turn the cut side down against the platter. Let the knife and fork rest across the end of the platter until needed for "seconds". Unless a large party is to be served only one side is carved at first.

The following is from the Comanche Chief. "The boy referred to in this article, Winston Durham, of Comanche and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Parker, formerly of the city. Winston Durham (From the Comanche Chief) When on November nineteenth, nineteen-thirty, the brief life of Winston Durham was closed, a consideration of what his brief life had really meant was forced upon his family and friends. Certainly they had not expected to reach the final page of his biography at such an early date; to be confronted with the last word, "it is written." And yet that was what his passing meant, and that the reality that must be met, the problem that must be answered. One of the oldest grandsons in two families, in him had centered the pride and hopes of many relatives from the hour of his birth. And the first born of his parents, they had naturally depended on him and planned for his future in an especial degree. As each year passed, they saw him developing toward manhood with every pro-

Administration Building Of W. M. U. Will Be Dedicated Friday Afternoon

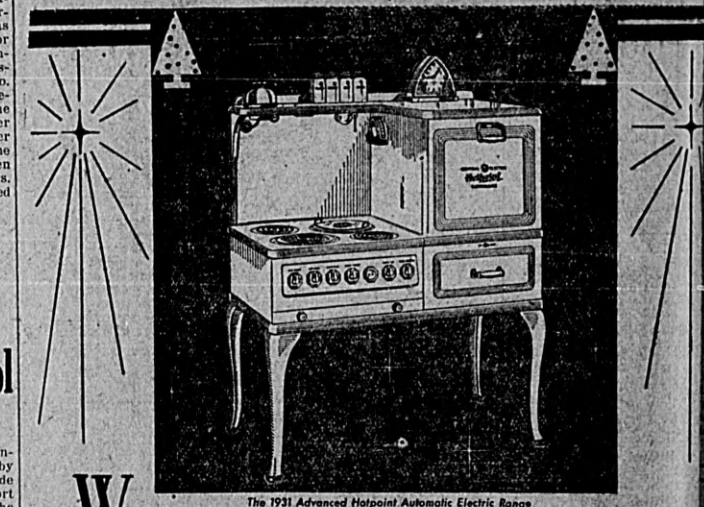

This week will see the dedication of the new administration building of Warner Memorial University. After months of hard work and sacrifice on the part of those who have had the responsibility of this work, the dream of years past is to be realized. At 2:30 next Friday afternoon, December 5th, is to be held the special dedicatory program. The building was first opened for use on September 15th when Warner Memorial University opened its second year of school work in this building. Workmen have been constantly at work since that time. Last week the new auditorium was used for the meeting of the Texas State Young People's convention of the Church of God and several basketball games have been played in the new gymnasium but not until now has there been planned a dedicatory program. Extensive plans are being made for this dedication. On the evening of December 4th, the University students are presenting the play "An Old Fashioned Mother" in the new auditorium. The cast has been working hard on this play and it is an excellent production. A cordial invitation is extended to all to come and it is hoped that a good attendance will be realized. Proceeds are to be used to purchase a curtain for the new stage. On Friday afternoon comes the dedicatory service proper and Friday night will be the time of a good basketball game between W. M. U. and Randolph College, Cla. Mo. Following is the complete dedicatory program: 7:45 p. m. Dec. 4th—Play "An Old Fashioned Mother." 8:00 p. m. December 5th—Dedicatory service. 8:00 p. m. Claims Lower Animals Are Far Superior To Man

DALLAS, Dec. 3.—So-called lower animals can do anything that man can do as well or better than he can do it, said Royal Dixon, naturalist here today. "Fish had electric lights long before man," said Dixon. "A wasp taught medicine the injection of anesthetics and also taught man how to make paper." "A worm has five hearts, four of which can keep him alive if one stops. If his head is cut off, he grows another, which is more than man can." "The ants have domesticated more animals than man. The tross are musicians." "One kind of insect can live for 40 years without food or water. A turtle can live 1000 years." "Where 48 man's superiority?" Dixon was born in Huntsville, Tex., and lived in Houston many years. He now makes his home in New York and Florida. He will speak next at Beaumont.

BOBBED HAIED WOMEN NEEDN'T HAVE GRAY HAIR

Nature Will Keep Hair Youthful Shade Free of Gray LIFELESS GRAY HAIR REGAINS OLD BEAUTY Everybody knows if color glands and hair roots are healthy and active, the hair will continue to grow definitely a rich, natural color entirely free of gray or streaked locks. A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: If I can stimulate circulation, liver, heart, skin with a tonic why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive those inactive glands so nature in her own natural way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair roots—surely they will then resume their original beautiful shades of youth regardless of user's age or previous condition of their hair.
