SHORT SESSION OF CONGRESS IS OPENED TODAY

Hoover's Message Will Be Read On Tuesday Morning

Message Containing Annual Budget For Coming Year Will Be Read Wednesday.

By LYLE C. WILSON United Press Staff Correspondent WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Congress meeting today for a three month session with party lines broken and disagreement apparent between President Hoover and his public leaders in the Senate and the House.

Opening of both houses was set for noon. Seating of new members and adjournment until tomorrow when President Hoover's message will be read. On Wednesday, Hoover will submit his budget message.

Appropriation bills originate in the House and two are scheduled for dispatch to the Senate before Christmas recess. But the Senate is expected to devote the next three weeks to Mr. Hoover's message appointments. These include staff and power commissioners, chief of J. Reuben Clark, as ambassador to Mexico, W. H. Doak as secretary of Labor, Eugene Meyer, Jr., as governor of the federal reserve board, and others.

Henry P. Fletcher, appointed chairman of the tariff commission, the only one of the group who is assured of a dangerous opposition. He is a Pennsylvania Republican.

Power, prohibition and farm revenue invite congressional storms in winter. It has been said the Sherman crime commission is a new congress and the deep blue retiring power commission's recommendation that control of utility be returned to the state seems interest in the opinions of new commissioners on that and other power matters.

Domestic and international issues scrambling party alignments. A trial of an extra session after congress automatically expires and a Republican leaders' proposed compromise with the insured.

FIVE CHARGED IN DEATH OF A YOUNG GIRL

Body Was Taken To Home Of Doctor By The Young Men

WERE DRINKING

Thought The Girl Was Drunk And Asked Doctor To Get Her Sober

By UNITED PRESS GARY, Ind., Dec. 1.—Five young men, all members of prominent Gary families, were held today in connection with the death of a pretty 18-year-old girl at a party where liquor was served.

The body of the girl, Miss Arlene Gwendolyn Draves, was taken Sunday to the home of Dr. R. O. Wharton, three miles from the residence of David Thompson, city fireman, at whose home she had attended the party with Virgil Kirkland, 20, former football star at Horace Mann High School.

The five youths who appeared at Dr. Wharton's home with the body thought the girl merely had drunk too much, they said, and asked the physician to revive her. As they stood in a half circle about him, the doctor felt her pulse and informed them she was dead.

The youths, according to Dr. Wharton, fled from the room and sped away in their automobile. The physician pursued them and fired two shots, he said, but when they failed to come back he gave their names to police. They were arrested and confessed, police said, to taking Miss Draves' body to the doctor's home.

Dr. Wharton said he believed the girl had died from a skull fracture, presumably received as her head accidentally struck the porch at the Thompson home, where she was carried after taking several drinks. Police officials charged, however, that after leaving the party Miss Draves had been attacked.

Besides Kirkland, Thompson, those held were Paul Barton, 21; Harry S. Shirk, 24; and Leon Stanford, 21. Shirk and Barton were married, and their wives were guests at the party. Shirk's father is chief of the Gary fire department.

Police chief Stanley Buckland said murder charges would be sought for all the youths. Attorney Robert Moore who was retained by the Shirk, Barton & Thompson families, indicated he would contend the liquor was poisonous, that Miss Draves died from drinking it and had been dead for some time before being taken to the physician's office.

The first person bitten by the dog was Mark Walthall, 16 year old son of P. W. Walthall, who resides on the Caton farm near the head of Lake Eastland, about one and one-half miles northwest of town. A small dog owned by the family raised such a disturbance about 3:00 a. m. Friday morning that one of the children got up to let it in the house. When she opened the door to admit the dog she discovered it was rabid.

"We do not want to kill anybody's dog if they will take care of the dog and keep it up, but human life is too precious to be endangered by dogs and the city feels it is compelled to do what it can to guard against it," Mr. Tatum said.

People having dogs they want to keep must chain them in pens and keep the gates locked, the city manager said.

City Manager Tatum issued his orders this morning after receiving a wire from the Pasteur Institute at Austin that the dog which had bitten two people and numerous other dogs and whose head was sent to Austin, showed positive evidence of rabies.

Blizzards Are Sweeping Over Northern States

By UNITED PRESS CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—Riding in the wake of one of the most severe November blizzards in weather bureau history, a new cold wave spread today over the north central states, drove temperatures almost to the zero mark and added greatly to the intense suffering already caused.

Almost upon the stroke of midnight, as a new day and a new month came to Illinois, the new cold wave howled its way out of the north, whipped the Great Lakes into a fury, crippled air, rail and highway traffic and put at least one steamship in distress.

The weather bureau said the new wave originated in the area surrounding Eagle, Alaska, where it was 52 below zero, swept down through the Mackenzie river valley, through Saskatchewan and Manitoba and, still retaining much of its severity, whistled into the United States by way of the Dakotas and Minnesota.

Rapidly falling temperatures were predicted for the southwest today while in the Rocky mountain region the weather was moderate and generally fair.

DIRECTOR OF PROHIBITION MAKES REPORT

Says He Was Aided By The Clearing Up Of Disputed Points

MORE SENTENCED

Report Shows That 52,437 Cases Disposed Of In The Courts

By UNITED PRESS WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Government officials in charge of prohibition enforcement were aided materially during the past year by the clearing up of several disputed points important to enforcement, Assistant Attorney General Youngquist pointed out in his annual report made public today.

Youngquist, successor to Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt in charge of prohibition in the handling of prosecutions, saying enforcement officers as a rule filed stronger and better cases during the last fiscal year.

The report showed jail and prison sentences were imposed in 27,709 cases from July 1, 1929 to July 1, 1930. This was an increase of 6,107 over the previous 12 months. The average length of sentences increased in even greater proportion, Youngquist stated.

The most important supreme court aid resulted from the sweeping decision in the Ike Danowitz case through which the government has been able to curb the activities of bootleggers' supply houses.

Youngquist's report showed that while there were 4,286 more cases pending at the close of the year than there were in 1929, about 75 per cent of the increase developed in the southern district of New York. Other districts showing marked increases were middle Tennessee, District of Columbia, Eastern Michigan, Eastern Kentucky, Southern Mississippi and Kansas.

The report showed 52,437 cases were disposed of as follows: Pleas of guilty 76.7 per cent; dismissed, etc., 12.7 per cent and jury trials 10.6 per cent. Of the jury trials 73 per cent resulted in convictions, although in three New York districts and in the northern District of California the percentage of acquittals ranged from 53 to 61 per cent.

Are Driven Back By Police Using Tear Gas Bombs

Placards Denouncing Restriction Of Immigration Torn Up By Officers.

By UNITED PRESS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—One shot was fired in front of the capitol building today as a throng of 500 communists gathered for a radical demonstration just as congress met at noon today.

The shot fired by a policeman precipitated a near panic as the communists fell back in confusion. Policemen mobilized in anticipation of the demonstration hastily drew revolvers.

Communists jered as the shot was fired. Spectators on the capitol steps fled inside.

No one appeared to have been injured. Police attempted to tear down inflammatory posters carried by the communists.

This led to many melees in the crowd in which police clubs were freely swung. Tear gas bombs also were used.

The communist group included delegates to the national convention for protection of foreign born which had planned the demonstration as a protest against the country's immigration laws.

Led by a giant negro, who was accompanied by an aged white woman, the group, including many women, started up the capitol steps shortly before noon.

Police halted their progress but the crowd unfurled various placards and a moment later police sticks were flying freely.

The tear bombs were used as the large group rushed two policemen, included among the placards were banners reading "Down with the Administration," "Down with deportation," "We demand release of political prisoners and justice for the foreign born."

Police took these away from the demonstrators stamping them under their feet amid shouts and cries.

Another brief flurry of fighting occurred as the capitol police added by squads from several Washington precincts, drove the demonstrators to the back of the capitol grounds. At the Peace monument demonstrators made another stand and tear bombs were used again to disperse them. One girl was reported to have been knocked unconscious during the fight.

JESTS FOR FUN

A naval officer fell overboard. He was rescued by a deck hand. The officer asked his rescuer how he could reward him.

"The best way, sir," said Jack, "is to say nothing about it. If the other fellows knew I'd pulled you out, they'd chuck me in."

A newly married couple entered a cafe and after their meal the waiter asked, "Is there anything else?"

"Yes," responded the bridegroom, "bring us a honeymoon salad."

"Beg pardon, sir, but what is a honeymoon salad?"

"Lettuce alone."

Sambo had received a book for Christmas and was being congratulated by his little friend, Rastus.

"Boy, what's de name of yo book?"

Sambo scrutinized the title knowingly, then shoved the book under Rastus' nose, saying, "Dar yo' is!"

Rastus took a good look and exclaimed, "Sho is, isn't it?"

There was an all around good for nothing man and at his funeral the minister delivered a most beautiful address, eulogizing the departed in the most glowing manner, praising his splendid qualities as a fine type of a man, a good husband, and a kind parent.

About this time, the widow, who was seated well up in front, spoke to her little daughter by her side and said, "My dear go look in the coffin and see if it is your father."

He: "Yes, I changed school."
She: "Oh! I'm so glad. I need did like engineers for they always leave blueprints on your neck."

Campaign To Kill

covered a strange bull dog which attacked the Walthall dog. Mark Walthall, awakened by the commotion on the porch, got out of bed and came out on the porch barefooted. When he appeared the bull dog attacked him and in the fight which ensued young Walthall got hold of the dog's head and was holding him. The dog already having bitten him in five different places. P. W. Walthall, the boy's father, secured a club of some kind and came to his son's rescue. When the boy turned the dog loose so his father could hit him with the club, the dog again attacked the boy and in the fight the boy got between his father and the dog and was bitten 5 times before Walthall could hit the dog. Finally the dog quit the fight and ran away.

Next morning Walthall got his shotgun, which was loaded with small shot, and located the dog under a house in the vicinity of his home. He got within five or six feet of the dog and shot him in the head with both barrels. The dog ran. Walthall followed him into a field and again shot him at close range. Neither of the shots appeared to affect the dog, which left the neighborhood.

About 1:00 o'clock Saturday afternoon F. A. Thornburg, who lives at 205 South Ostrum street, saw the big bull dog fighting with his dogs and went out to run him away. Instead of running the dog attacked Thornburg, biting him on the leg and between the shoulders. Thornburg succeeded in beating the dog off and got away from him.

Later in the afternoon the dog was killed not a great ways from Thornburg's place. It required four charges from a shotgun to kill him. The dog's head was sent to Austin and the wire received by City Manager Tatum was sent after the dog's head was examined.

In addition to biting the Thornburg and Walthall dogs the mad dog is known to have bitten a number of other dogs.

City Manager Tatum, after a conference with Dr. E. L. Townsend, city health officer, stated that a campaign to rid the town of stray dogs would be started at once. He said that the city did not want to kill any person's dog, but that if they did not keep their dogs under lock and key and chained, they would be killed. He also stated that if the city would have any dog killed that its owner wanted killed and that they would haul the dog away after it was killed, except that they would not kill dogs under houses.

City Health Officer Townsend said that dogs suspected of having been bitten by a dog with rabies, should be kept under surveillance for at least two weeks and that dogs had been known to develop rabies after a much greater period.

Mother Jones Is Dead At Age Of Over 100 Years

SILVER SPRING, Md., Dec. 1.—Mother Jones died last night. She died as she lived, a fighter.

This daughter of an Irish rebel was more than 100 years old. A kindly heart, active spirit and vigorous body led her into a crusade for the laboring man. Often the way led through bloodshed and violence, but Mother Jones emerged unharmed to die in an old-fashioned farmhouse set in the tranquil Maryland countryside.

Death ended the career of the militant at 11:55 p. m. Dr. H. H. Howell, driving rapidly over fog blanketed country roads from Silver Spring, arrived at 1 a. m. in answer to an urgent summons.

The news spread quickly, despite the isolated location of the farmhouse where Mother Jones had stayed, her small figure propped in a great four-posted bed, since she was taken ill there a year ago Thanksgiving day.

Tributes to Mother Jones came speedily.

"In the death of Mother Jones a unique and picturesque figure has been removed from the ranks of labor," said President William Green of the American Federation of Labor.

"During her entire lifetime she has been in the forefront of labor struggles, cheering and inspiring men and women to fight for the cause of organized labor."

Mother Jones will be buried in a lavender dress, in a steel-strap coffin. Her body will be taken tomorrow for burial, after a brief church service in Washington. Arrangements were being made today for a special train. The trip probably will develop into a pilgrimage, gathering tributes as it progresses.

Mother Jones was known to thousands to many others she represented a tradition.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Mr. James D. Preston, who is never under any circumstances called anything but Jim, begins one more session of Congress as superintendent of the Senate Press Gallery. He is finishing his 24th year in that post and there is no longer any senator down on the floor who was there when Jim took charge of the gallery in March, 1927.

Preston is a unique person in this world. He probably knows more newspaper editors and correspondents than any other living man. He calls by their first names nearly all newspapermen who have worked in Washington these last three decades. He is one of those admired characters for whom no one ever finds criticism. Correspondents regard him as a jewel of inestimable value and that appraisal begins on initial contact because Jim insists on being as helpful to the newest, greenest arrival as to those veterans whom he has known for many years.

Very much like a fond nurse with a large brood, Jim Preston rules over the three large rooms behind the press seats in the Senate chamber. There some 365 eligible correspondents discuss, write, telegraph and telephone news. Few persons ever see those rooms because one of Jim's well done jobs is to keep out those who don't belong inside.

Has Many Jobs

Jim's other jobs, big and little, are too many for the telling. With a couple of assistants, including the veteran Bill Collins, he undertakes to keep in touch with everything going on in the Senate and the capitol in which correspondents are interested. He keeps track of committee meeting programs and runs around making sure that senators prepare advance copies of their important speeches. He keeps track of telephone calls for reporters out of halling distance and advises others of the run of events when they call the gallery from their offices. And a lot of little things which show that Jim's aim

White Mother Jones had been ill for a year she rallied from time to time. Frequently her life was despaired of, but Mother Jones, always a fighter, would not surrender.

The last time she spoke was at 2 a. m. Sunday. Throughout Sunday she had difficulty breathing. During the afternoon it was apparent death was near but she struggled on. She had had no nourishment for two days and only an occasional sip of milk or water for two weeks.

Last May 1 Mother Jones—she was seldom known by her full name of Mrs. Mary Harris Jones—celebrated her 100th birthday. Labor leaders from all over the country gathered at the Burzeas home. Mother Jones insisted on being taken downstairs to greet them and see her birthday cake. The day was so great one for Mother Jones in another respect, for a telegram arrived from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of the family against whom she had fought bitterly.

"He's a damn good sport," said Mother Jones with her picturesque way of expression. "I've ticked him many times, but now we've made peace."

Other old-time enemies were not so easily forgotten. She gave $1,000 a few weeks ago to continue her campaign against President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America. Later she tore up her will and contributed her savings, about $10,000, to the cause of labor.

Hoover's Message

gent Republican group. The program was to bring progressive measures to a vote in the House this session.

Under this plan, the bill for governmental operation of the Muscle Shoals power and fertilizer plant and the resolution to abolish lame duck sessions of congress—both sponsored by Senator Norris, Rep. Neb.—would have been considered by the House, Republican leaders were bitterly attacked House action. The Senate has passed both measures.

Majority leader Watson of the Senate, Speaker Longworth and other Republican leaders in congress opposed injection of so controversial an issue as the President into a congress whose life is limited by statute to three months. Their fear it would lead to an extra session failed to dissuade Mr. Hoover from his purpose. There was ill-concealed anger among Republican leaders when the President publicly announced his intentions.

Secretary of State Stimson appointed to Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee before the President spoke. But Borah, refused to hold the chair during the short session. That strategy would prevent precious legislative days being devoted to debate on this international question during a session confronted with anxious domestic issues.

Borah and Watson—party partners of the President in the Senate's work—will fight him in short session or long to prevent America becoming a member of the world court.

How much the correspondents think of him was indicated when members and ex-members of the gallery raised $100 on his 25th anniversary there to give him a five-year and a cash purse. Money was still coming in when they closed the fund and Jim drove the silver for five years, proudly.

He is tall, lean and red-faced, with black hair parted in the middle and a drooping moustache. He speaks with a benevolent confidence and has some kind of a standing joke with nearly everyone who uses the gallery.

Beginning in 1909, Jim has superintended press arrangements at all national political conventions, allocating working press seats in conjunction with the standing committee of correspondents. He remembers that until 1904 press seats were awarded as political favors.

There were 325 press seats at a convention then. Now there are 650. There are fewer newspapers but larger working forces. Applications for the 650 seats average about 1100.

Prevents Confusion

At the 1923 conventions, Jim fixed it with the Resolutions Committee so that the party platforms could be given out 24 hours ahead of publication. That avoided such incidents as those at the Chicago Republican convention of 1920, when one newspaper scooped the country on the platform, and at Cleveland in 1924, when a copy was sneaked through a transom from a locked room.

Jim and Bill Donaldson, superintendent of the House gallery, seated 600 journalists from America and the rest of the world at the Washington Arms Conference, staying up all night and superintending installation of full communication facilities. Foreign journalists were extravagant in praise.

Even when the conference moved to the D. A. R. hall, where only a hundred press seats were provided, Jim still managed to keep everyone happy through his fairness in distribution.

More about the remarkable Jim Preston in another story tomorrow.

Markets

Mr. Hoover hopes, nevertheless, that the leaders will follow his suggestion that the word court be held over until after March 4 when the Senate alone could be summoned in extra session. Meeting without the House, the Senate could transact no legislative business.

Third Trial Of Slayer Of Six Before Jury

EL DORADO, Kan., Dec. 1.—The third jury to hear the case of Owen Oberst, farm youth charged with murdering the six members of his family near here more than two years ago, today resumed deliberation.

Twice before, Oberst's trials have resulted in declarations of no-trial when no verdict was reached. At this trial, the case was given the jury Saturday night and deliberation started this morning after Judge A. T. Ayres allowed jurymen to spend Sunday at their homes.

Oberst first confessed to the crime and was given life imprisonment but the Kansas supreme court granted him a new trial. In his confession, made May 4, 1928, on the day his parents and brothers and sisters were buried, Oberst said he killed them because his father refused to let him drive the family automobile. In detail, he told how he first murdered the six persons, piled their bodies in the kitchen of the farm home and set fire to the house.

If Oberst is acquitted, he will be sole heir to his father's estate, which totals $38,000.

Scribes Pick a Southwestern Conference Team

BY WRITERS PRESS
GALVESTON, Tex., Dec. 1.—Victor Emanuel, sports editor of the Galveston News, today had set up the following mythical team to rule the deserted gridirons of the Southwest conference:

Ends, Long, SMU and Peterson, Texas U.; tackles, Blanton, Texas U. and Skeeters, SMU; guards, Koch of Baylor and Emerson of Texas U.; center, Atkins, TCU; quarterback, Wilson, Baylor; halfbacks, Shelley, Texas U.; and Dale, Arkansas; fullback, Koy, Texas U.

HOUSTON, Tex., Dec. 1.—Paul McFadden of Cleburne, 175 pound end on the Texas A. & M. football team, ranked today one of the best punters in the Southwest conference in the judgement of sport scribes in Houston.

DALLAS, Dec. 1.—Four grid warriors of Texas University's championship machine today occupied berths on the all-Southwest conference team selected by Jere R. Hayes, sports scribe of the Dallas Times Herald.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 1.—A group of the leading sports scribes in Arkansas today had set up the following "all-Southwestern" eleven:

Ends, Long, SMU and Creighton, Arkansas; tackles, Blanton, Texas U. and Skeeters, SMU; guards, Morgan of Rice and Koch of Baylor; center, Atkins, TCU; quarterback, Dale, Arkansas. "I suppose so," Karen conceded, on a sob.

DALLAS, Dec. 1.—Ben Hill, sports editor of the Dallas Dispatch, today announced his all-conference selection as follows: Long, SMU and Tracy, A&M; ends; Skeeters, SMU and Blanton, Texas; tackles; Koch Baylor, and Morgan Rice; guards; Gilbert, S. M. U., quarterback; Shelley, Texas, and Wilson, Baylor halfbacks; Stafford, Texas, fullback.

MURDER BRIDGE

BY ANNE AUSTIN
THE BLACK CAT THE AVENGING PARROT AND MURDER BACKSTAIRS
GOSPEL DANCE AND SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Juanita Selim is murdered at her dressing table during a bridge party. Bonnie Dundee orders everyone to take the places they held from the dealing of the "death hand" until the body was found.

Drake finally admits that he and his wife quarreled. At the end of the hand, Dexter Sprague, terribly nervous, comes in with Janet Raymond. The group is hostile to him, and the two go into the dining room. Karen starts to go to the bedroom to tell Nita the score, as she did before, but collapses.

There was a concerted rush to the girl who had fallen, sobbing and whimpering to the floor of the hall. But it was Dundee who reached her first. Dundee and her outraged and excited old husband.

"Mrs. Marshall—listen, please," he begged in a low voice, as he lifted her so that her head rested against his arm. "You have been appendicitis—wonderful! Please believe that I am truly sorry to distress you so, and that very soon, I hope, you may go home and rest."

"I—can't bear any—more," Karen whimpered.

Ignoring Judge Marshall's louder blustering, Dundee continued softly: "You don't want the wrong person to be accused of this terrible crime, do you, Mrs. Marshall? . . . Of course not! And you DO want to help us all you can to discover who really killed Mrs. Selim?"

He was passing out of the room, offering his arm to Karen, when one of his underlined notes thrust itself upon his memory.

Without replying, Dundee escorted the trembling little discoverer of Nita Selim's body into the large ornate bedroom, murmuring as he did so:

"Don't be frightened, Mrs. Marshall. The body—I mean Mrs. Selim isn't here now. . . . And you shan't have to scream. I'll give the signal myself. I just want you to go through the same motions you did before."

Herded by Strawn, the small crowd of men and women came running into the room, Judge Marshall leading the way, Penny SECOND! Why not Flora Miles, who had been nearer to that room than any of the others, if her story was true? Dundee asked himself.

"You were in here when you heard Mrs. Marshall scream, Mrs. Miles?" Dundee paused to ask.

"Yes—yes," she gasped, rising. "And that horrible man has made me stay in here—Of course the door was closed—before. I telephoned home to ask about my children, and then I came in here—to my face over—"

"You didn't hear your husband arrive?"

"I—I didn't hear him arrive," Flora Miles faltered, her handkerchief dabbing at her trembling, over-rouged lips.

"I—believe so," Dexter Sprague answered in a strained voice. "I laid my hand on her—her hair, for an instant, then I picked up her hand to see if—if there was any pulse left."

"I—I believe so," Dexter Sprague answered in a strained voice. "I laid my hand on her—her hair, for an instant, then I picked up her hand to see if—if there was any pulse left."

"Neither cold nor warm—just cool," Sprague answered in a voice that was nearly strangled with emotion. "She—she always had cool hands."

"What did you do, Judge Marshall?" Dundee asked abruptly.

"I took my poor little wife away from this room, laid her on a couch in the living room, and then telephoned the police. Miss Cram stood at my elbow, urging me to hurry, so that she might ring you—"

Further questioning elicited little more, beyond the fact that Clive Hammond had dashed out to circle the house and look over the grounds, and that John Drake had been fully occupied with a hysterical member that Tracy stepped away from the—body, and called you, and you weren't here. And then almost the next minute I saw you coming toward him from—from—OVER THERE!"

"You're lying, Penny Cram! I did no such thing!" Flora Miles cried hysterically. "I came running in—with—with the rest of you, and I ran to join her. We looked out of the windows, both the side windows and the rear ones, and out of the door onto the porch. But we didn't see anything."

"And you were the only one to touch her, Sprague?"

"You're sort of mixed up, aren't you, Flora? I was standing right here until the worst of it was over. I didn't even go near Nita, and I know you didn't pass me. I re-

"Better let this bunch go for the present, hadn't we, boy?" Captain Strawn whispered uneasily. "Not a thing on any of them—"

"Not quite yet, sir, if you don't mind," Dundee answered in a low voice. "Will you take them back into the living room and put them under Sergeant Turner's charge for awhile? Then there are one or two things I'd like to talk over with you."

Mollified by the younger man's deference, Strawn obeyed the suggestion, to return within five minutes, his gray brows drawn into a frown.

"I hope you'll be willing to take full credit for that fool bridge game, Bonnie," he worried. "I don't want to look a cump in the newspapers!"

NEW PRODUCING LEVEL IS HOPE OF ACTIVITIES

Jarvis Lease is in Vicinity of the Famous Duke Gusher

The J. G. Jarvis lease of 252 acres on the Lindley farm in Comanche county—in the Desdemona field south of Eastland—is the scene of new activity, in that Jarvis is planning to deepen two wells on this property. Operations have already been started on one of these wells and it is expected that work will be underway on a second well on this lease in the next week or ten days.

The Jarvis lease is located about two miles south of the old Desdemona field. The north part of this lease is just a short distance from the famous Duke well, that came in for flush production estimated at around 5,000 barrels of high gravity oil daily and that was one of the most sensational gushers that this part of Texas saw in big boom days of ten years ago.

In a field famous during the boom, the Merriman district, Col. Robert D. Gordon brought in a well recently for 160 barrels of oil and 1,000,000 feet of gas daily, on the Hunt lease, nine miles east of Eastland.

The No. 1 well is now being deepened from the 2,700 foot level to 3,100 feet. It is at the latter depth that Jarvis expects to pick up the lower Desdemona pay horizon, and with this work completed on the No. 1 well, it is reported that plans have been made to deepen the other three wells on this lease and to also further develop the Lindley lease with an intensive drilling campaign.

Considerable interest is being shown in the operations that Jarvis now has underway on this property as it is the opinion of many oil operators that with the Lindley lease producing from the lower Desdemona pay level, a good number of new locations and drilling operations would be started on the acreage around the Jarvis-Lindley tract of 252 acres.

Another deep test that is being watched with great interest is the S. A. Hopkins well to the east of Eastland. This well at a depth of around 5,555 feet struck a gas stratum. Structurally speaking, this well is the deepest in the United States as it has drilled through the Ellenburger, which is the formation where the drilling heretofore had always stopped.

In a field famous during the boom, the Merriman district, Col. Robert D. Gordon brought in a well recently for 160 barrels of oil and 1,000,000 feet of gas daily, on the Hunt lease, nine miles east of Eastland.

world upside down by reason of its unexpected triumphant tour around the country, following its successful engagement of seventy-three weeks in New York, Eugene O'Neill, its author, threw all the old stage traditions away to the winds.

Before the Theatre Guild, Inc. produced this extraordinary play, every prophet of the theatre said it would not to fall because it was too unconventional and no play has any right to consist of nine long acts. Nor would playgoers go to a theatre at the unheard of hour of 3:30 in the afternoon and remain there until eleven o'clock at night, with only a little over an hour out for dinner from 7:40 to 9 p.m. Nor would playgoers be able to comprehend when the characters on the stage were speaking the regular lines of the dialogue in distinction from the "sides" which expressed their innermost thoughts.

All this would seem to indicate that nobody can ever tell just what the theatregoing public will like, but it is nearly always a safe bet that anything Eugene O'Neill may write is bound to be possessed of unusual entertaining features.

Naturalistic Flowers Return to Smart Coat Collars

By FRANCES PAGET Copyright, 1930, by Style Sources NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The importance of costume accessories this winter and this is by no means a local condition. Here is a report from Paris which has many interesting phases:

Accessories are important this winter in Paris, and foremost among them are naturalistic flowers. Pink roses, white or pink or even turquoise gardenias, carnations, orchids, clusters of white violets, all have been seen nestled into the fur coat collars. At any given time, four out of 10 women wear these flowers and one is more apt to see three roses in a cluster than one single modest one.

Some of the white pique flowers persist with black suits, but they are far outnumbered by the others, which imitate the actual flowers as closely as possible.

Tiny face veils are much worn most of them flaring and just covering the eyes; but a few newer in aspect, are of simple mesh crissed across the forehead in one-sided slant, so that they do not cover the eyes but do veil the hair. They are worn mostly with small beret shapes that are fitted on the head to show the hair.

We note the increasing importance of pull-on gloves that are bulky looking. By this is meant gloves of antelope whose seams are either hand-stitched or at least outside seams, and whose cuff sections are much wider than they used to be, so that their whole aspect gets away from the fine, thin gloves fashionable a year ago. In length, the longer these gloves are
