For The Sake Of Humanity

At a meeting of the Pastor's Association the past week it was decided to put on a drive for second hand clothing and other useful articles to be used by the United Charities. Heretofore the churches and Sunday Schools have made such appeals and the response has been such that many needy families have been supplied with food, clothing, shoes, canned food or other useful articles. Rev. W. T. Turner states that the Eastland Telegram has offered its services to aid in conducting a general campaign and that the Thursday Club has offered its services to help in gathering the material needed. This led the pastors to decide to enlarge the campaign this year and ask all clubs, lodges and other organizations that care to help in the movement to solicit their members to make donations of clothing, bedding, shoes, canned food or other useful articles that can be used by needy families the coming winter.

Fish And Game Laws To Receive Test In Court

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent
AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 17.—When J. R. Jones was fined $10 for catching a bass out of season in his own pond in Wichita county, a test was begun that will show how powerful the State fish, game and oyster department is. Jones frankly wanted to test out the law. So to make the issue a good square one it is conceded he caught fish under the size fixed as a minimum by the fishing law. The game department admits the fish were Jones' own fish and that he caught them in his own private pond.

This puts a clear cut issue up to the court of criminal appeals where Jones and the game department have elected to settle the question. Secretary Will Tucker of the department declares, however, that it is a sound law to prohibit a man catching his own fish in his own pond out of season. "Suppose fish caught in a person's private pond" were held to be exempt, said Tucker. "Then suppose a game warden meets a fisherman returning along the road, looks into his creel and finds undersize fish or fish out of the season. The game warden charges the man with violation of the fish law. The man either replies that he caught them in his own private pond or calmly invites the game warden to prove that he caught them in a public stream. "It would be impossible for the game warden to prove where the fish were caught nine times out of ten. The entire fish law would fall down. "I will admit that it seems hard to say that a man cannot catch his own fish in his own pond when he wants to, but the authority is needed and I feel confident the court will sustain it as a necessary police power."

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Adventure enters the life of Celia Mitchell, 17, when she learns her father she has supposed dead and wealthy. She leaves unpretentious home in Baltimore to live in New York with her father, John Mitchell, and her aristocratic grandmother, Margaret Rogers. Celia's mother is now a widow, having divorced Mitchell and later remarried. Evelyn Shields, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore she promised to be loyal to his

Slowly she turned her head, raising her eyes to meet his. This was no goddess. Evelyn's gaze held tenderness, warmth and the suggestion of veiled mystery. "I wonder," she said softly, "if I do know, John?" "Oh, Evelyn—you're so beautiful!" The man's voice was choking with emotion. Mrs. Parsons did not smile. Had she overplayed that moment of delay? Surely not. In another instant John Mitchell was going to ask her to be his wife. He took both her hands in his. Mitchell's eyes were earnest, anxious. "You must have known how I feel about you," he said. "You've been so helpful, so understanding! Evelyn, you're wonderful. You're the one woman—"

She stood leaning against it, hands clenched and her body quivering. Evelyn's eyes were closed, her mouth a cruel, silver of crimson. "Oh!" she gasped. "Oh—" Suddenly the woman was a tornado of energy. She picked up a book, the first object to touch her hand, and hurled it across the room. Papers, magazines, a cigarette case were next. When the room looked as though a windstorm had struck it, Evelyn flung herself in a chair. Her face was white and distorted. One white satin toe tapped the floor furiously. Gradually she became quieter. Blind anger gave way to an expression of grim deliberation. Evelyn's eyes narrowed. Nothing had been lost and on the whole she might gain from the situation. Temporary obstacles often increased a man's ardor. Hadn't she played that game frequently? She moved to her dressing table and began working with cosmetics as she framed a course of action. In a few moments traces of the tempestuous outburst had been removed. A subtle touch of eye-shadow made her eyes more brilliant and gave them a hint of wistfulness. She drew fresh lips with a stick of carmine, dusted her face and shoulders with fragrant powder. Under lamplight these restoratives would pass unnoticed. The action soothed Evelyn as nothing else could have done. When she had finished she surveyed herself with satisfaction. Like other vain women Evelyn Parsons felt fortified by her beauty and thought no man could resist it. She would make Mitchell ask her to marry him tomorrow. Oh, yes, she could do that! It had been exasperating to have the goal within reach and then rudely snatched away, but there would be no such slip tomorrow. Back in Evelyn Parsons' mind was the thought that Celia would pay for this interference. Anyone who interfered with the widow's plans was quite likely to pay. She was singing softly the refrain of an English ballad as she returned to the porch. It was a song Evelyn had heard Mitchell say he was fond of. "Milda's bring something cool to drink," she said. "I thought it would be refreshing." "Isn't Evelyn the perfect hostess, father?" Celia said. "She never forgets anything." "You're quite right," Mitchell agreed. Evelyn's mother, Mrs. Parsons as she sank gracefully into a wicker chair. She had chosen a seat where the path of light from the living room touched her hair and made it a golden halo. The maid appeared bearing a tray of glasses and pitcher in which ice clinked invitingly. She served the beverage, then withdrew. "You don't know how often I think of this porch afternoons and evenings when I'm in town," Mitchell spoke up. "It's a great place you've got here, Evelyn." "Celia and I live out here. Don't we, dear?" "Almost. Here and in the garden." "A man's a fool to tie himself down in a city all his life," John Mitchell said. "I wish you and I were arguing with myself. He balanced his agless absent-mindedly and the fragile crystal was in imminent peril. He remembered just in time. "I don't think you ought to stay in town during this hot weather," Celia said firmly. "Oh—utterly impossible to get away—now. Besides, see how I impose on Mrs. Parsons' hospitality!" "You know you could never do that, John," Evelyn spoke in a low tone. She gave Mitchell a quick glance, then her eyes turned away. For nearly an hour the three sat enjoying the breeze and the fantastic pattern of light and shadows woven on the moonlit lawn. Then Mitchell said it was time for him to go. He was spending the night at the country club and promised to rejoin them next day after his morning round of golf. He departed. Celia paused long enough in the upstairs hallway before going to her room to say to Mrs. Parsons: "You looked perfectly beautiful tonight, Evelyn! I thought at first you'd done your hair a different way, but it isn't that. I guess it's just because you really are beautiful!" "Silly child. Tell me about the picnic." "It was fun. Listen, Evelyn, do you think you'll be able to talk to father tomorrow about Tod? I meant about getting him to change his opinion of him? It sort of bothers me. I can't help but worry—" Sheer inspiration prompted Evelyn Parsons. An eager light came into her eyes. "I'll do what I can, Celia," she said. "And I'm sure I can't fail. Let's see—the things is to manage this the right way." She studied silently a moment. "I know!" she continued. "We'll pretend you have an errand tomorrow afternoon after luncheon. You can take the car and stay away a long time—two hours at least! That will give me the chance to have the sort of talk with your father where I can lead up to the subject. Don't you see? First I'll talk about how popular you are at the club and how everyone likes you. That will be sure to start him on his mind for you to return. From that it will be no trick at all for me to mention Tod and what a splendid young man he is." "Oh, Evelyn!" The girl was delighted. "That's how we'll manage it. Now remember, your part is to go for a long drive that will give me plenty of time—" "I'll time myself," Celia assured her. "I'll give you hours! Good night, Evelyn." "Good night, dear!" As Evelyn Parsons closed the door of her room she was convinced that fate was her ally. Celia was trying to learn tennis. The game fascinated her, and Lisi Duncan, who played expertly, had volunteered some instruction. Celia was too shy to expose her feeble efforts on the courts at the club, but she could bounce balls against the backstops on the court at Larchwood to her heart's content. She was in the midst of an exciting private practice Sunday morning when she heard her father's voice. "Higher!" he called. "Throw the ball higher in the air before you strike it." The girl turned in the direction from where his voice came. Mitchell stood in the pathway through the hedge. His hands were on his hips. He might have been watching her for some time. Her face, red from exertion, colored more darkly. "I didn't see you," she said. "Good morning. I'm afraid I'll never learn how to serve!" "You don't throw the ball high enough," Mitchell repeated. He walked out to where she stood, took the racket and ball in his own hands. "Here—like this!" The white sphere cut sharply across the net to the opposite corner of the court. "Perfect!" cried Celia. "I haven't had a tennis racket in my hands for years," her father said, looking down at the object. "Getting too old for the game." "Not when you can serve a ball like that! Oh, I wish I could make them spin that way! Mine won't even go over the net." "Have you got another racket?" "There are some in the house. Wait—I'll be back in two minutes." Celia turned and sped down the pathway. In a short time she was back, breathless and eye shining. She carried three tennis rackets. "Help yourself," Celia urged. Mitchell tried them, selected one and walked to the opposite side of the net. He had already put aside his coat and hat. For some time he returned balls and called out suggestions as Celia practiced. Later they were opponents in a game. It ended in the man's favor. They played a second, which Celia won, and then her father demanded time out for rest. The girl's embarrassment was gone. She asked questions, tried to correct faults Mitchell criticized. "You'll get along all right," he assured her. "It comes with practice." Celia brushed her hair back impatiently. In her short white dress and heeled slippers she looked a child. Sunshine had turned her face and arms a ruddy tan. A low exclamation came from John Mitchell. "Completely forgot!" he said emphatically. "Sorry, Celia. I brought a letter down for you yesterday and forgot to give it to you. Now where did I put that—" He began to search his pockets. (To Be Continued)

Trust to Experience

The Best Judge of Them All

TIRE-BUYING is hardly to be counted among the "pleasures" of owning an automobile. It means the paying out of money which also may be needed for something else.

That is why most car owners now think twice before they accept a tire. They desire that their purchases of tires be few and far between.

Advertising, friendship, high-powered words—these things don't influence tire-buyers as formerly. Tires are mostly bought today on a straight business basis. On the basis of proved facts, proved performance, proved superiority—not on talk or claims. Millions more people than ever before now trust to experience—the best judge of them all—in choosing tires.

That is why millions more people buy Goodyear Tires than any other kind.

That is why more Eastland people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind.

That is why Goodyear Tires outsell any other tire in the world—by millions. Experience has finally and conclusively proved that Goodyear Tires are the best tires money can buy.

And because the public recognizes Goodyears as the best tires—these tires are becoming even better.

Through the enormous and ever increasing quantity production brought about by this great public preference, costs have been steadily lowered, permitting Goodyear to give a quality so much greater for the same money that Goodyear Tires are by far, "The world's greatest values."

Trust to experience when you buy tires.

School And Social Activities At Warner Memorial University

Reception Given Students And Faculty Of W.M.U.

Last year's faculty and students of W. M. U. gave a reception for the new faculty members and students in the University dining hall last Saturday evening. The program was varied and interesting.

Dr. J. T. Wilson, president of the University, gave the first address of the evening. He spoke on "Making the Most of Your Opportunities." He pointed out the number of exceptional opportunities open to the students and teachers of W. M. U. and admonished them to take advantage. He said, "Rarely does a student have the opportunity for personal help from the teacher that he has at W. M. U."

Miss Grace Bailey, director of the School of Music, gave a piano solo. Mrs. Lenora Reynolds, professor of Voice, sang a vocal solo. The welcome address to students was given by Mr. Dean Turner. Among other things he said, "I know of no other school where the teachers will do more for the students than at W. M. U." Professor Harry T. Reynolds gave the welcome to the new faculty members. Miss Grace Bailey, Miss Luella Warren, Miss Frances Ward, Miss Irene Smith and Miss Thelma Riddle.

The rest of the evening was spent in an informal social way. All the new teachers and students were required to do a stunt for initiation. These caused much merriment. Various games and relays were played. Later in the evening refreshments of hot chocolate and cake were served to all.

The room was decorated in black and gold, the school colors, and with wild flowers. In spite of the rainy weather, practically all of the faculty members and students were present.

W.M.U. Members to San Antonio
Dr. J. T. Wilson, president of W. M. U. is to give the address at the dedication of the new Church of God Chapel at San Antonio, Texas, today. Several other members of the faculty and student body of W. M. U. have part in the program. Miss Grace Bailey, head of the School of Music will render several instrumental numbers. The college mixed quartet will be on the program for several songs. The members of the quartet are Mrs. Pearl Bailey, soprano; Professor H. H. Ward, tenor; Miss Mildred McDowell, alto, and Mr. Kenneth Parker, bass.

Professor Ward, Dr. Wilson, Miss Grace Bailey, Kenneth Parker, Mrs. Pearl Bailey, Mildred McDowell, and Mrs. Louise McDowell, left Eastland early Saturday morning and plan to return Monday. Enroute they plan to stop at Austin and visit the State Capitol building. Dr. Wilson will remain at San Antonio to hold a revival.

Campus Notes
Kenneth Parker and Bill Mathena made a business trip to Dallas Friday.
Misses Sybil and Bonnie Bell Smith spent last week-end at their home at Ballinger, Texas.
Miss Floy Coffey has been absent from school a few days on account of illness.
W. F. McMullen has been visiting with Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Barnett. He is the father of Mrs. Barnett.

Ward Mullings and Maurice Mullings went to Dallas Saturday to attend the fair and the Sunset North Dallas football game. They came home Monday.
W. E. and Wynona Halenbeck were absent from school Monday on account of bad roads.

The athletic boys attended the football game between Eastland High and Sweetwater Friday.
Mrs. E. W. Barnett, with her small son, Samuel David, and her father, Mr. McMullen, were chapel visitors Wednesday.

The Chemistry Laboratory room was finished last week so now the students are working on their experiments.
Only one room now remains to be finished in the Administration building. All the upstairs rooms are finished with the exception of the auditorium. Plasterers are at work on the auditorium at this writing.

Chapel Notes
Friday—Miss Luella Warren, superintendent of Preparatory Work spoke in chapel Friday, Oct. 10th. Her subject was "Friends, how to get them and keep them."
Monday—The Rev. Turner, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Eastland, spoke in chapel Monday. He advised the students of W. M. U. to remember their Creator in the days of their youth. The talk was very interesting and beneficial.

Wednesday—Mrs. Lenora Reynolds and Miss Grace Bailey, in charge of the chapel program (Wednesday). The program was interesting musical. The mixed quartet composed of the following members: Mrs. Pearl Bailey, Professor Ward, Mildred McDowell, and Kenneth Parker sang a song, Miss Grace Bailey and Mrs. Dennis Latabe rendered a piano duet. Miss Beatrice Smith sang "If Winter Comes." A very interesting feature of the program was the first appearance of the instrumental quartet. Miss Thelma Riddle and W. C. Nobles played violins, Aubrey Forrest played saxophone and Sherman Simpson played clarinet, with Miss Bailey at the piano. Their music was enjoyed by all. A piano solo, "The Last Hope," by Miss Bailey concluded this program.

The chapel schedule for the rest of the month is as follows:
Monday, 20th, Dr. J. T. Wilson, Wednesday, 22nd, Dean E. O. Bailey, Friday, 24th, Professor E. W. Barnett, Monday, 27th, Professor H. T. Reynolds, Wednesday, 29th, Miss Thelma Riddle, Friday, 31st, Miss Beatrice Smith.

The chapel programs are held from 9:30 until 10 o'clock on every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning. The public has a cordial invitation to attend. If you are planning a visit to the University, plan to come when you can attend chapel.

Belle Lettres Club Notes
The Belle Lettres Club of W. M. U. was organized in 1929 for the purpose of developing the social phase of the school and incidentally to develop the intellectual and spiritual phase by giving the members of the club the privilege of public appearance, expression and general social activities. The club renders very interesting programs which include music, debates, dramatics, literary reports, current events and various other numbers of interest.

The officers elected for the first semester of 1930-31 were:
President—Aubrey Forrest, Vice President—Kenneth Parker, Secy-Treas—Venice Bell, Chairman of Program Committee—Mrs. E. O. Bailey, Faculty Advisor—H. T. Reynolds.

Critic—Frances Ward, Sergeant at Arms—Charles Foster.

ter. The club meets every two weeks on Saturday evening in the assembly room of the Administration building. Visitors are welcome.

Freshman Notes
The Freshman class of Warner Memorial University was organized during the second week of school. Miss Frances Ward was chosen as faculty adviser. The following officers were elected: President, Lester Crose; Vice-President, Glenna Gillespie; Secy-Treas, Edwin Gibson.

Freshman Picnic
The Freshman College Class went on a picnic Friday afternoon, Oct. 17th. The party left about 4:30 o'clock and returned about eight. They spent the evening at Leon Lake, playing games and toasting marshmallows. Miss Frances Ward, class sponsor, was chaperon. Members present were, Mrs. Pearl Bailey, Miss Elizabeth Day, Miss Glenna Gillespie, Miss Jane Angstadt, Chester Gerig, Lester Crose, Miss Nina Smith, Miss Bonnie Bell Smith, Edwin Gibson, W. C. Nobles and J. W. Greathouse were not able to attend.

All had a very enjoyable time. They returned in time for chorus practice.

British Flier Is Forced Down In Australian Flight

MELBOURNE, Australia, Oct. 18.—Flight-Lieut. G. W. Hill, who is attempting to break Bert Hinkler's England-to-Australia flight record of 15 days, 12 hours, crashed between Koepang and Atamboea on the island of Timor, Dutch East Indies, according to word received here tonight.

The flier was uninjured, but his plane was damaged. Hill was flying from Sourabaya, on the island of Java, to Port Darwin, Australia, and expected to break Hinkler's record by several days.

No details of the cause of the crash was received here. Meanwhile, it was reported that Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith, who left Croydon several days after Hill's departure, was reported approaching Port Darwin, the first stopping point in Australia. Kingsford-Smith left Sourabaya in his light airplane, Southern Cross Jr., nearly five hours after Hill departed.

Peoria Gambler Shot Down With A Machine Gun

PEORIA, Ill., Oct. 18.—Clyde Garrison, wealthy gambling house owner, was wounded, and his wife, Cora, 37, was killed instantly by machine gun bullets when Garrison last night resisted what he believed was an attempt by gangsters to kidnap him for ransom.

His right leg shattered by four sub machine gun bullets, Garrison declared today from a hospital cot that he felt certain the men who killed his wife were gangsters from Chicago or St. Louis and that he was positive he wounded one of them.

Police also expressed belief in the kidnaping theory and cited as proof the recent kidnapings of other wealthy Peoria gamblers, one of whom was held prisoner in the vicinity of Chicago for five days before he was released.

The officers declared they knew the names of Garrison's assailants and that arrests were expected.

Open Sessions Of Education Board Are Suggested

AUSTIN, Tex., Oct. 18.—Open sessions of the state board of education should be held so the public may have an opportunity to know what is in text books before they are adopted, Robert Whiteaker state adjutant of the American Legion, declared here today after being shown copies of a Texas school history already adopted by the state. The history's slight treatment of Texas' part in World war will be placed before the meeting of the state executive committee of the American Legion here tomorrow, Whiteaker said, if the other business attendant upon new commander Hal Brennan taking charge, does not prevent reaching the topic.

Under contracts made by the state a revision committee can demand correction in books even after adoption. An error of omission therefore is incurable for the time for which the book is adopted—usually six years. An opportunity for public discussion of the books before adoption, Whiteaker said, would disclose omissions in time.

The threatened action of the Legion comes on the heels of similar protest by regional chambers of commerce against some of the geography text books adopted by the state.

The book specially criticized by Whiteaker is the product of University of Texas professors.

V. Earl Earp, member of the Legion executive committee who is here for tomorrow's meeting said that one of the authors is opposed to teaching about wars.

Scout Training Saves Child's Life

OGDEN, Utah.—Quick thinking in emergencies taught young boys by scout leaders is the principal reason three-year-old Keith Murray is alive today.

Keith was pulled out of a foot sink hole by Jack Sims, boy scout. Unconscious and dead, the child was quickly revived by the scout who knew exactly what to do to revive a drowning person.

We choose GENERAL ELECTRIC FULL RANGE RADIO

Radio models have come and gone. New inventions have made early radio models obsolete. But now there is a radio which combines every good quality known to radio science—

The General Electric full range radio

We recommend this ultra-modern radio as the best value in the radio market today. The name, General Electric, alone assures the high quality of the product.

This radio is on display in our merchandise store. See it and hear it. Compare it with other radio, regardless of price. Three beautiful models. The lowboy, shown at the right, is $166.00 complete, with tubes. Convenient terms, if you prefer.

LOWBOY—A distinguished example of early American cabinet design. Harmonizes beautifully with any surroundings. Super-heterodyne circuit, uses 9 tubes, four of which are screen-grid. More selective and sensitive than any set hitherto offered to the public.

This expansion program in Eastland is just another evidence of our faith in this section of Texas. We have enjoyed a nice business in the past, for which we thank our friends and customers, and this will enable us to serve more people and do it more efficiently. You can depend on Panhandle Products and Panhandle Service. So, as the fall comes on, start using Panhandle NOXLESS Green Gasoline. It will give you summer performance even in the dead of winter because it is that quick-starting gasoline that you heard people talking about last winter, and it has Pep, Power, Pick-Up, and Speed. Furthermore, it is clean burning, and will not cause carbon to collect in your motor nor dilute the oil in the crank case. It is the last word in motor car fuel. Drive by one of the above conveniently located service stations and try this powerfully good NOXLESS Gasoline.
