The Boy Scouts of Eastland will have a part on the program to be presented at the Eastland county fair here Sept. 24 to 27. Relics Featured Community Fairs Over The County

The series of community fairs held this fall in the county have been featured by splendid exhibits of old relics. These old relics consist of old quilts, old dresses, books, guns, Indian arrow heads, beads, taken from Indian graves and various other items of great interest and some of them very valuable.

It has been suggested that the County Commissioners be asked to build wall cases to be placed around the wall in the corridors of the courthouse, beginning on the main floor and going up as additional space is needed, and that these old relics, or as many of them as could be secured for the purpose, placed in them and kept under lock and key. Such an exhibit of old relics, it is pointed out, would be a great attraction to visitors at the county courthouse. Also, many of the old relics are kept in the homes of the owners and are liable to destruction by fire, while, if they were in the county courthouse, which is absolutely fire-proof, they would be safe from damage by fire.

Dr. H. B. Tanner, of the Eastland chamber of commerce, has made some inquiry of the owners of these old relics and most of those approached on the subject expressed a willingness to place them in the courthouse if provisions for their safe keeping were made.

At the Scranton fair an old silver teapot, which the owner said had been in his family 150 years, was among the old relics on display. At this same fair was an old Bible 120 years old. In this Bible was many dates and notations regarding the pioneer families of this section which are of great interest. At several of the fairs were different kinds of guns, some of them very old and each with an interesting history. Many pieces of handiwork of people who died many, many years ago, were found among the exhibits. It has been suggested that a sufficient number of old and unsecured showcases could be secured at little or no cost from which these cases could be made by any carpenter or cabinet maker. They could be finished in such colors as to make them blend in with the walls so as to not mar the beauty of the building.

Aviatrix Dies In Crash After Start Of Flight

Ruth Alexander Crashes After Start of San Diego-New York Flight Early Today.

By United Press. SAN DIEGO, Cal., Sept. 18.—Ruth Alexander, 20-year-old San Diego flyer, was killed at Loma Portal, near here, early today soon after taking off on a flight to New York. The young flier crashed into the side of a hill in the residential section just inside the city limits to the west.

Miss Alexander took off in a low-wing monoplane, and heading into heavy fog she was believed to have lost her bearings. Nearby residents heard the crash of the tiny plane and telephoned officials. Police were called, and the girl's body was found in the plane's wreckage. Bits of the plane were strewn along the hill for a good distance, indicating she was traveling at a high speed when the plane struck. Department of Commerce officials and coroner Schuyler C. Kelly launched separate investigations into the tragedy. The body was held at an undertaking parlor here pending an inquest. Miss Alexander set a world altitude record last June and was considered one of the best women fliers in the nation.

City in Eastland county and he is going to prove it by having the largest membership in the local post.

Every member of the Dulin-Dandolph Post has been placed on the membership committee, which is headed by Vice-Commander R. D. Mahon. It is very important that every member pay his dues now to Finance Officer Don Parker, or to Vice-Commander R. D. Mahon, and then get busy on the many ex-service men in Eastland and vicinity and urge that they line up with this Post.

During the County Fair, the Legion will have space allotted for skin games, etc. The boys conducting the Legion's concessions will be armed with receipt books and authorized to accept any ex-service man's application for 1931 membership. The magazines and other literature Legion members receive are well worth more than the cost of membership. We do not believe any ex-service man can afford not to line up with the Legion. If any ex-service man has any questions to ask about Legion affairs, the Post Commander, H. P. Crouch, would be glad to advise with him.

Tonight, Sept. 18th, from 8:00 to 9:30 p. m., the American Legion through the courtesy of the RCA-Victor Company, Inc. and the National Broadcasting Company, will hold one of the biggest, if not the biggest, broadcasts in the annals of radio. The local Post urgently requests that every ex-service man in Eastland and vicinity arrange to listen in on that program. WFAA at Dallas will broadcast this program for this territory.

Woman Charged With Murder Of Her Husband

BY UNITED PRESS

GLASGOW, Mont., Sept. 18—Mrs. Anna B. Anot was charged today with the murder of her husband because she changed her mind. Nearly a month ago the husband's body was found in the basement of his home lying on a burning pile of rubbish. A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury.

Late E. O. Evred, an insurance agent, told authorities he was in a drug store the night before Anot's body was discovered and had spoken to Mrs. Anot as she was purchasing poison.

"She seemed startled when she saw me and told the clerk to 'never mind' and left the store hurriedly," Evred said.

Investigation disclosed she returned to the drug store the next day and consummated the purchase.

Anot's body had been buried at Park River, N. B. It was exhumed and traces of poison, which possibly could have caused death, were found, officials said.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 LIA ROGERS, just out of school, opens a hot July business for a job. Her MARGARET ROGERS, is now employed as a seamstress in a dress shop. On the day when she receives a letter which she conceals from her mother, she is offered a position with every advantage of education, travel and social position. The mother will give her money, she declares she will do this.

She goes for a drive with NEY SHIELDS, young newspaper photographer. She loves her and swears the next day she will continue her search for work and secure a position as stenographer. She goes to the shop to see her mother. Mrs. Rogers has been suddenly ill. The doctor's report and exhaustion are the cause. After a day's rest Mrs. Rogers returns to her duties, but a day later she pays a call to her mother's office.

GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER V
 You've got to get out of that room, Mrs. Rogers. You've got to get out of that room! Fresh air, country air, that's what you need. You can't stop working! You can't stop working! All the time I'm through with this, I've told you what to do. You keep on this way. Three days a year—I won't answer the consequences." Mrs. Rogers turned her head away.

 After a moment's silence the physician went on more kindly: "Your condition is serious. I don't know exactly yet how far the damage has gone, but I do know that collapse the other day was the first warning. Mrs. Rogers, you can't afford to let this go on. You have a fighting chance. Give up your work, go home and rest a few days, then come back to see me next Wednesday."
 Mrs. Rogers rose to go. She told the doctor she would "think things over" and see what she could do. The physician nodded.
 "Then I'll see you next week," he said. "Good afternoon."
 Going down the hall and out into the bright street, Margaret's slight, black-clad figure seemed to have shrunk. She had outstayed her lunch time but the thought did not cross her mind. She walked through traffic without seeing pedestrians or vehicles. Automatically she entered Margo's dress shop and climbed the stairs to the fitting room.
 Two women were sewing at a large table and a third was stitching on a machine. Margaret took the dress she was working on from a cupboard, laid it on another table and took up needle and thread. The steady hum of the sewing machine was the only sound in the room.
 It was a beautiful coral lace gown that Mrs. Rogers had before her. The silken mesh was fragile and must be touched with expert care. It was a formal gown with full, graceful skirt and a bodice that was scarcely more than wisps of gossamer. The frock was youthful in line and glowing color. Mrs. Rogers was adjusting a rippling flare of lace on the skirt.

 LENOIRE, who made more sales than anyone else except Margo herself, entered the room.
 "Who's working on that evening dress for Miss Spencer?" she asked. "The coral lace?"
 "Here it is. I haven't got to the hem yet," Margaret answered.
 "Well, you'd better baste it. Miss Spencer just telephoned. She wants to change her fitting from four o'clock to 2:45. Can you have it ready then? She's a good customer."
 There was a consultation. Mrs. Rogers was a swift worker and she did most of the evening dresses because she had a knack with such fabrics. There was much to be done to the coral lace. The entire skirt had to be re-fitted. Margaret promised to work swiftly to get the garment to a stage where careful finishing could be done later. She said she would do her best to have the dress ready.
 The price tag, clipped to the lining, caught her eye. The mark was $136.
 Margaret put the tag down. How many $135 dresses, she thought bitterly, would it take to pay for a year's rest in the country, doctor bills—
 Her efforts that afternoon seemed clumsily ineffective. When at nearly three o'clock she was told Miss Spencer was waiting to try the dress, Margaret brought it, carrying a big cushion of pins in the other hand.
 "I'm sorry—I didn't quite finish," she said apologetically as she came into the daintily appointed

Wants Divorce From Cudahy

Muriel Cudahy, 20, has announced at Los Angeles that she will sue for divorce from Michael Cudahy, 33, grandson of the founder of the Cudahy Packing Co., on grounds of cruelty and incompatibility. Mrs. Cudahy was formerly known on the screen as Muriel Evans.

not reeling crazily but was steady. Margaret went to the cooler and drew herself a glass of ice water. She drank it and returned to her place at the table.
 A woman across the room watched her uncertainly.
 "You don't look like you felt well, Margaret. Is there anything I can get for you? Maybe you'd better go in and lie down."
 "Yes," Mrs. Rogers nodded. "I'm all right," she insisted. "Nothing's the matter."
 "When is it Celia starts to work?" Her neighbor at the next table asked.
 "Not until a week from Monday."
 "Well, she's a fine girl," the other said. "I hope she's got a nice job."
 "Yes—I hope so," Mrs. Rogers agreed.
 Tillie Renshaw had worked in the fitting room longer than either of the other four. She was unmarried, outspoken, generally referred to as "an old maid." Tillie cared nothing for tact. Now she spoke up.
 "Well, I've been meaning to say it for a long time and now I'm going to, Margaret," she said. "I think it's a pity. If there's anything I hate to see it's a sweet young girl getting into the rut of working downtown day after day. Wearing out their prettiness and their nerves when they ought to be getting married and raising families."

 "Tillie, don't talk like that!" It was the woman beside Miss Denison who had interrupted her.
 "I don't care. I mean it! Why, Margaret, suppose anything would happen to you? Who'd look after Celia?"
 Margaret Rogers eyed the wall before her blankly.
 "I don't know," she answered. "I don't know." Then she bent her head to hide the fright that was in her eyes.
 The others turned on Tillie Denison indignantly. They said she had no right to say such things, that girls who worked in offices met lots of nice young men and plenty of them married. They defended Margaret, privately worrying at the same time.
 There was still much to be done on the coral dress when it was hung away for the night. Mrs. Rogers was the last to leave the work room.
 Celia had the evening meal ready when her mother arrived at the apartment. She thought that her mother looked tired. Margaret Rogers insisted she was not.
 "It's just the heat," she explained. Later Barney came to take Celia for a drive.
 "Yes," Mrs. Rogers nodded. "You young folks go alone. I'm going to read the newspaper."

But after they had gone she did not read. She got out paper and pen and ink. For a long time she stared at the blank sheet. Tillie Denison's words rang in her ears: "Suppose something would happen to you?"
 Margaret Rogers began to write rapidly.

RUPTURE EXPERT HERE

C. F. Redlich, Minneapolis, Minn., nationally famous Rupture Application Expert, will demonstrate with out charge his unequalled method at Cisco, Friday, Sept. 26, at the Laguna hotel from 11 a. m. to 5 p. m.
 Mr. C. F. Redlich says: "The 'Perfect Retention Shields' hold the rupture perfectly, no matter what position the body assumes or how heavy a weight you lift. They give instant relief and contract the opening in a remarkable short time.
 The secret of their success is in their simplicity. An expertly adjusted device seals the opening without discomfort or detention from work. It is practically everlasting, sanitary, comfortable and actually holds ruptures which heretofore were considered uncontrollable."
 "IF YOU WANT TO HAVE IT DONE RIGHT—SEE REDLICH."
 Doctor J. W. Seaver, for many years in charge of the Physical Education of the students of Yale College, has recorded 75 per cent cures with this system.

dressing room with its huge mirrors.
 A tall girl in green silk sat waiting. She smiled good naturedly, arose and began to slip off her costume. This was Helen Spencer, as Mrs. Rogers knew her. She had fitted many dresses for her before.
 "They promised me the dress would be delivered Friday morning," said Helen Spencer.
 "Oh, it will be ready on time! I'm going to pin the part I didn't get basted so you can see exactly how it will look. We'll have it out for you Friday all right."
 She slipped the bright lace over the girl's shoulders and carefully eased the folds into place. Helen Spencer considered her reflection in the mirror with satisfaction.
 "I'm crazy about this color," she said musingly.
 "Beautiful!" Margaret Rogers agreed. Then, with the instinct of her trade, she added, "And so becoming!"
 "Do you really think so?"
 "Indeed I do. You've got the complexion for it."
 To hundreds and hundreds of customers Margaret Rogers had said that. "You've got the complexion for it." The thought seemed to flatter womanhood from 17 to 70. A customer who had just received a compliment stood more patiently and was less inclined to be querulous. Margaret Rogers had learned that trick long ago.
 "Now if you'll just turn to the left, please—"
 Down on her knees Margaret worked swiftly, placing pins in the shilken folds. She smoothed, patted, readjusted and then stood back admiringly.
 "It's perfect, Miss Spencer," she said. "Just perfect!"
 The girl in the fitting sheath of lace studied the mirror.
 "Yes," she said finally, "I think it is. I like the way that frill goes and it does make me look divinely slim. I believe I like this better than the blue or white one."
 The blue and white were two other evening gowns which Helen Spencer had bought the week before. They had been altered slightly and delivered without the need of the fitting.
 "I can finish it up now the way I've pinned it," Mrs. Rogers said. "You won't need to come in again."
 "I know what I'm going to do!" Helen Spencer decided. "I'm going to wear this the first night on ship board."
 "Oh, you're making an ocean trip?"
 "Next week. Didn't you know? They had my picture in the paper yesterday. Mother and I are to be gone for three months and I'm so excited. You see, I finished high school last month and it's a graduation present. I'm so thrilled! Just think of all the grand looking men I'm going to meet. I'm sure European men must be thrilling. Maybe I'll come back engaged—or married!"
 Mrs. Rogers smiled.
 "What school did you go to?"
 "Western. Father thinks I ought to be home to start college this fall but I'm not very much interested in school. I think it would be lots more fun to get married."
 The girl talked on but Margaret Rogers was now working mechanically. She did not mention the fact that her own daughter was just graduated from Western.
 "That's all, Miss Spencer, thank you. I'll see that the dress reaches you on time. And I hope you have a lovely trip."
 "Oh, thank you!"
 Margaret picked up the coral frock and went back to the sewing room. She had to go slowly, holding to the wall. She was horribly afraid another attack of weakness was coming on.
 She put the dress down, went to the open window and leaned against it. Her fingers gripped the sill.
 "You must not! You must not!" Margaret told herself determinedly. She closed her eyes and the cool breeze touched her forehead. It was refreshing. She tried to breathe deeply and when she opened her eyes again the room was "Perhaps the most vital influence in the American business world in recent years has been the tendency of industrial leaders to join hands with science. No more significant example of this trend exists than your modern use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos. Seven and a half games out in front and with but eight more games to play, the Philadelphia Athletics today had all but clinched their second successive American league championship. The second place Washington Senators shaved half a game off the A's lead Wednesday by dividing a doubleheader with the Indians while the White Sox were defeating the Athletics.

The Senators, however, have only a slim mathematical chance of winning the flag.

Red Faber was the cause of the A's 4 to 2 defeat. He allowed the champions but six scattered hits.

Earl Averill's three home runs played a large part in Cleveland's 13 to 7 defeat of the Senators in the first game. The Indian center-fielder got his clutch home runs in the day in the second affray which the Senators won 6 to 4.

Earl Whitehill scored his 16th victory of the season as the Detroit Tigers whipped the Boston Red Sox 9 to 7.

The St. Louis Browns piled up an early lead to nose out the New York Yankees 9 to 7. The Yanks did most of their damage in the eighth inning when they pounded Rin Collins for six hits and 7 runs.

In the National League the St. Louis Cardinals made it two in a row over the Brooklyn Robins to increase their lead to one full game. The score was 5 to 3.

Hack Wilson hit his 51st and 52nd home runs of the season as the Cubs defeated the New York Giants 5 to 2.

The Cincinnati Reds split a double header with the Boston Braves, winning the second 6 to 4 after dropping the opener 6 to 3.

Pittsburgh hit hard to defeat the Phillies 12 to 5.

W. K. Henderson Has Fight To Keep Station

By LYLE C. WILSON
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—W. K. Henderson of Shreveport, La., is coming to Washington again to battle for the broadcasting rights of his "helo world" station, and this time he will find the radio commission's guard up against pranks such as he played when last here.

Henderson's vigorous, unorthodox manner of expressing his likes and dislikes has gained him prominence. He has been dubbed "the doggone man of radio." On his last appearance before the commission, Henderson produced 167,000 affidavits in which his listeners attested their lives would not be complete without his programs.

It is against such another avalanche of evidence that the commission is protested now, prior to Henderson's scheduled appearance Monday. The commission has ruled that Henderson or any other broadcaster may make affidavit that he has received any number of applauding affidavits from listeners, but neither Henderson or any other may dump the originals on the commission steps.

"Those 167,000 affidavits swamped us in the interior department building," a commission spokesman said in explaining the ruling today. "We had to rent a room for them in the old St. James hotel on Pennsylvania avenue and when the matter went before a District of Columbia court we found the law required that all pertinent papers must be available for the court's inspection. That swamped the court."

Station WDSU, New Orleans, has applied for Henderson's wave length, 850 kilocycles, and will endeavor to prove WDSU performs a more satisfactory service than Henderson's, which is known as "helo world" which is known as "helo world" which is known as "helo world". Henderson's counter to his action was to apply for unlimited use of "helo world" and its band were notable among the adherents of Governor Alfred E. Smith during the 1928 presidential campaign. Henderson urged Smith upon all voters within reach of his 10,000-watt station. When he was not promoting the governor's candidacy, he was belaboring chain stores.

The commission Monday also will begin hearings on application for 50,000 watts of power from stations in the second radio zone.

Message Received From Missing Man Thought Spurious

AMARILLO, Tex., Sept. 17.—Search for Frank Mitchell, colorful cattle-tender of the Matador Ranch, led northwestward today following the receipt of a telegram signed by Mitchell which read "I'm all right. Don't worry about me." It was sent from Durango, Colo.

Officers, believing the message spurious, were today attempting to check the telegram and procure a description of the sender.

Mitchell disappeared Sunday. He was last seen with two hitch-hikers to whom he had offered a "lift" about 20 miles from here.

Cattle roamed the ranges at will yesterday as cowpunchers left their herds to join in the search for the missing man. He was well known throughout West Texas.

KOOLMOTOR GASOLENE

ANOTHER RESULT OF EXCESSIVE GUM IN GASOLENE

IS FREE FROM HARMFUL GUM

EXCESSIVE gum in gasolene causes delayed seating and, in some cases, complete sticking of the valves in your engine. Faulty valve action allows unburned gasolene to blow out through the exhaust. Recent tests have shown as much as 20% to 30% gasolene wasted because of improper valve operation.

Koolmotor—the original high test, anti-knock green gas—is free from harmful gum. It keeps your valves clean and free-moving—ready to do their best at all times.

A special process—the Cities Service mini-gum process—has reduced the gum content in Koolmotor Gasolene to a harmless minimum.

Keep your tank full of Koolmotor and protect yourself against this loss of mileage and the expense caused by sticky valves. Fill your tank with this powerful, clean burning motor fuel today!

"I was always taking some medicine, but it never relieved me. I was losing weight and strength. I read in the papers that I decided to try a change in my constipation at once. Gas pains were relieved and my food was easily digested. Constipation was much less troublesome. In fact, my entire health improved. I shall continue to use Konjola and I heartily recommend it to everyone."
