Police Battle At New Orleans Political Rally

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 5.—A battle between highway policemen and New Orleans police broke out at a political rally held by Governor Huey P. Long in the heart of the business district last night.

Who state policemen were arrested. Sergeant Lionel Escude was fined $25 or 30 days in jail. He appealed. The others were freed.

The riot started when state police took charge of directing traffic at the meeting place.

An argument followed, and Sergeant grappled with Cripps. A fight-for-all fight ensued, with light-sticks and blackjacks used by both sides. Reserves finally broke up the fight after it had begun to assume major proportions, with citizens taking sides.

Most Criminal Man In World Is Executed

FEDERAL PENITENTIARY, Leavenworth, Kan., Sept. 5.—Showing contempt for life until the end, Panzran, who proudly referred to himself as "the most criminal man in the world," died on the gallows here today.

The trap was sprung at 6:01 a. m. He was declared dead at 6:29 a. m.

A scaffold was constructed in the secluded corner of the prison, out of sight of other prisoners. Hidden machine guns were aimed on the surrounding cell-blocks from turrets around the scaffold.

A grey mist floated over the scene, obscuring the sunrise which was the signal for Panzran's death. Panzran, prison murderer and the first man to be condemned by Kansas in 1890, spent his last hours in a march to the gallows wearing magazine stories which he held never finish.

Panzran, given the death penalty for the murder of a prison foreman, faced his last moments as the tragic paradox which characterizes the life of crime. He remained calm as when, in boastful phrases, he styled himself "the most criminal man in the world."

Dallas Cops Not Hospitable To Photographers

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 5.—Fifty million Frenchmen might not be wrong, but 10,000 Dallas cops certainly can be. Fort Worth newspapermen and photographers opined here today, back from their covering of the Coste landing in Dallas.

All bore signs of the brunt of policemen's hostility. Showers of epithets and snarling pictures of the famous fliers.

At the same time they recalled that when Col. Charles Lindbergh landed in Fort Worth, policemen here made it possible for Dallas newspaper photographers to get all the pictures they needed. The same was true when Robbins and Kelly completed their record-breaking endurance flight.

After One Stop Flight From Paris Fliers Land in Dallas

Another Handy Ad Calendar To Start Sunday

Again the Eastland merchants are giving you, the readers of the Telegram, another of those interesting and instructive Handy-Ad Calendar contests and the Eastland Telegram will give away in four prizes for the adults and three for the children fifteen dollars in cash.

If you do not have time to work out the answer to the contest when you get your paper—save it until you do, it may mean money to you. Many people save the calendar throughout the month and use it just as any other calendar. There are thirty advertisements on the page, an ad for every day in the month and something worth while in every one.

To work the puzzle you must read every advertisement to find missing letters which when properly assembled spell the name of one of the firms on the page then with the letters that are left spell a product that is offered for sale by one of the merchants. After all that is done add a last line to the Limerick you find on the page and prepare your answer in some unique manner and mail it to the Handy-Ad contest editor. It's more fun than working a cross-word puzzle. Try it!

Fliers Leave Dallas Today For Louisville

By I. I. FEMRITE, United Press Staff Correspondent
DALLAS, Tex., Sept. 5.—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte will extend their friendship flight from France to the major airports of America in the role of modern Lafayette.

The two Frenchmen who ended a 5,500 mile flight from Paris here last evening, thereby being the first to link continental Europe with this America, in an air dash, looked forward today to a cross country tour to pay their respects for a nation's home.

CLOTHES AGAIN.

With all that has been written on clothing, the subject is far from being exhausted. It appears that not only beauty and health, but sex dominance, is involved.

The average woman of today is much taller, much stronger, much more vigorous and more mentally alert than was the woman of a quarter of a century ago.

There ought to be a better understanding of the situation in China. Too much is made of "Communism" in recent news and comment.

MILLIONS OF ANARCHISTS.

More than government has broken down," says Peffer. "The whole traditional social system has dissolved.

The enlightened and powerful western nations look on and do nothing, or even add to the confusion by making impossible demands of a helpless government and neglecting to give moral support to movements offering a little hope.

"If 400,000,000 Chinese drift into anarchy, what happens? Eventually come some new Ghenghis Khan, a world-conqueror, whose aims no man can foresee.

London advices from Easterwood said he desired to present personally the fliers' reward either in Paris or New York.

Coste said he and his companion were enthusiastically in accord with the planned tour.

After missing an air entourage dispatched to state borders to welcome them, Coste wiggled the "Question Mark" in over Love field almost unnoticed.

Although terribly fatigued from this trip and the flight from Paris, both Bellonte and I are overwhelmed with the enthusiastic reception," said Coste.

The landing here marked the end of the first flight in two spans from the Old World to mid-America.

France Wins War Against Her Foes

PARIS, Sept. 5.—France waged "war" against Germany and Italy today on two battle fronts, repulsing the invaders in both sectors.

Against a theoretical invasion of Germany into the territory of Alsace and Lorraine, the French war office yesterday threw 50,000 trained soldiers in a counter-offensive in the region of Nancy.

On the southern border 50,000 Alpine troops successfully fought off an invasion from Italy.

On Saturday, the final day of the maneuvers, minister of war Andre Maginot will review the victorious fighters and receive the complete reports from officers.

Things to Be Worked Out

ONE of the interesting subjects coming up for discussion when the winter stove league gets under way is the monetary arrangement to be made for next year between Cleveland Indians and a young man named Wesley Ferrell.

Ferrell is hot on the trail of 25 victories this year, his second year in the majors. He is the answer to the question of what's holding Cleveland up there in the first division with only one winning pitcher on the club.

He has beaten every team in the league and dotes on punishing the Athletics.

"If I can win 20 games, I ought to be worth five times that much money," he told himself and Billy Evans, business manager of the Cleveland club. Evans, however, balked at the youth's ambitious demands, countering with the time-honored argument that one year in fast company proves no man's worth.

"I will win 25 games this year," young Mr. Ferrell told Kingfish Evans. It begins to appear that Ferrell will make good his forecast. Which puts Mr. Evans in line for some serious thinking.

Mr. Ferrell no doubt will be poisoned with the idea that he ought to collect somewhere in the region of 25 grand for the season of 1931. He struck out Babe Ruth three times in a recent game in New York, and Mr. Ruth, you know, gets $80,000 a year for that kind of effort.

Whitehill's String

AFTER winning 11 straight games beating every team in the American League except the St. Louis Browns, Earl Whitehill finally was stopped by the lowly St. Louisans. The catch in this

Did You Know That—

Most of the people who razed Bill Tilden at Rye were girls . . . the Davis Cup tennis says French officials are just a lot of bologna . . . they ignored the law that protects players not ready for service, when the players were Americans foot-fault judges refused to penalize a French player who repeatedly violated the law . . . even when ordered by the official referee, the foot-fault judge wouldn't penalize the offender . . . the gallery at Stada Roland Garros was said to be violently partisan . . . but that's not strange, in the light of the American gallery's antics at German-town in 1927 when the French won the cup . . . next year neutral officials will be imported.

one is that Bucky Harris gave his star sophtop an extra day of rest to let him face the Browns at home. Instead of pitching to the Athletics in Philadelphia, Bucky thought Whitehill would have a better chance to prolong his winning streak by working on the Browns than if he started against the Mackens. But the Browns suddenly became most savage and snapped Earl's streak by a 5 to 4 score.

Before Whitehill started on his amazing string, he had come to be regarded as something of an eye-sore on the mound in Detroit, losing nine out of his first 12 efforts. Uncle Frank Navin had offered him to this one and that one around the league in exchange for a good five-cent cigar.

Whitehill didn't know when to quit pitching. Until the Browns came to town and spoiled every thing.

Five Suspects Are Held In Robbery Of Five Merchants

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 5.—Police intensified their search today for a clubber who has felled and robbed four merchants and a 16 year old girl in three days. Five suspects, all negroes, were being held.

German Fliers Visit Capital

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—Captain Wolfgang Von Gronau and Edward Zimmer, German trans-Atlantic pilots, made a quiet and informal visit to the nation's capital today which contrasted with the exciting demonstrations given to other flight heroes.

The modesty of arrangements here was in accordance with the wishes of the fliers, whose purpose in coming was to pay their respects to President Hoover. A visit at the White House was scheduled for 12:30 today.

Fate Of Court Room Slayer Is With Jury

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 5.—A jury of six men and six women deliberated today on the sanity of Frank B. Keaton, Ingelwood real estate salesman who shot and killed Motley H. Flint, wealthy retired financier, in a superior courtroom here July 14.

The case was given to the jury last night.

Keaton's plea of not guilty by reason of insanity was ruled by Judge B. Rey Schauer as a plea of guilty to the actual slaying, and if the jury finds him sane he faces a possible sentence of death.

Blodhounds Used To Track Down Escaped Prisoner

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 5.—Bloodhounds and deputy sheriffs were stalked today in their quest for Robert Elliott Burns, modern "Jeau Val Jean," who for the second time in his life escaped yesterday from a Georgia chain gang.

Successfully a World War veteran, a Georgia convict, a chain gang escapee, a successful Chicago magazine editor, and pivot in a triangular affair of the heart which brought him exposure to authorities, Burns "walked out" Thursday from a "group county prison camp where he was a trusty."

His case had attracted national attention, partly because he was sentenced originally for a $4 grocery store robbery here for which he served a "cut" of 1333, but largely because of his subsequent success in Chicago, which he fled away before the revenge of a woman scorned. His wife exposed him when, she said, he turned his attentions to another woman.

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930

by NEA SERVICE Inc.

by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dan Rorimer, former New York newspaper man and now a scenarist in Hollywood, is in love with Anna Winter, who, beginning an exile, has progressed rapidly and is now under contract to United, one of the largest of the motion picture studios.

Dan formerly was under contract at Continental Pictures, but was unable to get along with studio executive there and he now free lancing.

Paul Collier, who writes a daily column of movie comment for a number of newspapers, shares Dan's admiration with him. He has great faith in Dan's ability, despite the latter's lack of success as a free lance. Dan has become discouraged over this, and over his apparent hopeless regard for Anna Winter, whose every step upward he tries to remove her all the farther from him.

Anna lives with two other girls, Mona Morrison and Eva Harley. Mona and Eva are extras, but Mona works only occasionally and Eva but rarely. She is her chief over and over a tragic love experience. Finally she leaves Hollywood, leaving behind a heart-broken note for Mona and Anna.

While in New York Dan had written a play for the legitimate stage. His agent, unable to place it, finally sends it back to him. Anna Winter and Paul Collier, as they read it, are enthusiastic about it. They think it would make a great picture and urge Dan to write it for the movies. Anna desires that she would like nothing better than to play the chief girl in the picture. Dan follows their advice and submits it to Grand United.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIII

Another week slipped by. Paul had gone to Seattle to his vacation.

"Think of me, my boy, on Mount Rainier, when the thermometer begins to sizzle."

He had asked Dan to wire him and Grand United took his play, so would have an opportunity to dramatize. Only, Paul had not said he had said "when."

Grand United was unreasonable, and once again he had half angrily been asked to call, believing that Grand United should be told there were other studios in Hollywood whom he might submit his play.

Then one day Phillips' secretary called him and asked him to come over to the office. She said, "It's news, Mr. Rorimer, and I'm glad."

"That's mighty nice of you," he heard, feeling that the world suddenly had become a much

Old Pictures Recall Start of Arctic Balloon Flight

brighter place. "I'll be right over."

Phillips welcomed him with a broad smile and a hearty hand-clasp. "Think we were never going to decide, Rorimer? Well, it wasn't my fault—nobody's fault in particular; we've been sort of up in the air and things have to take their turn, you know."

At any rate, he said, Grand United wanted to buy his play. "I think it's pretty swell, and what's more important, so does Mr. Johnson. How much do you want for it?"

Dan gazed at him rather blankly, and Phillips laughed and told him not to look so flabbergasted. "Sit down. I just asked you how much you wanted for it, that's all. I haven't thought about that at all," Dan replied uncertainly. "All I could think about was whether it would suit you. How much is it worth to you?"

Phillips named a figure. "Is that satisfactory? I think it's very fair—more than you'd get anywhere else, probably. It's pretty high considering what we pay for most original stories, but I like your play and I think it's worth it."

"That's perfectly satisfactory," Dan said.

"Good. I've been wanting to talk to you about it ever since I read it, but I've been so busy these last two weeks that I've been dizzy. Your play's got a wallop, all right. You know, the night I took it home to read it we had company. Unexpected. They didn't leave until midnight, and after they'd gone I picked it up and sort of glanced at it, expecting to finish it the next day. Know what happened? I read it right through. It's got a great kick! I guess my secretary told you I was enthusiastic about it. Where'd you get the idea?"

Dan told him. Phillips smiled. "Well, now that we've agreed on price, I think we ought to have a little libation," he said, and he opened a little cabinet beside his desk and brought out a bottle and two glasses.

He poured one glass full, handed it to Rorimer, filled his own, lifted it to his lips, and there he paused.

ONCE UPON A TIME

When a boy, Joe Cook, stage and screen comedian, organized a circus parade of his playmates and, wearing blue tights and playing a mandolin, led it down an Evansville, Ind., street riding a horse.

"Happy days," he said. And when he had set his glass down he spoke through the inter-office phone to his secretary and asked her to find out if Mr. Johnson was busy.

"The boss wants to see you," he told Rorimer. "Now that he's sold, he's sold hard. He's been asking a lot of questions about you and some of them I couldn't answer. You'll have to talk to him. Just between the two of us, he's pretty much interested in you. If he makes you any kind of proposition I hope you'll think it over, Rorimer."

More accurate and comprehensive data on the physical makeup of the 3,600,000 square miles of continental United States is considered essential and the survey now has money from Congress to begin its 18-year job. Some basic work already has been done.

Absolute accuracy in land measurement and location of given points with relation to the rest of the earth's surface will be achieved, for the government geodesists can measure long distances, even over the most rugged mountains, with a possible error of no more than one foot in 40 miles. From the control surveys which they will make will be established thousands of selected points for use as starting and checking points for local surveys. The Geological Survey will use the control surveys for its detailed topographic maps showing roads, houses, mountains, rivers, valleys, swamps and so on. The elevations of the bench marks and the latitudes and longitudes of the triangulation markers will be adjusted into a rigid continental system in such a way as to compare with rivets in the framework of a great steel structure.

Search Continues For Judge Carter, Missing Justice

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Search for Joseph F. Carter, missing supreme court justice, assumed wider significance today when it was revealed he might be a potential witness in the Ewald Case, involving alleged sale of a magistrate's seat.

Carter, missing since August 6, when he withdrew $5,000 from the bank, was a political associate of former magistrate George F. Ewald and Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader to whom it is alleged $10,000 was paid at the time of Ewald's appointment.

When Carter's absence from home and from the bench was made public yesterday it was learned that police had not been notified nor asked to search for him up to that time, and there were evidences that attempts had been made to keep it a secret.

Text: 2 Kings 22:1, 2, 8; 23: 1-3.

In those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And the prophet Isaiah the son of Amoz came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, Set thine house in order; for thou shalt die and not live.

Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord, saying—

And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, What shall be the sign that the Lord will heal me, and that I shall go up into the house of the Lord the third day?

And the king sent, and they gathered unto him all of the elders of Judah and Jerusalem.

And the king went up into the house of the Lord, and all the men of Judah and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem with him, and the priests and the prophets, and all the people, both small and great, and he read in their ears all the words of the book of the covenant which was found in the house of the Lord.

And the king stood by a pillar, and made a covenant before the Lord, to walk after the Lord, and to keep his commandments and his testimonies and his statutes with all their heart and all their soul, to perform the words of this covenant that were written in this book. And all the people stood to the covenant.

And the king commanded all the people, saying, Keep the passover unto the Lord your God, as it is written in the book of this covenant.

Surely there was not held such a passover from the days of the judges that judged Israel, nor in all the days of the kings of Israel, nor of the kings of Judah.

But in the fifteenth year of king Josiah, wherein this passover was held in the Lord in Jerusalem.

Moreover the workers with familiar spirits, and the wizards, and the images, and the idols, and all the abominations that were spied in the land of Judah and in Jerusalem, did Josiah put away, that he might perform the words of the law, which were written in the book that Hilkiah the priest found in the house of the Lord.

And like unto him was there no king before him, that turned to the Lord with all his heart, and with all his soul, and with all his might, according to all the law of Moses; neither after him arose there any like him.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for September 7, The World's Debt to Reformers. 2 Kings 22:1, 2, 8; 23: 1-3, 21-25. By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.

The reforms needed for reform and reform has never come about without reformers. Things do not just merely happen in the world of progress, but they are brought about by vision and courage and devotion.

Hereditarily reveals some surprises. It may be that sometimes it endows an individual with a preponderance of the evil qualities of those who have gone before him, whereas at other times it saves almost all the good that was in an evil ancestry and showers these good qualities upon the individual.

A Sinister Background

Here we have a young lad coming to the throne of Judah who was the son of Amon and the grandson of Manasseh, both of whom had been evil kings. They had been careless regarding religion, and the idolatry that was always threatening the life of Israel had encroached upon the community. Apparently there were still faithful souls in Israel, but they had not been able to stem the tide of evil influences.

Then came a remarkable event. Apparently in cleaning the temple, itself an evidence of its neglect, a book was found which was to be the inspiring document of a religious revolution in Israel. This book of the law would be a parchment containing portions of the law of Israel, and the parchment probably contained what we now know as the Book of Deuteronomy. The young king was deeply impressed when he was told about this book, and he arranged to have it read so that the people might hear it.

It is a dramatic and striking picture that we have of the king standing by a pillar in the temple, making a public covenant with the Lord to walk after his ways and keep his commandments and testimonies while from the newly-discovered book is read the covenant which the king seeks to place upon all the people. It was, of course, not an age when even parchments could be passed around from hand to hand. The method of imparting religious truth was largely by this method of the spoken word.

The discovery of the law, and the coming to the throne of a righteous king immediately brought about transforming zeal. No truly religious experience can come into the life of a man, be he king or commoner, without creating in him the impulse toward better living and the impulse to make the world around him a better place in which to live. The more pronounced is his leadership and the larger and more definite is his responsibility, the more vitally, if he becomes religious at all, religion affects his daily purposes and acts.

This young king, of course, must have been very largely in the hands of good counselors, but even a young king could have been very willful and could have balked the purposes of his counselors if he had chosen to do so.

The record shows how quickly things can be changed when there is really the purpose to change them and people go about making the change in the right way. The fact of the matter is that great masses of people are easily swayed for good or for evil, and that while we think in a democracy of the future of the nation depending largely on the popular will, the fact is that the people need effective leadership, and if leaders betray their trust one is almost sure to see a people misled in folly and in injustice.

There is much that one could apply along this line to the life of our own nation at the present time.

Oldest Teacher Continues Work

When the schools of Portland, Me., reopen this year, Miss M. F. Adams, above, said to be America's oldest teacher, will be back at her desk as usual. It will be her sixty-eighth year of continuous teaching in the schools of her home city. For 32 years she has been principal of the Emerson Grammar School.

Fortunately we have many in authority and in positions of power whose ideals and whose purposes are right, who have pledged themselves to honesty in action, and who have set before themselves national goals of worthiness and honor. But unfortunately, we have many, also, in high places who are self-seekers, or whose philosophy of life is weak and uncertain, who lack the courage and ability that ought to characterize the places that they fill. If our people are well led, they are in other respects, also misled, and despite the supposed progress of our nation there is still a large work of reform.

Respecting the Law

The reforms executed under Josiah proceeded upon knowledge. The work of reform was not all a matter of emotionalism, though some emotion have their place. The written word of truth was at the heart of the movement. The people had respect for the law, and it was this respect for the law that brought about new conditions of spiritual and social welfare.

We live in an age when the written word is available for everyone who can read. It is not necessary that we should go and stand in the temple while someone reads the book to us, and yet, perhaps, we have lost something in this age of almost limitless opportunity for the individual. It may be that we have lost our touch with the community, that we are individuals who stand alone and feel little sense of responsibility, and that neither in church nor in the sanctity of our private lives do we pay sufficient attention to the reading of the law of God, which for us is the larger law of love—the law revealed not only in the written word but in the actual example of Jesus Christ and those who have lived in his name and in his spirit.

Larger Enrollment Expected From Persons Who Need Re-Training

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Unemployment will give a tremendous impetus to education—especially adult education and re-education—it was forecast today by G. E. Marchland, president of the National University Society.

"Beginning with the very opening of the fall terms in schools of every kind," Marchland says, "we may expect to see greater numbers than ever applying for instruction in technical and commercial subjects. Night, continuation, and commercial schools should lead."

"The reason for this is that the unemployed fall into three great classes: The young high school and college graduates, who find themselves unequipped by an ordinary academic education to find suitable work; those who have been employed but are not now because they lacked modern business and technical education; and that older group who have been employed for years, but whose ideas and methods have become obsolete and who are now seeking re-education in modern business methods and ideas. They realize education must be continuous throughout life."

THE REALM of SPORT

THE TEXAS LEAGUE

Victory in the second half of the season assured Fort Worth Cats won from Wichita Falls today, 10 to 9, in a closely played game. The date for the opening of the play-off had been set for yesterday, the teams apprehensive to demonstrate prowess to their foes and the long end of the season won both ends of a no-doubtful doubleheader with Beauvois scores of 8 to 1 and 5 to 5. Exporters offered little consolation, tail-ender, continuing final spurt of strength. The Cubs in a 4 to 3 victory held the Cubs to five runs in a 3 to 9 game to port.

get an even break in their remaining games, the two 1929 pennant winners should enter their second consecutive world series.

With a 6 1/2 game lead in the American league the Athletics can feel reasonable certain of capturing the flag if they win nine of their remaining eighteen games. If the Athletics win half their games, Washington would have to win 18 out of its remaining 21 to beat out Philadelphia.

In the National League the Cubs, with a 4 1/2 game lead over the New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals, have 21 games left to play. If the Cubs win 11 and lose 10, the Giants or Cardinals would have to capture 17 out of their remaining 22 games to finish in front.

Major League

The Chicago Cubs were a step nearer the National League pennant today after increasing their lead to 4 1/2 games yesterday by winning a 10-inning battle from Pittsburgh while the New York Giants bowed to the Boston Braves.

After the Pirates had tied the score in the ninth, the Cubs won out in the tenth when Gabby Hartnett hit his second home run of the game with two mates on base. The score was 10-7.

Tom Zachary, veteran southpaw, held the Giants at bay while his teammates hung up a 7-1 victory. Hubie Critz, Giants second baseman, made a technical misplay at a critical moment for the second day in succession which hastened the Giants to defeat.

The St. Louis Cardinals pulled up even with the Giants in second place by winning from Cincinnati, 13-2. Jimmy Wilson, Cards' catcher, had a perfect day at bat, and Watkins, Cards' outfielder, stole home.

In the American League Philadelphia struggled from behind to hold the 5 1/2 game lead with an 4-7 victory over the Boston Red Sox in 15 innings.

Al Simmons was the hero of the Athletics' victory, hitting two singles, a double and a home run to drive in six runs. With the Red Sox two runs ahead in the fourth, Simmons hit a homer with one man on to tie the score. In the fifteenth with the bases loaded and two out, he singled to drive in the winning tally.

Washington won from the New York Yankees, 3-2. Bump Hadley shading Henry Johnson in a pitching duel. Hadley allowed six hits and fanned six, while Johnson allowed seven hits and fanned eleven.

Ranger Winner Of Pre-Season Game Thursday Afternoon

BY BOYCE HOUSE
 In the first football game of the fall in Texas, the Ranger Bulldogs met stubborn opposition from the Gorman Panthers and an unusually large opening-day crowd witnessed a hard-fought conflict Thursday on the Ranger gridiron, the Bulldogs winning, 19 to 0.

The visitors twice hammered at the goal line of the Maroon and White.

Ranger's eleven had things well in hand the opening quarter and the game was not many minutes old when Dan McCarty galloped around left end for 30 yards, scoring. The Bulldogs gained on a punt exchange and McLaughlin made the next touchdown on a nine-yard jaunt around left end. He kicked goal.

The second quarter was fought on a little nearer even terms, with Jones, end, and Hudson fullback, stinging on defense for the Panthers.

It was in the third quarter however that Gorman became dangerous.

The Hollywood Story

came in bunches. Not only had Grand United bought his play, but now Phillips talked as if they meant to offer him a job. And he thought of Paul Collier up in Seattle. That would be something to wire Paul, all right, if Johnson was going to make him an offer.

While they waited for his secretary to report, Phillips confided that "Traitor" would make a great story for Lester Moore.

Dan could not repress a smile at this, and at the other's look of inquiry he confessed that he had been waiting to hear that very thing said. "I had Moore in mind when I wrote that treatment. I was hoping you'd see it."

There was a muted sound on Phillips' desk as he picked up the receiver and spoke with his secretary. He rose then. "He's in, Rorimer; let's go."

Mr. Johnson was very agreeable. He said, after shaking hands warmly and offering Rorimer a chair, "I've been inquiring about you. There's some great stuff in that play of yours; I like it very much. I understand you were over at Continental for a while. You were under contract there, weren't you?"

"Yes, I was."

"Why did you leave? Mind my asking: Did they fail to exercise their option?" He asked, smiling. "You see, I want to find out all about you."

Dan hesitated. "It wasn't exactly that," he said. "Since you ask me, I'll have to confess that I didn't get along very well with Adamson over there. I thought he was intolerable. I tore up my contract quite a while ago, and when they reorganized, Adamson fired me."

He grinned then, recalling his last interview with Adamson. "He said I was dead timber," he told Mr. Johnson.

The Grand United executive thought that was very funny. "I see. Well, we might be willing sometime to take a chance on some dead timber. The great dialogue in that play of yours is good, authentic stuff. You were a newspaper man, weren't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"I don't think you'd find us very unreasonable around here," Johnson said. "Do you, Phillips?"

And Phillips smiled. "There aren't any Adamsons over here," he said. "I know him, Rorimer."

"We thought it would be a good idea," Mr. Johnson resumed, "if you did the scenario for us; and help out on it when production starts. There'll be changes, of course, here and there. You know all about that, though."

"I'll be tickled to death," Dan assured him. "And I know you've got to please your director and your actors, so I understand perfectly about the changes. I've made plenty of script changes right on the sets at Continental."

Mr. Johnson looked rather pleased. "Phillips will find an office for you to work in. I'm rather hoping you'll want to stay; I think we can use you. When you've finished the scenario, come in and see me, and we may have a contract to offer you."

He rested a hand on the manuscript that lay before him on the desk. "I think Lester Moore will be tickled with this story," he said to Phillips. "He just got back in town this morning, and I was talking with him a little while ago. He's coming over later on to read it."

Phillips nodded, and he suddenly thought of something. "By the way Rorimer, you told me if we took your play you'd tell me why you were so keen to sell it to Grand United." He laughed. "I told you I had a terrible curiosity. What was the reason?"

Rorimer smiled, and hesitated awkwardly. He said, "That's so! I did say that, didn't I?" and turned red.

Mr. Johnson looked inquiringly from one to the other. "What's all this?" he asked.

Now or never, Dan thought. "I'll tell you," he said. "Remember, Mr. Phillips, that I told you I had Lester Moore in mind for the part of Michael? Well, I had someone in mind for the part of Jenny, too. Maybe if I was right once," he suggested with a weak grin, "I might be right again. You never can tell."

"Stranger things have happened, I guess," Phillips admitted cheerfully. "Who was it? It wasn't hard to spot Moore, because that's the kind of stuff he cuts up; but—" "I doubt if you could guess," Dan looked apologetically at Mr. Johnson. "She's pretty new," he explained, "but she's under contract here. She's Anne Winter."

And Johnson frowned. "Anne Winter? But she's an ingenue type. This is pretty heavy stuff for her, isn't it?" He turned to Phillips for corroboration, and Phillips nodded his head in agreement.

"Her spot is musical comedy or revues. She's got a peach of a voice."

"I think," Dan said, "you'll find that Anne Winter can do just about anything you order her to do."

Johnson's eyes twinkled. "You do? That's a pretty large order, isn't it?"

"I know it, but she played dramatic roles in the stage, you know, and that's her real ambition. But she's never had a chance to show what she could do. She never had any idea of singing or dancing in pictures when she came to Hollywood, but that's what they spotted her for."

"I guess," he continued earnestly, "that's one of the funny things about the motion picture business. Mr. Johnson; little accidental things get people started off on an entirely different track sometimes. Anne Winter never had a vocal lesson in her life, and yet it was her voice, more than anything else, that caused you to give her a contract. She can sing, all right, but she can act, too."

The twinkle had not left Mr. Johnson's eyes. "It's like a friend of yours," he asked. "You seem to be pleading her cause rather well. In fact, I'd say you were pretty enthusiastic."

"She is, yes," Dan smiled. He said boldly, "And I am." He had been prepared to encounter some annoyance on the part of the studio executive; Johnson's pleasant skepticism troubled him not at all.

Woman Ired By Treatment Of Home Of Eugene Field

By JOHN WHITE
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS, Sept. 4.—The ghost of Little Boy Blue is stalking the streets of Denver. And the little boy does is shaking the dust from his back in vehement protestation.

It may even be imagined that the tin soldier, red from suppressed indignation rather than rust, is searching for a new musket. All because of what they are doing with Eugene Field's old home in the Western City.

Mrs. J. J. Brown, Colorado millionaire, who originally owned the house and recently gave it to her home city, revealed some of the "scandalous" projects being considered in connection with the simple little white frame building.

She drew a letter from her desk. "My dear Mrs. Brown," it read, "the little home of Eugene Field which you have given the city is being adapted to a beautiful branch library."

"You see, we are such utilitarians at home," commented the donor, "that in spite of all our space, all our wealth, we must utilize one of our greatest poet's homes as a library. You have seen the house of Victor Hugo, left exactly as it was when he died. You have viewed the homes of Goethe, Schiller—precisely as they quitted them. At home the little house of Edgar Allen Poe, intact. In Italy the birthplace of D'Annunzio, recently purchased by the government to be held in its present natural state.

The bundle is named Joan, and when she posed with her dad for this picture, she was two and a half weeks old. She doesn't understand baseball—yet.

"Yet the home of Eugene Field must be made into a branch library."

"When I kept up the house it was preserved in its original state. I even had the little chair where Eugene Field's own son, the inspiration of 'Little Boy Blue' left his toys the night he died of it."

"It was necessary to make a slight change in the foundation of the house, because that same dampness which gave the little Field boy cough would have continued had I not. But otherwise all was the same."

Mrs. Brown turned to her letter again. Reading: "Set in a grove of maple trees the spot seems to be designed especially for you."

"They have moved the house, you see," she said. "I had left it in its exact location, on the banks of Clear Creek. Now it is in Washington Park, I believe."

Another excerpt from the letter. "As an artist I am writing you to commission me to paint a decoration for the library, illustrating one of Eugene Field's poems—"

The good Mrs. Brown threw up her hands in dismay. "They would paint it up—put frescoes of nursery scenes on the walls, poems on the ceiling. Oh! 'mala ca de passe tout!' (that's too much.)"

"It was not a Lapin Azile I gave to the city of Denver."

Giant Automobile Being Built For Speed Record Run

By UNITED PRESS
HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 4.—The world's largest and most powerful racing automobile, with a potential speed of 300 miles an hour, is under construction here as the first step in an attempt to return the international speed title to America, it was revealed today by Petre De Paolo and Harlan Fengler, noted race drivers.

The giant machine will have two 24 cylinder motors, one carried behind the drive and the other in front, and will be completed next December in time for a record test at Daytona Beach, Fla., in January of 1931, the drivers said.

See Sunspots As Indicator For Weather

By UNITED PRESS
VALLEJO, Calif., Sept. 5.—A visionary photograph of the good year 1940, D. D. D.

A small, bespectacled man peers through a smoked telescope, carefully jotting down his findings. When they are complete, he makes a detailed report.

Acting upon his report, thousands in the Mississippi valley are dispatched along the thousands of miles of the Mississippi valley, to work feverishly at building new levees against the coming of a great flood. Or—

Workers are sent into the mountains in the Rockies to construct new dams and reservoirs to trap the melting snow the following spring, so that the lowlands, which are to suffer a terrible summer drought, may live in comfort on the hoarded water.

Such a picture will become reality if a tentative finding of Captain T. J. See, U. S. Navy mathematician professor (retired) are confirmed. After 10 years of continuous research, Captain See has definitely connected the behavior of sunspots, he has announced, with the Mississippi floods of 1927 and the present drought that is burning up the Mississippi valley and Midwest.

Captain See thus summarized his results.

1. It is proved that when sunspots are most rapidly increasing, the earth is unduly chilled and the upper currents of our atmosphere descends so near the earth's surface that we have floods, storms and hurricanes, as in 1927.

2. The maximum of sunspots in 1928-29 was followed by a dreadfully cold winter of 1928-29, in which all countries suffered and Europe was hardest hit.

3. Now the Balance observatory in France reports that there was a sharp diminution of sunspots in June. The earth was given too much heat early in July and hence all countries are suffering now from drought.

"I am afraid, Captain See said, "that adequate relief from the drought cannot be expected before September, when the rapid motion of the sunspot will finally upset present atmospheric conditions and bring rain."

Captain See's sunspot theories almost coincide with those of Father Jerome Ricard S.J., "padre of the rains" at Santa Clara University, Calif. Crops have been planted for many years on Fr. Ricard's "sunspot" forecasts.

Both scientists are now hard at work in research calculated to establish sunspot ratios which will give ample notice of impending changes than are afforded at present.

"Paradise" Is Dry Island

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 5.—Found: a place where prohibition is 100 per cent effective.

Though natives are only a few generations removed from cannibalism, Wilson said, Rotuma has a prohibition law that absolutely works.

"If there is any place in the world where a sailor can't find a drink," Wilson said, "it's on that island. The best we could rate was

St. Francis Xavier Catholic Church
September 7th, 1930, Mass at 8 a. m. This is the Thirteenth Sunday after Pentecost, and the gospel read in the Mass today is taken from the gospel of St. Luke XVII, 11-19. Christ cures ten lepers and only one gave thanks to God. Christ did not complain that nine did not give him thanks, but that they did not give glory to God. He indicates here a very important lesson. As it is the duty of him who receives a benefit not to be charitable in hope of thanks. "If you do good to them who do good to you what thanks are for you? For sinners also do this. Do good—hoping for nothing thereby; and your reward shall be great." Luke VI, 33-35.

Our charity must have higher motives than worldly esteem. God, who prescribes it and promises to reward it, must urge us on to its performance. If we are afflicted at the ingratitude of men to whom we have shown favors, it must be felt not for our own sake but for God's sake, who is offended by ingratitude; and for the sake of the ungrateful themselves, who by their ingratitude incur the displeasure of God and draw down punishments upon their guilty heads. Let us bear this in mind, and not be deterred cocoanut milk. The tribal chiefs know what liquor is, but they decided it was 'bad medicine.'

Strangely enough, he added, the legislation is masculine in origin. In fact, it is a man's island, with, strangest of all, the notion to pulchritude exemplified in its men instead of its women.

The women, he said, go comparatively unadorned, while the men are embellished with costumes. So vain are the native Brummels, he said, that one would give up his favorite cocoanut grove for a cake of scented soap.

"The island is a veritable Garden of Eden," Wilson said. "Tropical fruits grow in such abundance that the natives actually live without toil, except to pick their food off the trees and catch a few fish. Wild game brightly-colored birds and acres of fragrant flowers complete the picture of Paradise."

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 4.—"Laws of Texas tie the hands of the prosecutor and protect the criminal," Judge Frank C. Dickey, Ballinger, told the Texas Sheriffs' Association in session here today when he appealed for the cooperation of officers in securing a revision of the search and seizure law and other statutes.

Sheriff John Bigham of Belton was slated to succeed Sheriff Earl William of Ballinger as president of the association, and it was expected today that the next convention would go to Houston.

"Texas criminal laws make prosecution of desperate criminals almost an impossibility," Judge Dockey declared. "Peace officers should not be the target of a law which makes it illegal to search a man suspected of carrying concealed weapons. Sheriffs and deputies frequently are killed as a consequence of this."
