Bodies, Lost 33 Years, Are Found

OLSO, Norway, Aug. 23 - With the ship Brattvaag, which will bring back the bodies of the polar explorer August Andree and his two companions not expected in Norway for several weeks, the tale of three men who attempted to reach the north pole in a balloon 33 years had been only partly told today.

A Norwegian fishing vessel the Terminus reached the coast yesterday with the news of the discovery on White Island of the bodies, fully clothed and well preserved in the ice.

It was understood that a warship might be sent to meet the Brattvaag and take aboard the bodies of the explorers and the records of the camp in which they died of cold and starvation.

Some indication of the suffering of the explorers was contained in a report which Dr. Horn sent to the government through officers of the fishing vessel. The men had evidently walked a long distance over the ice for their ice shoes were badly worn.

Hens Produce Tenth Of The Farm Income

By CALIB JOHNSON

As in almost everything else, the United States leads the world in poultry and egg production.

Poultry are raised everywhere in the world. Everybody eats eggs. But one third of all of the world's domestic poultry are in this country. We have five hens to every human being which is a very much larger proportion than is to be found anywhere else.

This is one branch of agriculture that is not confined to farms. As everybody knows, residents of villages and of the suburbs of cities are as frequently as not found keeping "backyard" flocks of poultry. Something more than half a million such backyard flocks are estimated by the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Which has computed the total number of farm flocks at 5 1/2 million, or a total of about 6,000,000 flocks in all. Poultry is raised on more than 86 per cent of the farms of the country. About 85 per cent of the fowls are raised on general farms in flocks of 50 to 400 hens, principally in the grain-producing States.

The number of chickens on farms in 1929 was about 422,000,000, with a value of $403,000,000. The income from chickens and eggs amounted to about 10 per cent of all farm income in 1928, being estimated at $717,000,000 for eggs and $458,000,000 for chickens, or a total of $1,175,000,000, or 11.827 per cent of the total farm production.

AN UNSCHEDULED STOP! Missing on two cylinders but hitting perfectly on a lamp post and a fire hydrant this East Orange, N. J. bus gave its forty-five passengers an exciting down-hill flight until stopped by a tree. Forty persons were injured by shock and severe lacerations from flying glass before a rear emergency door was opened. Newer buses of the Public Service Company, it is said, are equipped with safety glass to avoid such unpleasant results.

WASHINGTON LETTER. BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer. WASHINGTON—The last Congress passed 2991 large pages of laws which required 467 pages of indexing. If you look at the Statutes at Large of the Seventieth Congress you will get the idea that it passed a law about nearly everything.

showed to be the same or made to conform. That proof goes to the printing office, which makes individual copies of each law for general distribution among those who want such copies. More proofs are run off with broad margins and sent to the State Department, whereupon the real work of compiling Statutes at Large begins. On those broad margins each law is classified, summarized, annotated and catalogued. The same is done for treaties and proclamations, which are printed in the same volume with private laws and resolutions.

The signed original comes to the State Department from the White House, printed on parchment paper of 100 per cent rag. Congress passes four kinds of laws: Public laws and public resolutions and private laws and private resolutions. It is sometimes hard to distinguish between laws and resolutions, but the public measures are put into one book and the private measures into another.

terprise supplemental to general farming, and on the other hand a high degree of specialization in commercial plants. In producing sections near the larger cities on the Atlantic seaboard and in the Pacific coast States of California, Oregon and Washington, there are areas in which commercial poultry production predominates. In other localities, the keeping of poultry for breeding stock and for the production of eggs for hatching is important, the baby chicks being sold to those who keep both large and small flocks for commercialized trade.

Throughout the farm-production areas as well as in the commercial poultry districts are many egg packing plants, poultry-feeding and slaughtering plants, poultry-canning plants, and egg-breaking plants, while cold-storage warehouses are devoted to an important extent to the storing of poultry and eggs.

Although the industry is made up primarily of producers and handlers of chickens and chicken's eggs, the turkey, duck and goose production is also important. Few products are as widely distributed and consumed as poultry meat and eggs. The poultry industry has developed from a small beginning when the first settlers brought fowls to North America, and the production of poultry for meat and eggs has been an important source of food supply for the cities for over 10 years. The commercial development of plants devoted to poultry raising alone began about 1870, and thereafter increased attention was given to breeding, feeding and management. In about 1873 standards were developed, and in 1874 the first standard of perfection was printed. Beginning about the year 1890, hatching in incubators on a large scale developed, and in 1916 the International Baby Chick Association was organized.

In the early history of the poultry industry the egg market offered the main stimulus to better methods. In this land of abundant meat supplies, eggs were more to a luxury than poultry. Until the development of cold storage, marketing was limited by the lack of means of preservation. Eggs were often preserved by immersion in lime water and were sometimes preserved in ice houses. As facilities became available, cold storage came into more general use as a means of preserving the surplus production of the Spring months for consumption in Summer and Fall. The introduction of the 30-dozen egg case to displace the barrel as a package for eggs, which occurred about 1880, was a considerable economy. The production of dressed poultry for market was greatly stimulated by the use of refrigeration for transportation and storage.

Poultry production occupies an important place in the organization of North American farms. Not only is poultry raised on about 90 per cent of the farms, but on many farms poultry products are one of the best paying products. The value of eggs represents about 57 per cent and the value of poultry meat about 43 per cent of the total value of all poultry products. Chickens contribute about 95 per cent of the value of all poultry products and are the only class of poultry raised extensively for the production of eggs, all other classes being raised primarily for the production of meat.

Of Tourists Becomes National Business

The number of tourists in the United States, both overland and by sea, has become great to such an extent that many countries are now leading business to try to attract visitors from other countries. It is estimated by the State Department that last year 2,500,000 Americans went abroad, and enough money was spent to pay for the Canadian tourist industry, a leading source of income for that country. Americans are now being attracted to the United States by the same means as in the past. Question bureaus are established which answer any number of queries concerning the country about to be visited.

Attractions are numerous in all countries. Most of them wait until the travelling season has begun before they offer fairs, plays, and other amusements designed to attract a foreign visitor.

Further encouragement of tourist travel has been made in the reduction or elimination of visa fees, and simplification of passport requirements. Americans are now permitted to enter 29 countries without payment of a visa fee, while Americans in transit may cross five additional countries without paying the usual fee. In certain other lands the fee for a transit or other visa is very moderate as is the case in Austria, Czechoslovakia, France and Yugoslavia.

Cooperation among private agencies has accomplished much in furthering tourism. An international code has been established between all hotels for ordering rooms. Here is a specimen: "Calde stop Thursday nocte bon," which means "Reserve three rooms with five beds for several days. Will arrive Thursday between 7 p.m. and midnight. Want good but not the highest priced accommodations."

CASTE IS SERIOUS BARRIER TO UNIFICATION PLAN FOR INDIA

Attempt To Remove Class Lines

Outside the school building. As a class "untouchables" are forced to labor at the most menial tasks and vocations considered degrading, such as scavenging and leather work. They are not permitted to utilize the same wells as other castes, and draw water further down the rivers from other castes to prevent pollution of the river.

In the south of India, where the caste divisions are sharpest, the shadow of an "untouchable" is pollution to a member of an upper caste. They are forced to leave the roads and shout warning of the danger of pollution when a member of a higher caste passes, and are not permitted to approach within a certain distance.

In towns they are usually segregated in separate quarters. In order to purchase food from shops frequented by other castes they are forced to approach and shout their orders, leaving the money on the ground and withdrawing until the food is placed outside.

Gandhi Opposes System

Under the direction of Mahatma Gandhi, the Congress or Swaraj party is conducting a campaign designed to break down rigid barriers of caste and create a sense of Indian nationalism. Gandhi made the abolition of "untouchability" one of the principal points of his program. Congress leaders are instructed regarding the necessity of destroying caste barriers.

In the Gandhi "civil disobedience headquarters" throughout India, where from a few scores to several hundreds of Congress volunteers are lodged during the civil disobedience campaign, caste distinctions are ignored and flouted.

In Calcutta and Delhi the United Press correspondent was shown dozens of volunteers of various castes and Moslems sleeping and eating together in the same room. Normally that would mean pollution and would be avoided with abhorrence.

Change In Viewpoint

While inspecting Delhi headquarters I was shown volunteers of the night picketing shift who were sleeping half-naked on the bare floor after all-night duty picketing cloth shops to prevent sales of foreign cloth or surreptitious shifting of cloth stocks. One of the volunteers conducting me explained that his father was a wealthy merchant.

"Six months ago I would have been horrified at the idea of sleeping with men of other castes and especially eating from the same utensils," he said. "But I have learned that it is necessary for the freedom of our motherland that we erase caste distinctions. I have found that I am not affected by mingling with my brother Indians whatever their caste. I do not feel polluted and I am not polluted. We have learned, we young and educated men, that these ancient barriers are nonsense. We are going to do our best to break them by example and by teaching others."

Find Man Sitting In A Tree, Dead

PLAINVIEW, Tex., Aug. 22.—The body of Clint Alexander, 66; farmer living 16 miles southwest of here, was found today by Sam Moore in a tree near a surface tank on Alexander's farm.

The body apparently had been in the tree for a week.

Justice of the peace Silver, after a cursory examination of the body expressed the belief death was due to a heart attack which came on while Alexander was pruning a tree.

Members of Alexander's family, his wife and six children, resided in town and Alexander had gone alone to the farm to work. He

From Barbed Wire to Copper Wire....

Less than half a century ago, barbed wire marked the change of West Texas from a ranching country into a farming country. Great ranches were cut into farms and communities began to spring up. The development of West Texas had begun.

Less than 15 years ago, another change took place, this time signified by the copper wire of the electric power companies. As towns began to develop, the electric power lines brought a new advantage to this rapidly growing territory. Like the railroads, the electric power lines gave a new impetus to West Texas progress.

These power lines made it possible for industries to be established near the source of raw materials. Large and small towns were supplied with abundant and dependable electricity. Electric power aided West Texans to create what is known as the "New Empire."

The Texas Electric Service Company is a permanent part of this great area. Large generating stations and an extensive electric power system were built with an eye to the future of the territory it serves. The Company is growing with and aiding the growth of West Texas—The New Empire.

Modern Styling and Fast Colors Feature Inexpensive Scatter Rugs

It is now possible to buy inexpensive rugs of interesting design and color that are just as effective in the modern scheme of furnishing as those which cost a young fortune. Those shown here are typical of the new color-fact cotton chenilles which have amazed interior decorators because of their ability to withstand frequent laundering without loss of color or shape.

Rugs tastefully scattered in places where they would serve both utilitarian and artistic purposes. At first it seemed that only Oriental, Navajo and antique weaves could be used by those who dared or decided to discard carpeting.

Cheap Rugs Were Shunned

Many a woman who would have loved to take up her old carpets shrank from doing so because she could not afford expensive rugs and would not have dared to substitute cheap and flimsy scatter rugs. The homemaker with a modest budget but an eye for beauty could find no attractive scatter rugs within her means when carpeting, featuring cabriole noses and striped deer, passed out with marble top dressers and horsehair sofas.

Gradually there came improvement in inexpensive scatter rugs, but it has been only quite recently that we have been made pleasantly aware that some of them now feature design and color that will please the most exacting buyers and home furnishers. As a matter of fact, the improvement in moderate priced scatter rugs has been so marked that many who can afford luxurious Orientals have been attracted by the new designs, particularly those in cotton chenille which are guaranteed to be washable and color fast.

Let no one dissuade you from buying expensive rugs if you can afford them. However, we need no longer feel that Orientals are good and desirable merely because they are costly.

2,000 GUARDSMEN SURB FATAL FIRE

FORT SILL, Okla., Aug. 23.—Having taken one life, a grass fire on the artillery range here had been controlled Saturday by the efforts of 2,000 Oklahoma National Guardsmen.

The fire fighters, in annual encampment at Camp Aultman, came upon the body of Silas Leverett, 45, Friday night while the flames, started by a bursting shell on the east range, were raging over an area three miles square. Everett lived near Elgin.

All guard units, including the One Hundred and Twentieth Medical Regiment, 20 motor ambulances and every available water cart were rushed to the fire. Thousands of gallons of water were transported from considerable distances. The blaze was confined to the range, a guard house and a number of telephone poles. Military police surrounded the area during the fire.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 23.—Miss Billie Doss, 21, of Dallas, has filed suit for $50,000 damages against the Missouri Stables here, alleging she was injured when thrown by a horse rented from the stables. It was her first horseback ride she had ever taken and she was told the horse was gentle. Miss Doss says in her suit. The suit relates she sustained a fractured ankle and other injuries.

NATION'S DROUGHT COSTS FARMERS BILLION

NEA Telegraphic Survey Shows Great Damage in Many Rainless States, But Higher Prices as Result of Shorter Crops Are Expected to Reduce Losses; Wheat Appears to Have Escaped, as Dry Spell Arrived After Crop Matured.

By ISRAEL KLEIN NEA Service Writer Copyright, 1936, NEA Service, Inc. Farmers in the area affected by the nation's record-breaking drought, extending eastward from the Rocky Mountains, will incur a financial loss totaling above the billion dollar mark.

Crops, earlier in the year estimated at above average yield, will be reduced in some areas to as low as 50 per cent of last year's production. Livestock has lost weight and the milk supply has dwindled, due to the drying up of pastures.

Winter silage is being consumed, endangering the feed supply for the coming winter and springs. And each day of dry weather has been piling up losses of additional millions of dollars, according to a survey just made by NEA Service for the Telegram.

The survey covers the mid-western states, the north Atlantic states, below New England, and the southern states bordering the Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Every query wired to the director of agriculture of each of these states brought forth a disheartening reply. Each official reported losses of from one-fourth to one-half in most of the crops that, at the beginning of this year, had been expected to yield an abundant supply.

Price increases as the result of shorter crops, already exhibited on various produce exchanges, are expected to do much to reduce the losses suffered by the farmers, but of course the increases will be insufficient to completely offset them. Another encouraging factor is that wheat appears to have escaped, the drought arriving too late to cause much damage to this major crop.

The most serious losses appear along the Ohio and Mississippi valleys, from western Pennsylvania down to northern Mississippi and Louisiana.

Ohio's Loss $200,000,000 In Ohio, one of the worst hit states, C. J. Williams, director of the state agricultural experiment station, estimates a total loss of about $200,000,000, mostly in the southern part. Corn production, he says, will range from a fourth of normal in this section to half of normal farther north. Hay production will be in the same proportion, oats will average a little higher.

Wheat, as in most of the other states, will be affected only slightly, if at all, because the drought struck as it approached maturity and so rather improved the quality.

C. J. Jordan, secretary of agriculture in Pennsylvania, reports a conservative loss to crops and livestock in that state of at least $50,000,000, with a daily increase of at least a million during the dry weather. West Virginia, Virginia, Kentucky are still trying to collect figures from the various districts on their losses, while Tennessee, through W. J. Fitts, of the agricultural commission, gives a temporary estimated loss of $90,000,000.

Arkansas Hard Hit In Arkansas, the losses due to drought will probably reach $100,000,000, says Earl Page, commissioner of agriculture. Page lists his state's losses as follows:

Corn, 20,000,000 bushels, value $20,000,000; sorghum, 2,000,000 gallons value $2,000,000; rice, 2,000,000 bushels, value $3,000,000; potatoes, 2,000,000 bushels, value $3,000,000; sweet potatoes, 2,000,000 bushels, value $2,000,000; cotton, 300,000 bales, value $20,000,000; cottonseed, value $5,000,000; soy beans, $1,000,000; cow peas, $1,000,000; hay, $8,000,000; fruit and truck crops, $5,000,000.

Livestock losses in Arkansas, Page says, will exceed $20,000,000 due to the lack of feed, shrinkage in values and sacrifice sales. Meat animals, not ready for the market, are being sacrificed for lack of feed at prices less than half of their actual value.

A Million Dollars a Day The situation in Missouri is no better, according to E. A. Logan, of the state's department of agriculture. Logan estimated the total loss to crops and livestock at $125,000,000, with an additional day of drought adding a million dollars more.

"Mississippi is facing the prospect of the shortest feed crop in history," reports J. C. Holton, of the state agricultural commission. "Corn is already reduced by 15,000,000 bushels, valued at $15,000,000; hay, 3,000,000 tons, valued at $4,500,000; sweet potatoes, 2,000,000 bushels, valued at $2,000,000; cow peas soy beans and peanuts, 500,000 bushels, valued at $1,000,000, and all other crops in proportion."

"Cotton has been reduced 500,000 bales, valued at $40,000,000, and the tomato movement was 1000 cars less than last year's, producing a loss of $500,000 more."

Extends to Louisiana North and Central Louisiana has been hard hit by the drought, reports Harry D. Wilson, commissioner of agriculture. In that state the cotton crop has been reduced from 30 to 50 per cent, corn and feed crops from 50 per cent to almost a total failure, and many of the pasture lands have been burned up.

In Alabama, Seth P. Storrs, commissioner of agriculture, reports the cotton crop 141,000 bales below last year's production of 1,335,000 bales. Corn and forage crops also have been greatly reduced, he adds, and much damage has been done to truck and garden crops.

Further north, the losses become less serious, although Iowa reports a corn crop from 20 to 25 per cent of the average yield. In southwestern Iowa, the corn yield is hardly half the average, M. G. Thornburg, secretary of agriculture, reports. In the north and northeastern sections, however, a yield above normal is indicated. In Nebraska, H. J. McLaughlin, secretary of agriculture, reports a wheat and oats crop above the average for the last five years.

her mention it to you." "I wish she wouldn't feel that way," Anne said. "I don't know how I'd get along without Eva and you."

Mona smiled thoughtfully. "You'd get along all right. The trouble is, Eva thinks you might get along better without us. . . . I mean," she hastened to explain to Anne's look of astonishment, "that Eva thinks she's a burden, or something like that. She feels pretty badly because she hasn't been able to pay her share of the rent, for one thing."

"I hope," Anne said, "she doesn't think I mind paying a few extra dollars. Besides, Eva does nearly all the cooking."

"But you can't make her see it that way, Gee, I've been hard up myself," Mona laughed. "I still am, for that matter. I mean, I know what it is to have rent day roll around and not be able to pay."

"I've borrowed money from Eva many a time, and she from me. I don't know why she should feel that way unless . . ."

"Unless what?" Anne urged. "Oh, I don't know. Unless it's because you're doing so well that it makes things seem all the more hopeless for Eva. Know what I mean?"

"I think I do," Anne said. "I'm not that way myself," Mona confessed. "If I see another girl get a break, it sort of encourages me. Oh, I'm not kidding myself about being a star or anything, but there's a lot of people getting by. Maybe I will."

"I'm sure you will," said Anne. Mona laughed. "Life's too short to spend your time worrying. I wish I could make Eva see that."

Mona moved over to the radio and tuned in on another program, and she came back and sat close to Anne on the sofa.

"I want to tell you something else about Eva," she said. "It might help you to understand a few things." She glanced toward Eva's closed door, continued in a lower voice:

"Remember the day after the party that Martin Collins gave?" Anne nodded.

"Well, remember my asking you who was at the party, and when you mentioned Frank Maury I told you not to say anything to Eva about him, because she couldn't stand him?"

Anne remembered, and smiled. "I can understand that. I can't stand him myself."

"Well, believe me, I can't either! The swell-headed chump! But Eva can; Eva's mad about him."

"About Frank Maury?" Anne frowned.

"Yes, He and Eva were extras together, and Eva was crazy about him. I think she still is, although she says she hates him. . . . Anyway, he played her the lowest trick a man can pull on a girl. They were engaged to be married, and then when Maury began to get a few breaks, and commenced to mingle with some of the high-hats, he dropped Eva like that."

Mona snapped her fingers. She said, "Eva's a funny girl, Anne. She doesn't have much to say, but she thinks a good deal."

Her eyes sought Anne's, and Anne silently assented. "And I know she still thinks a lot about Frank Maury," Mona continued. "People say Eva Harley is bitter and disillusioned and all that, but there's a reason for it. There usually is. Maury dropped her without saying a word, and she'll never get over it. . . . Somebody ought to break his no-good neck," she finished savagely.
