WORK IS STARTED ON LOCAL AIRPORT

Will Be Pushed To Completion

Airport Committee of the Local American Legion Post Makes Announcement.

Actual work of clearing the ground and putting it in condition for other improvements that are to be made was begun this morning on the American Legion airport, just north of the city limits. The work will be concluded as rapidly as possible it was stated.

As soon as the work which the local Legion is to do, is completed the federal government will install at least two large powerful beacons and put in other improvements necessary to make the field an emergency landing field for government planes.

The government proposed to operate the field or to allow it to be owned and operated by the city or some other organization. Under government operation no commercial planes would be allowed to use it, but under private operation commercial planes may use it as a regular landing field. The Dull-Daniels Post of the American Legion put on a drive and raised the necessary funds to take over the field.

Notwithstanding the fact that the American Legion is taking over the field the government will spend $12,000 or $15,000 on it and will have the privilege of using it as an emergency landing field for government use.

Lipton Welcomed In New York

Back in this country for his fifth attempt to win the America's Cup, symbolic of international yachting supremacy, Sir Thomas Lipton here is shown, left, with New York's welcomer, Grover Whalen, as he was officially received. The gallant old sportsman, who has spent several millions trying to capture "The Old Man," received an enthusiastic ovation upon his arrival.

State Political Campaigns Grow Hotter Each Day

Sterling at Ennis
ENNIS, Tex., Aug. 20.—With the startling vigor of a veteran campaigner, Ross S. Sterling, candidate for Texas governor, denounced those who regard public office as the means of feathering the family nest rather than a sacred trust with an oratory that stirred his audience to repeated volleys of applause here Tuesday night.

"This is your fight as much as mine, even though I am the target. Some years ago the flower of our youth method went across the Atlantic to make the world safe for democracy. I'm not a coward, so why should I shrink from a little mud when it's thrown?" Sterling declared as he launched his denunciation.

After scoring the alleged pardon "bribe sale" of the Fergusons, Sterling turned to the support of his bond issue plan which his opponent, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, through her husband "Farmer Jim," has criticized.

"I want to unbind you, not burden you," Sterling said. "I want to resign to the counties money they have spent in building state highways, so they can build their lateral roads. Let the man who rides the roads pay for them, that's what I want to do. Take highway 75 for instance. Dallas county pays a property tax of 20 cents and Harris county 22 cents. In Walker county the tax is $1.55, yet the cities of Dallas and Houston derive ten times as much benefit as the smaller places.

"It's this condition which Ross Sterling wants to change, and you will see that I was the only candidate to demand shorter hours and collective bargaining for labor. I believe in fair pay. When I am governor, I will force the titles of Ph. D., J. D., and M. D. on the 'feminine laborers,' Sterling promised.

"Oh the price Texas has paid for two governors instead of one! Jim is noted for drilling dry holes. The one he will drill next Saturday will be the driest one in the state, and it's funny the way he tries to prove it by dead men," the Houston man declared.

Sterling was introduced by L. B. Griffith, Ennis banker, who answered the Ferguson job candidate as a strong man by the title of some ten or fifteen thousand persons awaiting him at Fair Park last night where he spoke in support of the candidacy of Ross Sterling for the democratic gubernatorial nomination.

The crowd, enraptured by a cool breeze which swept the grounds following a light rain, broke the speaker's utterances with frequent outbursts of "pour it on 'em Dan." To the delight of his crowd the governor assailed the record of James E. Ferguson and the latter's wife, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for nearly an hour.

At the outset of his speech Moody defined the issue as being "honesty in office as against corruption and indecency." If Mrs. Ferguson is elected, Moody declared in "Texas will become the prey of criminals."

Reading from notes and records, Moody disclosed that a $150,000 loan had been obtained by Ferguson from the brewery interests of the state. "If there ever was a position in office money to the credit of the Temple State Bank in an Austin bank 'for personal profit,'" he also cited the incident of the Canyon City national school which Jim Ferguson as governor was alleged to have misappropriated this school's money for personal uses.

Weather And Crops

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 20.—Showers of rain, accompanied in some sections by high winds that left trails of wreckage, fell in scattered portions of Texas Tuesday, bringing hopes that the drought in north and northwest Texas was finally broken.

Tearing a roof from the recreation building, wrecking a mess hall and shattering eleven tent frames, a small tornado tore through Camp Wolters Tuesday afternoon causing damage. Trees were uprooted and a veterinary hospital levelled by the force of the twister, which was followed by a heavy downpour.

Light showers in Dallas and vicinity caused the mercury column here to scurry down from the 104 degree mark to around 84 degrees. In Abilene a shower too small to be of benefit to crops followed a temperature of 105 degrees. Crops were freshened by a half-inch rain which fell late Tuesday at Grand Saline, while a similar shower helped withering pasture lands and cotton in Denton county. A light rain was also reported in Van Alstyne.

For the most part the precipitation was insufficient to be a boon to farmers, although thunder clouds were shadowing portions of the state again today, and weather bureau reports said rain was possible.

Governor Dan Moody paused in Dallas Tuesday to telegraph an urgent plea to President Hoover asking that affected parts of Texas be included in drought relief plans. It was the second plea Moody has made to the president. His telegram read as follows:

"Drought conditions in certain sections in West Texas are disastrous. Stock is having to be sold, due to the utter failure of feed crops and the results of continued drought on other crops. Pasturelands are black and afford no feed whatsoever for livestock. It is imperative that this area be included in that now under consideration by the Department of Agriculture for drought relief."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 20.—Sun parched Oklahoma was cooled today by rains which started falling in the state shortly after midnight.

Drought stricken farmers reported the rain will save the cotton crop and pasture, but that the feed and corn crops are ruined in virtually every section. The precipitation was not believed to have been sufficient to fill cattle tanks which have been dry in some sections for many days.

Stops remained overcast today. Temperatures dropped sharply.

LUVERNE, Iowa, Aug. 20.—Two bandits held up the bank of Luverne here about 10 a. m., today and escaped with approximately $5,000 in cash and about $5,000 in bonds and securities.

The bandits, masked and well armed forced three employees of the bank to lie on the floor while they scooped the money into a sack.

The employees were told there were machine guns in the robber's automobile out in front and they would be used on the bank if there was a disturbance.

Prosperity Week

The writer had the pleasure of presenting this subject at the noonday luncheon of the Lions Club yesterday.

Horace Conley discussed the matter at length and brought up the question of re-painting houses in Eastland, stating that his company had a rule that all of their buildings must be painted once a year. He said he believed there were a number of houses in Eastland that had not been painted in five years, and quoted statistics to prove that frame buildings that were kept well protected from the weather by paint last many years longer than those unprotected, and urged all of the property owners to get behind this move for prosperity week and have their houses painted. His remarks were enthusiastically applauded by Frank Crowell.

President Poe gave the matter his hearty support and urged all club members to get behind it and help. Someone suggested that there were no doubt members of the Lions club present who had been planning a visit to a dentist, and inasmuch as a majority of the dentists in the city were present why would it not be a good time to make dates for Prosperity Week at once? This also brought out much applause. Quite a number of other members of the club spoke in favor of this plan to bring about greater prosperity in our city by increasing the speed of circulating money.

The Lions club in thus endorsing this movement emphasized one of the mottoes of their club which is "To be careful with my criticism and liberal with my praise." To help out of our civic organizations will get back of this movement as enthusiastically as the Lions club there is no question but what we can attain our goal of $100,000.00 extra money distributed during the week of September 3rd to 8th inclusive.

The Chamber of Commerce will continue to whistle until everybody is aboard for this trip.

Dr. H. B. Tanner, Secy. Chamber of Commerce.

Dry Agents To Wear New And Larger Badges

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Federal prohibition administrator Amos W. Woodcock today instituted a new reform in prohibition enforcement by ordering that dry agents hereafter must display a large black and white metal shield of identification when they stop automobiles suspected of carrying liquor.

The shield, which Woodcock approved today, will be 17 inches wide and 20 inches long. Across the top the black letters in a white background will be the word "stop." Beneath there will be a large black "U. S."

In smaller letters, the shield will inform the suspected motorist that it identifies an "official of the Bureau of Prohibition." On the top of the shield will appear the seal of the Justice Department, which now is in charge of prohibition enforcement.

Woodcock ordered this precaution as the result of widespread criticism of several incidents where prohibition agents have stopped innocent motorists, and in some cases have fired.

"This means one less cause of friction," the dry director said, in telling of the shields.

TODAY WITH THE FLIERS

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Aug. 20.—The six entrants in the women's air derby left International airport here today for Lordsburg, N. M., first stop en route to Roswell, N. M., where they will spend tonight.

Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, elapsed time leader in the Long Beach to Chicago race, was the first to leave the field. She took off at 8:30 a. m. MST, and was followed by Margery Doig, Danbury, Conn., at 8:31; Ruth Barron, Hollywood, 8:32; Jean LaRene, 8:33; Mildred Morgan, Beverly Hills, 8:34, and Ruth Stewart, St. Louis, at 8:35.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Aug. 20.—Jack Livingston and W. C. Moore, national air derbyists, left Winburn field one minute apart today for Waco, next stop on their cross country race from Brownsville to Chicago.

Livingston lifted his plane off the ground at 10:37 a. m., and Moore followed at 10:38 a. m. They expected to reach Waco by noon. Excellent flying weather was reported along the route.

Trail of Jack Zuta Leads To Big Jewelry Cache

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—Investigators following the trail of Jack Zuta's gangland dollars, ran across evidence today that he had a rich jewel cache that may reveal a fortune in stolen gems.

A fifth safety deposit box of the dead gangster, whose carefully kept records of gangster money deals have involved public officials and politicians was hunted by Pat Roche, chief investigator for the state attorney.

Roche came upon the evidence of the jewels in the fourth box, discovered late yesterday, it was revealed today. In this cache, it was believed, is $150,000 or more in diamonds stolen in eastern robberies and hidden away until they could be turned into cash.

Two new figures appeared on the scene of the gangland revelations today. One of them was a representative of eastern jewelry interests, who refused to reveal his name or affiliations, but who is believed to have traced the gems here. The other was Harry Ash, assistant attorney general, who said he was looking over the evidence to see that Zuta's estate pays the full inheritance tax.

The fourth box contained another batch of checks and notes, revealing Zuta's dealings with "Big Jim" Colosimo, Dion O'Banion and other gang leaders who were assassinated by their rivals in racketeering.

CHICAGO, Aug. 20.—More sensational evidence, disclosing additional names and providing more conclusively that a partnership existed between Chicago's officials and gangsters, was promised today by investigators pondering over the financial records of Jack Zuta.

The investigators were visibly excited over discoveries which they made in another of the safety deposit boxes which Zuta, a gangster leader, maintained under an assumed name before he was murdered.

Pat Roche, chief investigator for state's attorney Swanson, discovered the new hiding place late yesterday and immediately went into conference with other members of the board of strategy investigating the slayings of Zuta and Alfred Lingie, Tribune reporter.

Roche refused to discuss contents of the vault further than to hint the records found would prove even more sensational than those found in two others discovered a few days previously.

While the investigators delved through the new records, additional names found in the previously discovered boxes were released.

"The checks were given to me by Zuta in payment for legal services," declared Harry W. Starr, state senator, former city prosecutor and former election commissioner, whose name appeared on checks found in the Zuta vaults.

Starr declared he had explained the situation to Roche and other members of the board before his name was made public. He defended Zuta, he said, in an auto accident case.

Good Program Is Promised For Friday Night

Friday will bring what is said will be the best Community night program yet put on. It will also be the last to be staged this season, in as much as the business men of Eastland will be very busy getting ready for the coming Fair the last part of September.

More than eight vaudeville numbers will be offered on this program, among the outstanding features will be Ina Morris, the little tap dancer that made such a hit when she played here a few weeks ago. Miss Morris will sing as well as dance. Bobby Dawn Yeager, local artist, is also preparing a new routine of song numbers. The Brown Brothers—yes twin brothers—are expected to take part in the program this week, with a couple of novelty numbers. A group of other singers, dancers and musicians are being recruited to make this one of the greatest nights yet staged in Eastland.

All of the merchants that have been giving the Community night will give a beautiful present to be sold in the big Chinese auction, which will be the largest put on. Everyone is asked to have all their money ready and signed.

New Air Route To Open Through Eastland Soon

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—Establishment of a northern transcontinental airway from Birmingham to San Diego, via Fort Worth, El Paso, Douglas, Tucson and Phoenix soon will be begun, Clarence W. Young announced today.

The new route was recommended by the interdepartmental committee of civic airways. Eastern terminus of the airway will be at New York, running to Birmingham via Richmond and Atlanta. This portion of the route already is lighted and in operation, Young said.

"From Birmingham, the airway will be routed west to Dallas," Young announced.

"This section, which will be equipped for day operation only, has not yet been surveyed for intermediate landing fields and other aids to air navigation, but work toward this end will go forward shortly."

The section between Dallas and Fort Worth, passing through Eastland, Abilene, Seymour, Spring, Midland, Wink and El Paso, will be equipped for night flying. Survey on this section already has been completed and work begun.

From El Paso the line will be routed to Douglas, Tucson, and Phoenix, then southwest to Yuma, west to Yuma, and El Centro, and thence due west to San Diego, where it will join with the Pacific Coastwise Airways, Young said. Surveys are now being made on the latter sections, which will also be equipped for night flying.

PAGO PAGO, Samoa, Aug. 20.—Captain W. R. Meyer, modest skipper of the Ventura which arrived here yesterday, today refused the role of hero forced upon him by residents of Pago Pago for the work he accomplished in saving the 251 passengers and crew of the Hahiti which floundered Sunday in the South Seas.

Captain Meyer steadfastly depreciated his own efforts, claiming that tribute should be paid to Captain Toten of the ill-fated Tahiti.

The pardon record of Mrs. Ferguson also came in for its share of attack. Moody asserted that during the last 25 days of her administration, Mrs. Ferguson issued unconditional pardons to 124 robbers, 124 hi-jackers, 127 liquor law violators, 133 murderers and 39 men convicted of criminal assault.

"Ferguson is base enough to appeal to the criminal element to elect his wife governor," Moody said. "Every actual and potential criminal will vote for Ferguson next Saturday and if the hijackers of Chicago were given an opportunity they would make old Jim King of the universe."

Nacogdoches Hears Ferguson Nacogdoches, Tex., Aug. 20.—Into this so-called capital of East Texas piney woods which has proven itself in past elections to be a stronghold of Fergusonism, James E. Ferguson carried his wife's candidacy for governor of Texas Tuesday night.

For the moment, Ferguson cloaked himself in the garb of the great commoner James S. Hogg, and compared the present contest to that of 1892 between Hogg and George Clark.

Bitter was the attack Ferguson flung at Texas newspapers, and ruinous were the charges he made against three groups which would jeopardize the future of the state.

"One crowd is trying to steal the oil, gas and sulphur known to be under prison lands in South Texas. Although permitted by law to do so, the Moody administration has made no effort to get this mineral but has sat idly by and let their friends drain the oil from under the prison lands and done nothing to protect the interests of the state."

The second crowd is trying to get the prison lands and make of them the most profitable irrigation project in the United States. Their scheme is, as soon as they get the prison lands, to take the Brazos out of its channel above Sugarland and divert it into creeks, which will flow for forty miles by gravitation.

"The Moody-Sterling crowd recommend that this land be sold for from $15 to $20 per acre. It is some of the finest land in the world and while governor I made out as high as two to three bales of cotton to the acre, seventy-five bushels of corn, and 600 gallons of syrup per acre."

"A third crowd is the Austin craters. As soon as the farming lands are stolen or given away their scheme is to move the main penitentiary to near Austin among the cedar brakes, where only skunks and armadillos can live. There they propose to spend $9,000,000 to build a factory in which the state would lose $20,000,000 if the thing is ever started."

Ferguson flayed the newspapers for "coloring the news" to make him appear a demon and Sterling an angel. "But the silent voters including the laboring people in the cities and farmers in the country refuse to be intimidated or bulldozed," he declared.

"When the court said I could not run and Tom Love could run, my wife got her dander up and there was heck to pay in my household. Dan Moody wanted to run for I thought to try me and I was hijacked, related Ferguson. "This man Sterling has a platform which he arranges every twenty-four hours and nobody knows what he stands for."

Bobbitt At Cooper COOPER, Tex., Aug. 20.—Bexar county's political ring closed around the Texas race for attorney general today following charges of hypocrisy sounded here Tuesday by attorney general Bill L. Bobbitt, candidate for re-election. Bobbitt charged that his opponent, James V. Allred had switched his campaign "from one of sympathy to one of denials."

He said that shortly after the first primary Allred, although claiming to confer with engineers of the powerful Bexar machine, declaring to them that he did not believe in interfering with local self government. Later, in Waco, Bobbitt charged Allred denied making such a move, although clippings from three San Antonio newspapers indicated the contrary. "All through his campaign he has harped on fairness and squareness. My good old Christian daddy taught me to practice and not preach such a philosophy. During incumbency as attorney general, I've remembered that teaching and I vote to the record, which is open to your inspection, at Austin," Bobbitt declared.

OUT OUR WAY

Reports As To Mrs. McPherson's Condition Vary

By United Press. LOS ANGELES, Aug. 20.—Suddenly relenting in her determination not to see reporters, Mrs. Almee Temple McPherson early today admitted them to her sickroom in a Malibu Beach cottage and denied she had struck her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy. "I never would strike mother, never!" cried the evangelist. We did have a slight argument but mother received the broken nose when she threw herself face downward on the floor in a tantrum. "The argument was the result of some unkind remarks mother was said to have made about Angelus Temple employees."

When questioned about a face-lifting operation which her mother said she underwent, Mrs. McPherson laughed and refused to discuss the matter with either an admission or a denial. The Angelus Temple leader's voice rose to a high pitch at times as she discussed her mother's charges. Her associates said she fussed on her bed and babbled deliriously during the previous night. Most of the time her eyes were covered with bandages soaked in soothing liniments as a means of relieving eye strain. However, there was little evidence to support a statement of Miss Emma Schaeffer, a secretary, that "her face looked just like death."

Though nervous and at times verging on the point of hysteria, the evangelist did not appear to be "dying" as bulletins posted last night at Angelus Temple reported. The evangelist said newspaper reporters against the advice of her physician, who had ordered her to remain "quiet."

Also in apparent disregard of the "quiet" order, Mrs. McPherson rented a cottage was a blaze with lights long after midnight. Temple followers, guards and nurses walked back and forth through the house while anxious reporters waited without.

News From The State Capital

AUSTIN, Tex., Aug. 20.—An appeal was filed today in the Court of Criminal Appeals here from action of the district court in Harrison county in refusing to discharge Bill Hartsell who was indicted on a charge of child desertion. Appeals were filed also from Harrison county from year sentences given Cleo Brown and Walter Jones on conviction of transporting liquor.

The Attorney General's Department has approved the following bond issues: Amarillo street improvement bonds, $150,000; Red River country road district sixteen, $6,500; Cedar Hill school district, $15,000; Omaha school district, $10,000 and Cushing school district, $8,500.

Game wardens in dry sections of the state are being instructed today to take needed steps to preserve the fish in stream beds that threaten to go dry.

Denies Admirer Gave Her $50,000

"Fifty thousand dollars? My goodness, no! Why, I knew Mr. Posner only vaguely, and I don't have $50,000 of my own or Mr. Posner's, and furthermore—" but that's enough to let you know that Helen Kane, above, musical comedy and radio star, flatly denied to Chicago reporters that Murray J. Posner, New York dress manufacturer, gave her $50,000, as alleged in a suit filed by creditors of his company. And Helen's expression here seems to bear out her surprise.

Mexican Chief, Shorn Of Power, Lived In Exile

General Francisco Robles Manzo Loses Fortune, Retains Health. By DENNIS LANDRY. United Press Staff Correspondent, TUCSON, Ariz., Aug. 21.—There resides in this border town a rancher who has a good idea of how Napoleon felt when he was banished to St. Helena to ponder the vicissitudes of war. He is the former General Francisco Robles Manzo, 260 pound under-secretary of war of Mexico, commander of Sonora and the conqueror of the Yaquis. Today, he is a political refugee from his native country.

In the 1929 Escobar rebellion, General Manzo served as commander of all rebel forces in northwestern Mexico. With the defeat of his army by the federals, he was driven across the international boundary, leaving behind him a fortune accumulated after years of labor in his home at Ortiz, Sonora, Mexico.

Despite his comparatively low estate here, the once noted military leader may look across the border at his other country to a number of economic achievements which still stand as monuments in Ortiz to his enterprise. In making his escape, he left behind 5,600 head of cattle, a $25,000 light and power system, a modern water works which he founded, extensive ranching interests, some 200 miles of improved highways in and adjacent to Ortiz, and modern barracks housing some 2,000 soldiers whom he commanded.

"Whatever glory that was once mine was wiped out in a moment," he said, smiling sadly. "But I still have my wife and four children and I am a good rancher—so perhaps I should not be despondent. There still may be brighter days ahead."

And the once highly honored federal officer, glad now in a moment about his work as any other Mexican laborer. And occasionally from his lips sound Mexican National anthems he loves so well. Incidentally, one of General Manzo's favorite historic characters is Napoleon.

NEW MOISTURE METER DEvised FOR LUMBER A simple and compact type of electrical instrument for quick determination of moisture content of lumber has been designed by the Forest Products Laboratory, maintained by the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, at Madison, Wis.

The new instrument will aid lumber manufacturers and dealers in providing the consumer with lumber seasoned to the best possible moisture content for its intended use, according to C. P. Winslow, Laboratory director.

One of the main obstacles to careful control of lumber moisture in the past has been the impracticability of the old method of weighing wood samples, drying them 24 hours, and weighing again in order to find the moisture content. With the new machine it is necessary only to drive a set of needles into the sample to be tested and select a dial or switch which will cause two neon tubes to flash at the same rate. If the instrument is used for rough sorting, it is

The Hollywood Story

COPYRIGHT 1930 by NEA SERVICE Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Dan Rorimer, temperamental young man of Hollywood, can't get along with the studio manager at Continental Pictures and tears up his contract as scenario writer and asks to be fired. But he isn't. Dan has become keenly interested in Anne Winter, a young girl from Tulsa, Okla., who is working as an extra. She has had stage experience, and she knows enough to warrant a screen test at Grand United studios.

Dan lives with Paul Collier, who writes a daily movie column for a string of newspapers, and lives with Mona Morrison and Eva Harley, two extra girls. Eva is rather bitter.

Garry Sloan, famous Hollywood director, has shown some interest in Anne Winter. Dan does not care much for Sloan; he is an admirer, however, of Frank Maury, Collier's former rival, now with Amalgamated. Collier invites him to a house-warming at his home, and he brings Anne along.

There Dan meets a charming young actress named Maris Farrell. Anne meets and is attracted by Frank Maury, a conceited charmer of the screen. Maury makes himself obnoxious to Maris and Anne, and it falls to Dan's lot to rescue them from his unwelcome attentions. Maris is curious about Anne. She seems interested in knowing whether she is a particular friend of Dan's.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

Rorimer said, "Why, I hope so," and he eyed her then. It was possibly regarded him as something more than a friend and a companion to play around with. Anne was hard to figure that way; you never knew just where you stood. True, she seemed to enjoy herself whenever he was with her, but that might mean much and it might mean nothing; Anne had never given him reason to think that it had any especial significance. He grinned inwardly, remembering the night that he had kissed her and she had told him that she hoped he would do it again. That was Anne for you; always calm, always composed; knowing just what she was doing and where she was going.

He remembered now that he had last seen her in the patio, talking with a little gray-haired man, who he supposed she was still there, felt a little uneasy, because Frank Maury had passed that way, and Maury was in a mood to be unpleasant. He heard Martin Collins' voice calling from the house, and Maris Farrell, beside him, clutched his arm.

"Martin says everyone's going swimming," she said. "Are you?"

Maris' head barely reached above his shoulder. He looked down at her and smiled and nodded emphatically.

"How about you?"

And Maris nodded, too.

Rorimer recollected something. "Did you find that green bathing suit, by the way?" he asked. "Because if you didn't, somebody's going to have to explain to Frank Maury."

Maris said that Maury probably wouldn't remember a word that had been said. "Anyway, I found it," she answered him.

She left him then, and went off to change her clothes, and Dan told her that he would meet her in the pool, and he started toward the house in search of Anne. But he heard loud voices, and presently a crowd emerged from the house, led by Collins, who had a girl on either arm. And one of them, Rorimer saw, was Anne, so he made for the men's dressing room and was among the first to get into a bathing suit.

He heard someone say in the dressing room that Maury was "sleeping it off," and another voice said, "Yes, Frank said he was being insulted and he wasn't coming in. Do you think we ought to drag him out and throw him in?" But Martin Collins quietly said it would be better if they let Maury alone.

The next to Dan said in a low voice that that was a good idea. "I'll suit me fine," he told Dan, "if he doesn't wake up till I'm gone."

When Anne Winter emerged from the bathroom, dripping with water, she was sitting on the edge of the pool, watching for her with eager eyes. Gorgeous looking, Anne was, in a black bathing suit and white rubber helmet. He waved to her and she came over and stood beside him and asked him how the water was.

"Fine," he said. "Going in the deep end?"

Anne smiled and nodded, and he got up and took her by the hand and led her to the springing board.

"You first, Anne, and I'll race you to the other end. Okay?"

It was, Anne replied gaily, and he watched her walk confidently to the end of the board, poised for a moment and then, a slim and lovely figure, leave the air with a bewitching grace and disappear beneath the water with a little splash. He followed and, swimming under water, took her hand and came up laughing happily.

"That was a great dive, Anne. You're good." And he added: "I like you in black, too."

Anne said, "Your taste is too fickle."

"Meaning just what?" he urged, swimming beside her. Something in the curtness of her speech led him to think that she might possibly be thinking of Maris Farrell.

MOM'N POP

By Cowan

He found himself hoping eagerly that this was so, remembering an earlier reference Anne had made to Maris; she had said something about his not appearing to be persisting on the vine in Maris' company.

But Anne refused to elaborate, even after he had repeated his question, and he let her beat him to the end of the pool, where they stood up in the shallow water, and Anne scolded him mildly for not exerting himself to win.

"Masculine superiority of the worst sort," she termed it.

"What? Because I didn't break my neck to beat you? Life's too short, Anne."

"Because you showed so plainly that you weren't trying." Her eyes flashed scornfully.

"Well," Dan said meekly, "can I square it if I try real hard this time?" and Anne assented.

So they retraced their course, and this time Dan won by more than a length. He said he hoped she was satisfied. "You made me work every inch of the way."

The sky was turning pale gray in the east as they drove back to Hollywood. Dan told her of what Maris Farrell had said. "Coming from her, I'd call it a real tribute," he said.

And he talked a good deal of Maris, hoping that Anne would say something that would enable him to feel that she was jealous; but there was nothing in her comment to indicate that she resented one bit the attention Maris had demanded of him.

He would have known a savage if she had resented it and had intimated as much. Then he could "Have a heart!" Dan cried, but Collier was heartless.

"The toast is burning; I smell it," he said, depositing Dan on the floor. And he ran back to the kitchen, wanting to know if Rorimer wanted his eggs sunny side up.

"Scrambled," said Dan, flinging out of his pajamas and dashing under the shower.

Collier made some sarcastic comment that Dan could not hear for the noise of the shower, and when he finally emerged from the bathroom, looking presentable once more and with his appetite sharpened by the tempting aroma of frying bacon and eggs, Paul demanded some gossip.

"How was the party, anyway? Anybody get croaked?"

Dan wolfed his orange juice and chuckled. In reply to the question he said, "Your friend Frank Maury was there, by the way. He had a fine edge. I had a little run-in with him."

And he recounted it to Collier. "Where's Maury from?" he asked, and Paul answered that Maury had had an extra. "He hung around for several years before he got a break, and when he did it went straight to his head. . . . That's pretty good, taking two girls away from Maury in one evening. He'll never get over it. He thinks he's God's own little gift to women. I understand he saves his fan mail and sits in front of a mirror and reads it over."

Collier served the bacon and eggs and sat down. "I wish you'd punched him in the nose. I know a lot of people who would have enjoyed it."

And he added: "We're having open house this afternoon, by the way, just in case you forget. I ran into Louise Watkins last night, just for a minute. She said she wanted to talk to you about something. She's coming over."

Soybeans As Green Manure

Soybeans grown as a green-manure crop should be plowed under at blossom stage to insure the maximum soil improvement, the United States Department of Agriculture has found. Soybeans blossom in from 30 to 55 days after planting, depending on the variety time of planting, and soil and climatic conditions. Most of the nitrogen has been gathered in the plant by blossom time. About the maximum amount of organic matter has been produced and the plant is still tender and juicy enough to decay within 35 to 45 days. It allowed to grow longer, the WATERMELON is one of the most difficult fruits to select. The entire melon family is puzzling, for there are many branches and they all have their particular characteristics.

Regardless of variety, all melons must have plenty of heat before they can reach maturity, so the weather conditions throughout the country have much to do with the quality of the fruit. Melons must mature on the vines and they must be ripe when wanted for use. They may ripen after picking without greatly harming the flavor, but full growth must be allowed before harvesting.

If one has a trained ear, the time-honored practice of thumping watermelons with knuckles is a reliable test. A full grown, ripe melon has a dull muffled sound when thumped, while a green melon on rings with a metallic sharpness. In other words the ripe melon says "plunk" and the green one says "plink."

Inspect Surface of Melon

The color and the condition of the surface of a watermelon should be given special attention. If the under-side is a pale yellow, lemon or a warm ivory color with the skin a sort of warty roughness, then ripeness is indicated. A warm, yellowish green rather than a bright clear green on the top is desirable. There's a thin, silken covering all over the surface of a watermelon. When the melon is ripe, this covering will be drawn across it.

Often part of a cut melon is purchased. Keep in mind that the flesh should be a deep pink or bright red well out to the rind and that it should have a silver sheen. It should also be crisp and juicy.

Although mis-shaped melons should be avoided, the shape of the fruit is of no importance.

Daily Menu
LUNCHEON—Sweet peppers stuffed with creamed cabbage, raisin rolls, elderberry and rice pudding, milk, tea.
DINNER—Cold sliced meat loaf, potato chips, buttered beets, stuffed tomato salad, blackberry shortcake.

round or long melons being equally good. The color of the seeds is a matter of the variety of the melon and has little to do with maturity.

Large melons usually are more desirable than small ones, but a heavy, small melon is preferable to a lightweight large one.

Over-ripe melons are as undesirable as immature ones. These can be detected by the dull appearance of the rind and the large amount of yellow veins through the green surface.

Watermelon is always popular served "as natured," but there are innumerable ways of preparing it. As a cocktail with a non-alcoholic sherry dressing, in a salad, in a sherbet or a frappe, watermelon is refreshing for hot weather meals. Since it is made up chiefly of water, it is of little fuel value and adds a minimum of calories to one's diet.

WASHINGTON — Miss Democracy is a mean gal when she is crossed, but Mr. G. O. P. has a trading policy.

All the bad little boys who played truant in 1928 are now taking their spankings in 1930 as fast as Miss Democracy can get around to them. The other party is more likely to let bygones be bygones. It seems strange, but rather true that the Democrats got all disorganized in the presidential campaign and lost, only to emerge now in better marching order than ever, whereas the Republicans won the election and now seem to be all mixed up what with western progressivism, depression, prohibition and things. There are plenty of disillusioned Democrats, however, willing to admit that this doesn't mean a thing insofar as 1932 is concerned.

The South Is Still Solid

Anyway, the Hoovercrats of 1928 have all been getting it in the neck and it has been definitely proved that the south is still Democracy's stronghold. It wasn't that the south loved Hoover; she just hated Al Smith and the pope.

Bishop Cannon in Virginia, Senator Tom Heflin in Alabama, Senator Furnifold McLendel Simmons in North Carolina, Tom Love in Texas and errant Hoovercrats in two or three other states have all been finding that out.

The Republicans have only one honest-to-goodness bolter to punish in this year's primaries and election if they can—Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska.

If they like, they can punish several progressive senators and other Republicans who have harassed Mr. Hoover since his inauguration. They might start on Borah of Idaho, who has been almost consistently irregular in the Senate since he wound up his famous speaking campaign for Hoover in '28, and is going on the stump against the farm plan, in the state convention Aug. 26. They won't. They had a chance to lick Pine of Oklahoma in the July 29th primary for his presidential nomination, but the administration, but they didn't. Nor did they punish McMaster in South Dakota nor will they, in all probability, spank the rather irregular Mr. Couzens in Michigan on Sept. 3.

Norris presumably will not be liked in Nebraska. It is he it will not be because he alienated his political supporters by declaring for Smith, but because he suffers from vengeance inspired in the hearts of strong dry voters and those with religious prejudices. The conservative, regular politicians were always against him anyway.

There's a bolter in Nebraska's Democratic senatorial primary, also—Miss Jennie M. Califas, who lost her national committee post in 1928 because she came out for Hoover. Miss Califas will be spanked in the primary and former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who didn't desert the ticket, will be the winner.

The old regular Democratic leaders never really lost their hold in the Democratic states which voted for Hoover. The first demonstration that the Hoovercrats had had in the primary and former Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, who didn't desert the ticket, will be the winner.

Alabama managed to vote for Smith, but Heflin paid part of the price for his desertion when the state machine refused to let him run again as a Democrat. He probably will pay the rest of the account in November when he stands for reelection as an independent.

Paul Collier's movements aroused Dan some hours later. Collier was cooking breakfast — Sunday morning breakfast being the one meal they religiously ate at home — and Collier was making a great fuss with frying pans.

"What's the big idea?" Rorimer demanded from his bed, and Paul appeared in the doorway, a dressing gown thrown over his pajamas. "It's 11 o'clock, my boy. Going to sleep all day? What time did you get in?"

"None of your business," Dan told him. "I'll have my orange juice in bed."

"Och, yeah?" Collier came into the room and grabbed Rorimer by the foot and began to haul him out of bed. "Come on now, get out of there."

Has Threatened to Lose Their Balance This Fall

By FRANCES PAGET Copyright, 1936, by Style Sources NEW YORK, Aug. 19—The shape of the head, the contour of eyes and brow, and above all, the special outline of the hair about the face, all these must be intelligently considered in the selection of the correct hat. The personality of the face with its frame of hair has become one composition with the hat. The coiffeur looms as of great importance than he was during the seasons when he was shearing the bob to fit into the smallest head sizes. Up to him is the effect of individuality which waved tresses must create in framing the face and balancing with the intricate silhouette of the hat. The cosmetician also should have a busy season working with brows which will be more in the foreground than ever, for a smooth and clear effect. prepared for the completing of fall costumes is the irregularity which results in a graceful rather than a rigid or tailored silhouette. Hats may be said to have lost their balance, the two sides are scarcely ever alike—up, pushed away from the hair at one side revealing a ped at the other to cover the ear and even the neck. This results in a tilted effect but not a rakish expression, for the unbalanced lines are so cleverly studied, so charmingly contrived that while they have developed a more picturesque aspect in millinery, it is not of the casual sort. It has a dignity and chic which is best described by the French expression, "Chapeau a Ligne," which is simply a way of saying that it is the arresting outline of the head and hat which counts.
