MELLON BANKING INTERESTS TO BE MERGED

Merging of banks is the order of the day. A dispatch from Pittsburgh carries the news that plans for the acquisition of 75 or more banks in Western Pennsylvania, in anticipation of moves to legalize branch banking, are understood to have been made by the Mellon and Hillman banking interests in the city of Pittsburgh.

This is the age of big business. Likewise, it is the machine age. It is the chain system of doing things. According to the census returns, three million farmers deserted the rural districts in the ten-year period from 1920 to 1930 and the statisticians of New York and other important American cities are insisting that there are 6,000,000 unemployed workers in the 48 American states.

"Back to the farm" is a slogan as dead as the dodo. Now who is going to win the battle in the coming years—the flesh and blood man or the steel robot?

CLAUDIUS HUSTON A STAND-PATTER

Natl. Chmn. Claudius Huston is a stand-patter. Republican leaders the country over are demanding his resignation. They are demanding a new head for the national committee of their party. Claudius has refused to resign the post. He is going ahead with his program. He will not get out unless Pres. Hoover advises him to quit.

Pres. Hoover has conferred with Claudius, but he hasn't issued a command for a Huston getaway. There is an important election coming in all the 48 states. Huston's record in the Muscle Shoals investigation was uncovered by certain senators. It was an unsavory mess all around. There are senators standing for re-election. There are many congressmen standing for re-election. They insist that Huston should efface himself for the good of the G.O.P.

A famous Union general said, years after civil strife, "War is hell." Claudius Huston admits privately to his close friends, "Muscle Shoals is hell." It is a grand old world—for the critic who holds down a safe place in the treets while watching the procession climbing to the hilltops.

J. D. TURNS ANOTHER MILEPOST

John D. Rockefeller was 91 years old Tuesday, July 8, and did not make any particular fuss or bother about it. He played nine holes of golf with his neighbors as companions, remarked to the reporters that he was in the best of health, surrounded by dear friends, and had nought but good will toward all.

He has made his plans to round out 100 years. He was the first American billionaire. He has given away hundreds of millions of dollars for church and charity, and medical research. He began his career without ten dollars in his pocket, and when he goes hence he may carry a silver dime in his shroud and that will be all.

Henry Ford was the second American billionaire. He hopes to be on the road until he rounds his 100th milepost, but as a distributor of dimes the wizard of the so-called tin Lizzie has never been a competitive rival of the Standard Oil king. He has a passion for gathering antiques. His Lillien will be passed on to his son and his grandchildren. Henry Ford is a thrifty individual, but he has sent happiness into the lives of thousands of men and women who have been on his payroll. He is said to have the gift of prophecy. His latest is that in coming time work days will become shorter and shorter and wages higher and higher. On with the millenium. All the world is waiting with open arms.

A NEW PLAN FOR TAX REDUCTION

There is a new plan for tax reduction "to relieve the burdens of the people" on the way. Chief L. G. Phares of the state highway patrol has announced that the state legislature, at its next session, will be asked to make provision for the addition of 250 men to the state highway patrol. He is quoted as having said he believes "there will be little opposition to the expansion program owing to the high regard in which the patrol is held by the general public."

Why not an expansion of the ranger force to 250 men? Why not expansions in all departments of the government? This will cut the tax rate to the bone and make the people happy. There are candidates for the office of governor who are promising tax reduction all along the line. They are going to give the farmers a low tax rate. They are going to give the corporations a new and a low tax rate. They are going to oppose a higher tax rate on the general resource wealth of the commonwealth. They are going to give the city home owners a low tax rate.

Indeed, they are promising to make it possible for the property owner to get by with less taxation than the Indian had to pay when he roamed the wilds of Texas in the long ago. During every session of the Texas legislature, new commissions are created, new jobs are provided for hungry patriots, and the visible wealth of the state bears the burden. As for the governor, he is shorn of power every session, and the three houses "lighten the load of the taxpayer," employing their own peculiar methods of lifting the load.

SIR CONAN DOYLE PASSES OUT

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is dead. His name was a household word the world over. He was a famous physician; he was one of the most versatile writers of the age in which he lived, and wherever spiritualism has devotees or advocates his name was revered. His last words were spoken to his wife. He paid her this tribute, "You are wonderful." Lady Doyle and his sons and daughters are spiritualists. They were with him to the end. They believe that he will communicate with this world, and that they are going to have conversations with him.

Conan Doyle created Sherlock Holmes and his detective stories are among the classics of detective literature. His books were read by millions of the wide world over. He was an immortal before death called him away and his name and fame are not of the perishable things of the earth. For 11 years Sir Oliver Lodge had been his close associate in spiritualistic work. Sir Oliver holds conversations with the departed members of his family daily. That is, he thinks he does.

Now the family of the creator of Sherlock Holmes is to hold communication—that is, he will communicate with his loved ones in this world. This is the verdict of the son, "Father fully believed that when he passed over he would continue to be in touch with us. There is no question but that he will of itself speak to us just as he did before he died." Europeans of the Doyle-Lodge philosophy of life and death must have direct communication from the world visible with that world visible on this side of the river that are not enjoyed by Americans, either living or dead.

George M. Cohan had it down pat when he said, "Life is a queer proposition after all." It is, but death is a queerer proposition. If the soul is immortal, then man never dies. If he never dies, perhaps Sir Conan and Sir Oliver have unraveled the secret of direct communication.

LEGGES AND THE GRAIN DEALERS

Chmn. Alexander W. Legge of the federal farm relief board insists that there should be a radical reduction in wheat acreage the coming season. His fellow board members are in accord with his plan of reduction. Now the wheat dealers of Kansas and the grain exchanges of Kansas have thrown down the gauntlet to the proposal. These buyers and sellers of grain held a convention. Their leaders made speeches, their committees drafted resolutions and all the speeches and resolutions were aimed at the reduction plans. They said it would be illegal for the farmers to reduce their wheat acreage, that it would be suicidal, that it would be contrary to the laws of supply and demand, that it would work hardships on the farmers and lastly, all in all, it was an unheard-of proposal.

There are 39 wheat producing countries. Wheat surplus of the United States must find a market in foreign lands. If their acreage is heavy, the surplus is very large. If they glut the foreign market with American wheat, then what will happen to the pocket book of the American farmer? Great corporations, like unto the house of steel corporation, get together, dictate a gentleman's agreement, arrange it so that the outputs of the steel mills will not exceed the world demand, they make money, they pile up individual wealth, and they enjoy life as any men of millions are able to enjoy it. It isn't illogical for the steel makers, nor does it empty their coffers and reward them with lean wallets.

There is an overproduction of wheat. There is an overproduction of cotton. Wheat growers should be thoroughly organized. Cotton growers should be thoroughly organized. When planting times comes, they should know the carry-over of wheat and the carry-over of cotton, and plant accordingly. Business is business. Will the wheat growers organize? Will the cotton growers organize. Will they adopt the plan of the federal farm relief board for holding the staple and marketing in a sane way? This for the future to decide.

Konjola Put Kansas Man Back To Work

"Proved To Be A Wonderful Medicine In My Case," Says Former Sufferer.

MR. H. C. SHERMAN

Any medicine that can win more than a million friends in seven years must have merit, and that is exactly what Konjola has done. You wonder why Konjola has become a household word? Well, read what Mr. H. C. Sherman, painting contractor, of Goddard, Kansas, says:

"Konjola proved to be a wonderful medicine in my case. Last July I was hurt in an automobile accident, and was in the hospital many weeks. When I got out, I was in a badly run down condition; had rheumatism in the shoulder, arm and hand, and my stomach out of order. I suffered terrible pains, and medicines did me no good. The many endorsements of Konjola led me to try it, and six bottles of this wonderful medicine made me able to resume my work again for a long time."

Konjola's 32 ingredients work together, battling at their very source, the causes of stomach, liver, kidney and bowel troubles, and of rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness.

MORE ACTIVE INTEREST IN BOYS' WORK

Dr. Buchanan Urges Student Loan Fund For Next College Year.

RANGER, Texas, July 10.—The Ranger Rotary club will invade the Boy Scout encampment on Wednesday, July 23, it was decided at today's session of the Rotarians at the Gholson hotel.

While, as a club, Rotarians have been sponsoring boys' work, individually the members have not given Boy Scouting as much in the way of personal interest and encouragement as might be hoped, Edw. R. Maher declared.

He suggested that the Rotarians gather early on the morning of July 23, drive to Camp Martin, have luncheon there, spend the afternoon with the boys and then return to Ranger that night or spend the night in camp and return the next morning.

Dr. L. C. G. Buchanan was program chairman today. He told of the good accomplished by the Ranger Junior college student loan fund. The money is all loaned, however, and payments will not start coming in until December so he urged that additional money be raised so that a fund would be available at the start of the next college semester in September.

He led in a round table discussion on Rotary and the work for the new year.

Andy Anderson spoke on the importance of good program chairmen as they make the meetings interesting and thereby keep up the enthusiasm and attendance.

C. E. Massie was the new president. Guy N. Quill, Boy Scout executive, of Eastland, and Charles Edwards were visitors.

ANALYZE WATER, CLAY AND ORES
 AUSTIN, July 10.—Hardly a day passes in the long session when some sample of water, clay, oil, rock or ore is not brought to the bureau of industrial chemistry at the University of Texas for analyzing and testing, according to F. W. Jessen, assistant chemist in the bureau.

MOM'N POP

By Cowan

The purpose of the bureau is to advise citizens of the State of Texas concerning the possible and profitable use of Texas raw materials in industry and daily life.

Water samples, on an average of five a day, are tested in the bureau, and advice is given on their suitability for drinking by man or beast, for irrigation, or for use in steam boilers. If the water is not suitable for any of these purposes, proper treatment to render it usable is advised.

Clays are tested by standard methods to determine their suitability for brick, tile, and crockery. Limestone, shales, and gypsum deposits are examined and samples tested to determine their value for the manufacture of lime, cement, and plaster.

Petroleum and cotton oils are also tested. Crude petroleum is subject to valuation tests, to note the quantities of gasoline, kerosene, distillate and lubricating oils. Asphalt and other road materials are analyzed. Microanalysis of rocks, ores and of sands for glass manufacture has recently been added to the bureau's activities. One mining survey was conducted during the past year.

The designing of water and sewage disposal plants, with a view of improving their operation, is another of the bureau's activities. During the long session just passed, ten water plants were designed for various cities of the state, and several more, which have not yet been completed, were begun. Work on six sewage projects was furthered, several of which are also incomplete at the present time. The value of lignite found in various parts of the state and the possible technical improvement to make it more generally usable have received a great deal of attention this year. The development of new processes for making of analyses and new methods of water filtration, sewage disposal, and water chlorination is also a part of the bureau's work.

Clipping Bureau At the University

AUSTIN, July 10.—One of the agencies at the University of Texas which has helped many women students to pay their ways through school is the Students Clipping bureau.

The bureau, which has been in operation for several years, maintains a staff of 11 or 12 women who do part-time work through both long and summer sessions.

Every newspaper published in Texas, including approximately 115 dailies and 750 weeklies, is received at the bureau and carefully read and clipped for the many clients desiring clippings on various subjects. Among the subscribers, advertising agencies, resorts, magazines, fairs and expositions and many other individuals and organizations.

Besides the regular clipping service, the bureau publishes a bulletin for bond brokers called the Semi-Weekly Bond Buyer Bulletin. The progress of all bond issues, municipal, county, state, irrigation, school, road and public improvement projects, is traced in this bulletin, which has bond brokers from all parts of the United States on its mailing list.

Employees in the bureau for the 1930 summer session are Emma Yankow of Galveston, Reba Her-

When the easiest way is the best way. . . .

There are no two ways about it! Certainly the easiest way to get the most for every dollar you spend is to buy products that you know about through the advertisements in your daily paper. You don't have to go out and look for buying opportunities. The advertisements bring them to you. And all you need to do is consider the facts, compare the values and decide on the soap or sedan that best fits your judgment and your pocketbook.

Certainly the best way of making your money go farthest is to buy merchandise of proved value. Advertisized merchandise. Merchandise that is bought and used by many people. Merchandise that must be superlatively good enough for its maker to keep calling it to the attention of people day after day and year after year.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Judith Grant, artist's model, loves Alan Steyne, young painter, who is also loved by Judith's roommate, Chummy Morley. Chummy had loved Steyne years ago, and lost her memory when he went away; so, though Steyne loves Judith, Judith insists that it is his duty to marry Chummy, who does not know of their love. Judith is studying dancing, and Bruce Gideon, financier, who is infatuated with her, offers to star her in a musical show. Steyne is distrustful of Gideon's intentions, but Judith will not be warned. She dances for a group of friends at a studio party, and in a fall in the festivities finds herself standing beside Steyne at a window.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

"I couldn't bear to see you dance in front of a great vulgar crowd," Alan said beneath his breath.

"Hush!" Judy whispered, frightened at the passion of his voice. "I've got to dance—I simply must. You've no idea what it's like."

"It drives me mad!" he went on. "It will drive other men mad!"

His voice was reckless. Judy held her breath as Chummy and Hyilton passed close to them.

"You mustn't talk like that," she said when they had gone by. "You must be crazy! Come and dance at once, and behave like other people!"

He obeyed her, but the hands that held her might have been made of wood. He dared not realize that she was close to him, keeping step with him, a light, gossamer thing of perfect skill and grace. He stumbled heavily in his anguish, and she released herself.

"Clumsy!" she laughed. "I'm parched. For mercy's sake, get me something to drink—I simply must."

There was more dancing, and they ate the sandwiches and cakes, and drank lemonade, or vermouth, or cold broth.

Then Tony and Michael begged Judy to dance again.

"I'm dog tired," she said; "but I don't mind, if it pleases you children."

middle and looked around at them all.

"Oh!" she said in a reedy voice. "A dreadful thing has happened! Old Guarvenius—dear old Guarvenius—has been run over in the street and killed. That was his housekeeper on the phone. He asked for me the last thing before he died in the hospital. She was there—they'd sent for her. She sent a messenger to the cafe, knowing I'm often there, and they told her where I was. Isn't it awful? He was such a dear old thing—like a father to me! Whenever he was pleased with me, he called me his bird. And now he's dead!"

Chummy went to Judy, put her arms about her, and tried to comfort her; but she was not to be comforted. She burst into bitter sobs that racked her body with anguish.

They gave her the sympathy of silence. But in the midst of it Steyne's heart sent up a fiery burst of thankfulness, because, if her master were dead, Judy might never become a dancer, and might never be gazed upon by the eyes of the great, vulgar world!

"Judy says she will never dance again."

"Rubbish!"

"She says she was actually dancing when Mr. Guarvenius died."

"What's that got to do with it?" asked Dumont. "Wouldn't he have wanted her to be dancing?"

"He wanted to see her," said Chummy.

"I know but she couldn't help it that they didn't find her in time. I call it rather morbid."

"She says her career is over. I think it's a pity myself, but Alan thinks it's right."

"You saw her dance. What did you think of her, Chummy?"

"I think she was perfectly wonderful. And so were you, Bastien. The way you played! It was a dream."

"I was nothing. It was all Judy. She is a great dancer."

"Of course."

"I understand Steyne's point of view," Dumont went on. "It's a man's. I have it myself to a certain extent. No man wants to see a woman in whom he's interested, in the public eye."

"Oh, Bastien, that's old-fashioned! Men used to shut their women up in caves."

"I know. It's the old idea, and it's still there."

"But you, Bastien—you wouldn't want Judy not to become a dancer? And you're just as much interested in her as Alan is."

"Yes, just as much interested," he answered, with a sudden laugh; "but I think perhaps I've got more of the cursed artistic temperament. I think it would be a crime if Judy's art were lost to the world. Still, I understand Steyne, all the same."

"I think you're ridiculous, both of you," said Chummy stoutly. "You might just as well say I shouldn't paint."

"Oh, no, that's different, Chummy."

"Well, the world sees your work—it doesn't see you."

"How different?"

"Oh! It's because the world has to see Judy herself. And you men don't like it—even though she's nothing to you." At least, she's nothing to Alan."

"I told you it was the man's point of view," Dumont said, swallowing something in his throat."

"It's jealousy—dog-in-the-manger jealousy, Bastien," said Chummy; "on Alan's part, at any rate. Of course, I can't help knowing that you care for Judy, but you say you don't mind her dancing."

"That's because I'm cursed with the artistic temperament, and it gets the better of the man in me."

"Bastien," said Chummy earnestly, "I'm sure you'll win Judy's love in time."

"Do you think so?"

"I'm sure of it. You're so faithful, and she is so fond of you."

"Have you noticed that?" he asked with sarcasm.

"Of course I have. And now you're getting on well and she's going to be famous. Some day you'll be a star."

"And you, Chummy—when are you to be married?"

"Next month."

"Is the date fixed?"

"Not the actual day. I don't want to go away until something is settled about Judy. I couldn't leave her; and we were going abroad at once."

It was just a week after the death of Guarvenius. Another grave for Judy to visit and tend! She had gone into deep mourning. Work had annealed all her model woe and spent her days in her own rooms.

Guarvenius, apparently, had no relatives but a young nephew—a youth whose remarkably good looks were marred by unmistakable signs of dissipation. He happened to be in New York at the time, having just come over from Paris, and now took charge of everything. In the absence of a will he was the sole heir. He shut up the dancing school and sold the lease of the house with all the furniture and fittings—look, stock and barrel.

He was not interested in dancing as a high art. He did all his dancing at the Moulin Rouge and the Bal Bullier. He did not trouble himself about his late uncle's funeral, and he only very reluctantly allowed the great Marie Flomena to choose a personal souvenir from the master's private belongings, and he was rude to Judy at the funeral; but, as she spoke no French, and he no English, it made no impression on her.

For more than 10 days Judy saw nobody but Chummy. Apt to exaggerate everything, she behaved as if she had been left an inconsolable widow. She would discuss no plans for her future. Only once did she talk about anything but Guarvenius and his goodness to her, and that was when she asked her friend when she was to be married.

"We have postponed it, Judy darling," Chummy said. "I couldn't go away and leave you like this without knowing what you are going to do."

Then Judy spoke very decisively.

"That's all nonsense, Chummy! You know I shall be all right. I can go to work again as soon as I want to, and I shall when I've got over the shock. I could always get on the stage now. Anybody would give me a chance—I'm sure of that."

"But you said you were never going to dance again, Judy."

"I know I did; but that was after the first blow. I've been thinking since then. I feel sure that he would have wanted me to go on dancing. I think it was wrong to feel that everything was over. If I get on and do well, he would have been proud of me, Chummy."

It sounded somewhat involved, but the sentiments were unimpeachable; only it was all so unlike Judy—this serious little person in black, with unpainted cheeks and eyes that appeared to be studying the problems of life.

"Of course, my career is done for," Judy went on. "I don't suppose I shall ever be a great dancer—not famous like Flomena. You want what dear M. Guarvenius described as the right atmosphere and surroundings. I shall never have a theater to myself, and a perfect orchestra, and all the advertising that he was going to give me. Of course, he could have managed all that, and I was going to pay him back afterward."

"He had practically taken a theater for October, hadn't he, Judy?"

"Yes—the Haystack, and he had engaged the orchestra—but of course all that will go by the board. I shall have to make my way, like any other beginner; but you're not to worry about me, Chummy. I shall be all right. I shan't want for anything. You go and get married, and go abroad and have a lovely time."

"I suppose, Judy," said Chummy rather nervously, "you wouldn't come with us?"

"What an idea!" cried Judy, and laughed more like her old self.

"But afterward, Judy, when we come back—when we go to Maine—you'll come and stay with us, won't you?"

"Oh, Lord, yes, if you'll ask me! There's nothing I'd like better. Just promise me, Chummy, first, that you won't put it off on account of me."

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON—Reports from Montana indicate that the Republicans of that state in their primary of July 16 will nominate a wet candidate to oppose Senator Thomas J. Walsh in the November election.

There is also an idea at this early date that the famous Mr. Walsh, who will be renominated by the Democrats without opposition, will nose out the wet candidate—not because he has always been very dry but because he is the famous Mr. Walsh.

Montana voters in primaries and elections appear generally not to have voted on wet and dry lines. But if the Republicans nominate a wet candidate they will be joining an obvious trend this year to take advantage of the rise in wet sentiment. Sometimes the trend expresses itself in the disposition of state organizations to oppose the other party's dry candidate with a wet candidate or vice versa and sometimes when one party unit follows the opposition, by resolution or platform plank, into the wet camp.

May Eliminate Straddlers

While all this may not seriously affect the big dry majorities in Congress it is likely to reduce them slightly and it certainly cuts down the sum total of straddling on the prohibition issue. Among other things it has produced possibly startling surprises for Senators Jones and Dill of Washington, two bone drys, whose respective party state conventions have both, recently gone wet.

Supreme Court Justice Albert H. Galen, a wet, is running for the Republican senatorial nomination in Montana and the available dope here is that he will lick Mr. O. H. P. Shelley, a former state prohibition administrator, who is running as a dry. Among other things, Mr. Shelley has trouble with his initials. Low humorists among his enemies like to call him "One Horse Power" or "One Half Pint."

Judge Galen has remained on the bench, leaving to his friends and the numerous politicians, supporting him the business of drumming up votes. He has made no campaign statement on prohibition but he is known throughout the state as a liberal on the question and Mr. Shelley has been boldly championing the cause of the drys. There has been plenty of argument as to which man could do the most for Montana in Washington.

Presumably looking toward the election, Senator Walsh, a bone dry of long standing, has promised to follow the wishes of Montana voters as they may be expressed in a referendum. Republicans say this minor concession on his part will alienate many fervid drys who would rather have wet Galen than a man like that, but there really doesn't seem much nourishment in such an argument. Montana has twice voted against having any state enforcement act, however, and Walsh may have to explain during the campaign just how much more he requires in the way of an expression of sentiment.

Democrats believe that neither Galen nor Shelley is very popular in the state and that Walsh's personal strength will carry him through. His friends think he is stronger than ever because he has been increasingly progressive in the last few years and that the allied Anacondas Copper Co. and Montana Power Co. often large factors in Montana politics, will remain neutral in the senatorial fight.

Lose Fat Safely and Quickly

Kruschen Salts—(a perfect combination of the six mineral salts your body must have every day to function properly) purify your blood of harmful acids, and aid the kidneys and bowels to throw off waste material—the continual fermentation of which is probably the cause of your fat. In this modern age of living, it's impossible to get these salts from the fancy foods you eat—but don't worry just as long as you have Kruschen Salts. Take a half teaspoon every morning in a glass of hot water—little by little that ugly fat disappears, you'll feel better than ever before—years younger, more energy. You'll soon possess that enviable beauty, clear skin, sparkling eyes, superb figure which only perfect health can impart. An 80c bottle (lasts 4 weeks) at Beauty Drug Store or any progressive drugist in America. Money back if Kruschen doesn't convince you that it is the safest, quickest, easiest way to lose fat.

90-Year-Old Inventor Has Hobby In Work

Adrian C. Cooke Has Patented 87 Inventions to Lessen Home Work.

CHICAGO, July 9.—Adrian C. Cooke, who at the age of 90 has patented 87 inventions, and is still at it, puts in a full day's work six days a week—and calls it his "hobby." The man who invented the "squeeze," the rubber appliance for cleaning windows, and who has just completed a device for peeling grapefruit and oranges, has spent the greater part of his life making articles designed to lighten work of the home. His inventions range in size from a combination salt and pepper shaker to a broad wheeled farm cart. His latest invention is a water wheel, which he claims will furnish enough power to generate sufficient electricity for running farm machinery and lighting. Age has proved no barrier to Cooke's capacity for work. His good health, he claims, is hereditary; and points out that his father lived to 80; his mother to 107, and her father died at the age of 114 years. Cooke eats, drinks and works in moderation, and says that he has smoked since he was 12. A month ago he walked 17 miles to his home when his automobile stalled, and did not mind the hike at all.

He still finds time to reminisce about the Civil War, in which he served as a member of the First Minnesota regiment. He was with Sherman on the famous march to the sea, and fought in the battle of Lookout Mountain. Through marketing of his inventions, Cooke has enriched many people. He never has been a rich man, being content with a comfortable living for his family, which includes three sons and a daughter—the oldest 64 and the youngest 46.
