Tax Payments Lag Markedly, City Reports

Meanwhile, County And School Receive Better Collections

Unless there is a definite increase in response at the city hall, the per centage of delinquent taxes may take a jump this year, it was indicated at the tax office Tues-

Discount plans offered by the county and independent school district has boosted their percentage collections but has militated against the city. Either it has ereated impression among taxpayers that they have cleared all their obligations for the current year, or it has drained them of tax funds, city officials opined.

Deadline for payment of all current taxes—whether county, state, school or city—is Friday evening. Meanwhile, prospective voters were rallying to appeals to acquire poll taxes. Tuesday noon the total had jumped to 2,081 polls plus 80 exemptions. It was a gain of around 200 over the previous day. However, the figure was approximately 30 under the same date two

Rumania Gets Purging From New Leaders

BUCHAREST, Jan. 28 (49-M. Malaxa, wealthy Rumanian munitions magnate, was placed on trial today on a charge of alding and abetting last week's Iron Guard

The trial started as Premier General Ion Antonescu, from a sick-bed, gave orders to his newly formed military government to take whatever steps were necessary to insure the maintenance of order throughout the country.

Soldiers, still on duty in Bu-charest streets, were instructed to shoot on the spot, with no questions asked, any person found possessing a machine-gun. Police said that the Iron Guard mayor of one provincial town had confessed he and his wife killed and robbed 80 persons. Army headquarters announced that weapons already confiscated from captured rebels and their headquarters included 696 machineguns, 128 sawed off shotguns, 2,844 rifles, 1,964 revolvers and some

Cannot Be Repealed

I Timothy 6:10—For the love of noney is the root of all evil. In 1884 Frances E. Willard wrote the Polygiot Petition, which was addressed to the "Governments of the World" and signed by seven and one-half million persons from fifty countries. This was the first world-wide organized effort made by women against ALCOHOL and OPIUM.

The concluding paragraph in that historic document is as apropos today as when penned in the long ago:

"We therefore come to you with the united voices of women of every land, beseeching you to raise the standard of the laws to that the safeguards and sanctions of the State from the drink traffic and the opium trade, and to protect our homes by the total prohibition of these curses of civilization throughout all the territory over which your government extenda." Since that day these substances have been scientifically classified as parcettes. as narcotics. According to a stan-dard medical dictionary a narcotic is "Any drug that produces sleep and at the same time relieves sideration of the suppression of the traffic in opium and cocaine and their derivatives and marihuana. As yet no world agreement exists concerning alcohol, the most accessible of narcotics.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Comfort Stomach, too

When constipation brings on said indigestion, stomach upset, bloating, diazy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour tasts and bad breath, your stomach is probably "crying the blues" because your bowels don't move. It calls for Laxative-Senna to pull the trigger on those lasy bowels, combined with Syrup Pepsin to save your touchy stomach from further distress. For years, many Doctors have used pepsin compounds as vehicles, or carriers to make other medicines agreeable to your stomach. So be sure your laxative contains Syrup Pepsin. Insist on Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna combined with Syrup Pepsin. See how wonderfully the Laxative Senna wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your intestines to bring welcome relief from constipation. And the good old Syrup Pepsin makes this laxative so comfortable and easy ed your stomach. Even finicky children love the taste of this pleasant family laxative. Buy Dr. Caldwell's Laxative Senna at your druggist today. Try one laxative that comforts your stomach, too.

Driver's License Law Needed

Not many of the tasks confronting the legislaure are more important than that of rewriting the drivers' license law so as to make it a more effective ald to traffic safety. In Texas, as in practically all other states, lawmakers have accepted the basic principle of the license plan, whih is that th operaof an automobile is a privilege and not a right; that the privilege, furthermore, should be reserved te those who show themselves worthy of it. Between the principle itself and the framing of a law to give full effectiveness to it, there are difficulties which one of these has to do with the procedure by which an incompetent autoist may be deprived of his license. The existing procedure is uncertain and cumbersome. One of the worst features of it is that an autoist who receives a suspended sentence for drunken driving rosome other offense cannot be deprived of his license. The courts have held that ice there is no final judgment in a case in which entence is suspended, the autoist must be allowed retain his license. The condition arising out of that decision can be corrected by legislation, and one of the provsions of the pending bill would correct it.

A more troublesome problem is that of suspending a license pending court action. Under existing provisions, it is not diffcult, as a rule, for a lawvolating autoist to escape suspension or cancellation of his license. The bill now pending would give the state highway patrol much broader authority than it was has. In this respect it is similar to the laws in effect in most other states, which authorize highway officers to suspend, and in some instances to cancel, drivers' licenses.

We believe that it would be unwise to give the public safety department the authority to cancel a license, but that the authority to suspend licenses should be conferred, with proper safeguards. The right of the autoist to take the matter into the courts should not, of course, be abridged. So far, the drivers' license system in this state has been little more than a registration of autoist. Those who do not obtain licenses are able, too often, to get by with it. There is need of a law that has some sharp teeth in it. In every state where a strong law has been enacted there has been a reduction in traffic accidents.

Tux, Black Tie Lose Ground In Washington

By JACK STINNETT WASHINGTON-Footnotes for

Opening wedge of what might be the political death of the "tux and black tie"-at least at presidential electors' banquets-was hammered home by James H. Hammond, Columbia, S. C., lawyer and one of that state's elect-

Unhappy at the thought of s ing so formally informal, Mr. Hammond informed the committee that he would not attend in any such garb. In part, Mr. Hammond protested thus:

"As Prometheus from his rock, with the moths plucking out its ritals, hange my tux and tie. To the ambitionless waiter, who never hopes to be the head, I relegate my tux and tie.

Where has democracy gone in such stringent regulations as tux and tie? All of us have howled democracy! Liberty! Freedom!, and during the campaign there was no mention of tux and black

"The every echo of our opponents still rings back: 'Regimentation' — as though they were forewarned of tuxes and ties. Was there a fifth or fifteenth columnist in our ranks who betrayed to our enemy the advance plans of this banquet, where, all dressed up as 'chorus Johnnies,' tuxes and ties?"

Under such a flood of indigna tion, the banquet committee wilted like a wing collar on a sultry night and the number of electors who followed Mr. Hammond's bold, but unstarched, front probably would have been described by Emily Post as "shocking."

Outgoing Governor Homer Holt was to relinquish office when Governor Neely took over. Governor Neely pulled a political rast one. He took the cath of office at midnight January 12 and a second later appointed Dr. Joseph Rosier, former president of the National Education Association, to succeed him as senator. to be outdone, Governor who already had appointed Clarence E. Martin, former president of the American Bar Association, to succeed Neely - not once, but in two proclamationsissued a third, dated "a moment after 12, midnight, January 13."

Pive times before in its history as a state, West Virginia has hatched up contests for seats, but Senator Connally's committee on eges and elections admits that the sixth is the all-time noggin itcher. It's up to the committo make a recommendation on it's up to the senate to seat whom it pleases, But what hat gets me is that although Governor Neely and ex-Governor Holt are reportedly mad as hops at each other, their appointees, who undoubtedly are going to be most personally affected by outcome of the contest, are affectionate cronies and to all outappearances are having

But nobody goes anymore. For some reason it has become passe. There used to be times when the court showed to packed galleries every night in the week. Those were the days when it was "fachlanable" to attend, and to be seen there, and to discuss it with your friends. The newspapers kept photographers there to spot the celebs as they came in. Often the drama that went on there made Broadway look

Night court is just like any other court with the exception that it is held after dark, that only minor disorders are heard, and that the routine is enlivened by magistrates who know how to play to audiences as well as any actor.

One of the best color stories ever written was called "Night Court." It was such an eloquent piece of writing that Christopher Morley included it in his collected essays and wrote an interesting explanatory footnote to it. The story was about a girl who had been brought into night court charged with loitering on the street. She hadn't done anything wrong. But she was lonely, and she craved excitement, and she permitted herself to be caught by a policeman and taken itno court. She knew she would be fined. That didn't matter. The excitement of, for once, being the center of attention, of her one moment of importancewas compensation enough for

It was his third offense. It had been proved that he was a heavy property owner, that he had money in two banks, well able to take care of himself. After this they sent him up for a severe spell.

There was, too, a boy and a girl, from Harlem, who had attempted to settle their quarrel by tossing a little acid at one another. When the girl missed with the acid she used a razor on the boy's arm. He was grinning. He wasn't mad. "Jes a little scrap, judge-one of them things," he

Chapter Nine Lunch With The Boss

"I'm afraid," David remembered aying, "that the pipes which used to bring the water down from the spring are all rusty and clogged. But I'll see what I can do."

David now turned an invoice sheet and went on with his check-ing. Not a bad idea, having a place to swim when the hot weather set in. But like everything else, money was the chief issue. It would probably take quite a sum to put the pool in order,

He heard a footfall behind him, and turned to see Mr. Powers. "Hello, David!" the lumberman greeted. "That's a beautiful lot of ine we're getting off in this ship-"Yes, sir," said David, "it is.

Smells good, too, doesn't it?"
Mr. Powers breathed deeply.
Nothing more fragrant than the odor of clean lumber," he said. And then: "By the way, J've just gotten hold of a very good book on reforestation. I thought you might like to read it, since our talk the other day about the time when all the rees would be felled."

"Thanks," said David. "I would ike to read it." He grinned. "I had a dream the other night, in which was wandering through a huge tract of land on which was nothbut endless tree-stumps. And all at once I seemed to hear a voice saying, 'Please plant a new tree every time you cut down one of us.' It sure got me to thinking." "I've seen just such a tract of land in reality," Mr. Powers said. I tell you, come on up to the house o lunch with me! I'll give you the book, and you can have a look at the rejuvenated tennis court, Margo's been getting it in chape. Maye you two can get in a set or

"Are you sure 'it won't inter-fere with Margo's plans?" David asked. "Having a guest for lunch on such short notice?" "Certainly not," said Mr. Pow-

A short time later he was in the tumber plant office. He had just begun a typed tabulation of the ipment of lumber he had been checking out in the yard, when the lephone rang.

"For you, David," said someone who answered it. "Thanks," said David, He walked over and took the receiver, "Hel-

"Couldn't I come over to your place this evening?" David asked.
"Of course," said Polly, "unless

That, David thought, didn't sound a bit like Polly. The slight tinge of sarcasm he detected in her remark wasn't characteristic of Polly-not

"There's no danger of that," h said. "Girls like Margo don't date up smalltown guys like me."
"No?" Again that tinge of sarcasm. "I'm afraid you don't know very much about women. But I'll ook for you around eight."
"I'll be there!" David assured.

"Can't you tell me now what's on nd-and then discuss it detail this evening? "I'd rather not," said Polly. "Not ver the telephone-

"Okay, then-Tonight at eight." David hung up the receiver and went back to his typing. Something was bothering Polly. He could tell by the tone of her voice. It was probably the same thing that had been bothering her the other evening out at the Inn. It worried him. He wished that he hadn't told Mr. Powers that would go up to the house for his lunch hour . . . He would much rather lunch at the tearoom, and find out what was on Polly's mind. He was even tempted to break the engagement, ask Mr. Powers if he could make it some other day. And yet he didn't like to do this. After all, Mr. Powers was his boss, and he was trying to be kind and help-

Finally he forced himself to pu everything out of his mind but the work at hand. He finished the tabulation just as Mr. Powers cam out of his private office to say that Margo was expecting them at twelve-thirty sharp.

And presently he was scated in the long, paneled dining room of the Powers house up on the hill. "I personally selected every piece of oak that went into those panels." Mr. Powers said with pride. "A lot of people go to Eu-rope and buy the paneled walls of some castle, but not Andy Pow-
