she was sending to his parents.

Phillipa looked up at her with malicious satisfaction. If she had to come, it couldn't have been at a more opportune time, the girl thought.

"Oh, good afternoon, Mrs. Converse," she said smilingly, and ceased her typing.

Natalie smiled back at her. She was a little breathless and flushed from hurrying, and from the pleasant anticipation of seeing Alan in his own office again. It would be like an echo from the past—from the days of their happiness.

Her excitement enhanced her beauty. Phillipa was furiously conscious of her exquisiteness and of the fact that all eyes were upon her. The girls would be laughing up their sleeves, at her, Phillipa, she knew.

Her fury almost penetrated to the surface. It was bitterest gail to her to see Natalie there. Still she said, politely: "Mr. Converse is busy, but I will tell him you are here, if you like."

"Oh, no, don't bother," Natalie exclaimed, and took a nearby seat; "I'll wait." She picked up a magazine and opened it, for she too was aware that she was an object of general interest. It embarrassed her a trifle, for she guessed that these girls probably knew something of her marital difficulties. Alan had often warned her against making scenes in his office—telling her that all offices were hotbeds of gossip.

She tried to think of more agreeable subjects—other office scenes—scenes that Alan had made, for instance. She buried her face a little lower over the magazine as she recalled the way he had laughed at her fear that someone would open his door and surprise her in his arms. And the more she had protested, the tighter he had held her and the harder he had kissed her.

It was a delicious pastime, living over those moments again. A vagrant thought, coming unobtrusively, remained in her mind as she sat there, and grew into a poignant longing.

She closed her eyes and let herself dream that it might come true. She would go through that door and Alan would fold her close as he used to do. He'd kiss her "bewitching chin," her "adorable nose," her "alluring lips," and "enchancing eyes."

Her lids flew open. Alan was at his door. She felt her heart go pit-a-pat. And then—she saw Bernadine!

Neither Bernadine nor Alan saw her. She might have been a graven image, so suddenly still had she become. For the scene she was witnessing was a petrifying one, to her.

Plainly Bernadine was emotionally upset. Had they had a love scene? A quarrel perhaps? A knife-like pang shot through Natalie's heart. Had she sat out here dreaming in a fool's paradise, while actually the thing she was dreaming of was being enacted at that very moment with her rival in her role?

Suddenly, under the overpowering stress of her emotion, she closed her eyes, shutting out the blackness that rose before her. When she opened them again, Alan was standing with his hand on Bernadine's arm, speaking to her in low, soothing tones.

Natalie's imagination, inflamed as it was by her suppressed jealousy of Bernadine, saw in it a love-like touch. Then he took Bernadine's hands, holding them one on the other and gently patting the one on top.

Natalie could scarcely bear it; especially when Bernadine turned against Alan, her physical weakness appearing to Natalie like a demonstration of her affection for him.

Alan went with Bernadine to the outer door. "You shouldn't have come out," he scolded her, but they had passed by Natalie and she did not hear. "If you'd just listen to me, Bernadine, you wouldn't have these losses."

"I know, Alan, but they came from the same source my luck came from, so how was I to know?"

"What's your broker for?" Alan grumbled. "To take me to the elevator," Bernadine suggested. She was smiling, but it was really necessary for her to lean on Alan.

Natalie watched them go. And slowly her lovely mouth became contorted as it had not been for months. She was standing when Alan returned, her head held high, a cold brightness glittering in her eyes.

Alan was close before he saw her. "Why, Nata . . ." he began, then her expression warned him to stop. He divined at once that something was radically wrong. His first care was to seek privacy for what he surmised was to come.

He took her firmly by the arm. "Have you waited long?" he asked for the benefit of the office, quite forgetting that Phillipa should have received some special thought. But how could he remember, with one of Natalie's tempers coming on, that he had told Phillipa, to insure what peace he had, that he and Natalie had not become fully reconciled, even though they were under one roof? Phillipa hadn't believed him, but she saw him now leading Natalie, with seeming pleasure, into his private office, she was more than ever convinced that he had lied.

What happened in that office, after Alan closed the door, would have mollified her considerably had she witnessed it. For Alan and Natalie quarreled bitterly.

All her carefully built-up restraint vanished under the lash of her jealousy, which, now that she had let it go, whipped her into a veritable madness of passion.

Alan tried at first to explain, to tell her about Bernadine's heavy stock losses, to show her that it was only friendly encouragement that she had seen him offer Bernadine. But Natalie would not listen. Then Alan too had lost his temper, and they quarreled in earnest.

Natalie accused him wildly of this and of that. He did not deny her charges, and he said "bitter, biting things in return."

Phillipa, outside, keeping her back turned to the other girls, agonized under the suspense of waiting for something to happen. She consulted her watch every other minute. The time that Natalie stayed in Alan's office seemed to her interminable.

Natalie and Alan had lost track of time. When at last Natalie's physical strength could no longer support her mood it changed. She knew suddenly she couldn't fight any longer—that she had to leave, or subside into humiliating weakness.

Alan let her go without protesting. He did not even go to the first door with her. This Phillipa noted with a flare of exultation when Natalie walked out alone. Through the open door, she could see Alan, turning toward a window, and there was in his manner something that added still further to her satisfaction.

Phillipa throttled her inclination to go in to him as she had meant to do, before she saw Natalie and knew that they had quarreled. She heard a faint chattering behind her. A discussion of Natalie, no doubt. A feline smile

Swap 200 Lbs. "Soda" For 18 Bushels Corn

Yields Increased 100 Per Cent in Demonstrations on 526 Southern Farms.

That corn yields in the south may easily be doubled is conclusively shown by the results of 526 sidedressing demonstrations conducted by Southern farmers during the last two years.

A summary of the tests shows that these farmers added 18.2 bushels to their yields and $13.08 to their net profits from each acre. They sidedressed the corn with Chilean nitrate of soda at an average rate of 200 pounds an acre when the plants were about knee-high.

The average increase in yield resulting from the side-dressing was just about the equivalent of the average corn yield in the South, as shown by Government figures.

wreathed Phillipa's lips as she, calmly now, went on with her work.

The scales were tipping in her favor again. As she had hoped, Natalie had resented Bernadine's presence there. Suddenly, she frowned. She didn't like Alan's attentions to Bernadine herself. But she knew that Bernadine needed sympathy. Her losses on the market had been exceedingly heavy and suffered as a result of her refusal to take Alan's advice in the matter.

Phillipa was not really troubled over Bernadine. But she decided she would like Alan to drop her when it was all over between him and Natalie. That little Bobby was a pest.

She worked on until closing time, without giving any of the girls a chance to talk to her. But as she saw, when they were preparing to leave, that she could not avoid them, and Alan was still in his office, she picked up her notebook and went in to him.

He was sitting at his desk, staring fixedly at nothing. His face

Pioneer Fertilizer Used for 100 Years

Four generations of American farmers have used commercial fertilizers to improve their crop production. The first of the inorganic fertilizers used in this country was nitrate of soda, now widely known as Chilean nitrate. This product occurs as a natural deposit only in the barren rainless plateau of northern Chile. It was introduced into the United States in 1839, at a time when only lime and manure of the inorganic substances now used for farm purposes were known to the pioneer farmers.

Time to Side-Dress

One of the most critical times in the life of cotton and corn comes about 35 to 40 days after planting. Experiment stations have shown that these plants are in particular need of nitrate nitrogen at this stage of growth. The use of quick-acting nitrogen as a sidedressing at this time keeps the plants green, vigorous and fruiting during July and early August.

was a perfect reflection of his hopelessness.

Phillipa came over and stood beside him. "It's closing time," she said softly. And then, as he did not answer: "Is there anything I can do?"

"What?" Alan looked at her blankly.

"I said 'is there anything I can do?" Phillipa repeated. Alan muttered: "No." His head had fallen forward again, his chin on his chest. He was slumped deep in his chair, utterly dejected. Phillipa seated herself quietly in the chair that was for her use. She said nothing. Presently Alan looked at her. "Let me alone," he begged. Phillipa reached out and put a hand on his arm. "Please, Alan," she coaxed. "I know you're in trouble. I'm going to help you. 'YOU are?' Alan's voice was jeeringly inflected. "Oh, you don't believe I know anything about love, do you?" Phillipa flung back at him. "Well, (Continued on last page)

FATHER COLLINS HONORED

RANGER Texas, May 28.—A gathering that filled the green room of the Gholson hotel to capacity assembled Monday night at a banquet to honor the Rev. M. J. Collins on the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination as a priest. The Rt. Rev. Joseph B. Lynch, bishop of Dallas, delivered a magnificent address in which he declared that Ranger had lived up to its traditions once more. He commended the people of Eastland and Ranger for honoring the silver jubilee of Father Collins who had planted the flowers of faith, hope and charity and had caused them to bloom and give fragrance.

Edw. R. Maher was toastmaster and he filled the position in splendid fashion. Mayor John Thurman paid a tribute to Father Collins. The Very Rev. V. Graffeo of Corsicana congratulated the guest of honor on having attained 25 years of service and added that he could appreciate the Rev. Collins' feelings on this occasion as a priest three years ago he had observed his own silver jubilee.

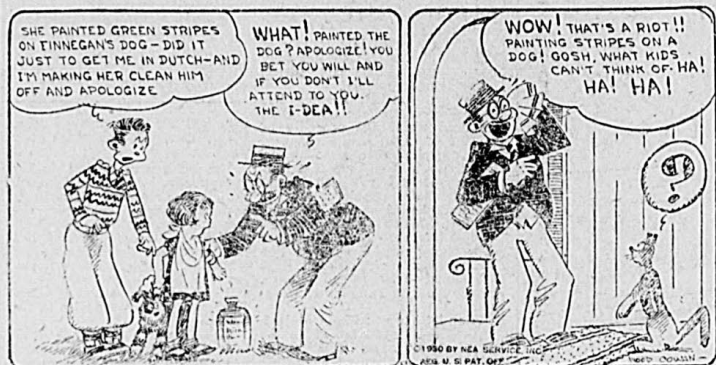

The Rev. Louis J. Harrington of Dallas expressed felicitations and said he was looking forward soon to commemorating 40 years as a priest.

An excellent address was given by the Rev. C. J. McCarty, president of Dallas university. James Collins, grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, spoke briefly and presented Father Collins with a purse as an expression of affection from his parishioners.

In words that were simple but filled with happiness, the honored guest expressed his appreciation for the co-operation of the members of the church and to them he modestly gave the credit for the progress made.

Others present included Msgr. B. H. Diamond of Dallas, Msgr. J. F. O'Connor of Fort Worth, Rev. James Burnes of Weatherford and Rev. Ruano of Ranger.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS WILL BE TAKEN UP

ABILENE, May 28.—Announcement that the official program for the twelfth annual convention in Abilene, May 28, 29, 30 and 31 of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce has been completed, came today from the convention arrangements office of J. E. T. Peters.

On Wednesday, May 28, the convention spotlight will be on a program at McMurry college, a concert by visiting bands, preliminaries in the "My Town" speaking contest and an informal dance.

The opening business session at the new Paramount theatre will come on Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. Only two formal addresses are scheduled. Governor Dan Moody will speak at 9:45 o'clock on the Thursday morning program and Carl Williams of Washington, D. C., cotton member of the federal farm board, will appear in behalf of the Texas Cotton Co-operative association.

Many hours are being allowed during the Abilene convention for matters of regional organization business. Important matters of state legislative prominence are to come before the body on the convention floor. Issues that will come to the front during the meeting have already been put before groups from member cities of the W. T. C. C. and the number of votes that are to be polled from the various divisions are being completed.

Herbert L. Clarke of Long Beach, Calif., director of the United States' largest municipal band, will supervise convention musical offerings—an attractive item on the program. Word was received by convention headquarters of the death of Mrs. Clarke, resulting from injuries received in an automobile accident recently, but the band conductor announced he would not alter his plans to appear on the Abilene program.

Special luncheons and breakfasts are to be held to honor West Texas legislators, newspapermen, visiting chamber of commerce secretaries, the directors and their wives.

and contemporary of O. Henry and a druggist of the old professional school of scientific thoroughness, made his discovery in the early nineties of the last century. After development over a period of some 17 years of experiment and testing, he began intensive marketing operations for the product in 1907. With his two sons he organized the original Vick Chemical Company and began business with a capital of $8,000. He lived to see demand for his product become nationwide and his sons have carried it on to a success that has become world-wide. Vicks has attained leadership in its field with a sale of over 26,000,000 jars yearly in the United States alone and has distribution in over 70 countries abroad. Today, the 500,000 shares of Vick Chemical Company stock is convertible into 465,000 shares of Drug, Inc.—in a ratio of 57-100 for 1—having a market valuation of nearly $40,000,000.

This merger, it is stated, will not affect the management personnel of policies of Vick Chemical Co., which will maintain its individuality in the drug field. H. S. Richardson, chairman of its board of directors, and Lunsford Richardson, president, sons of the founder, will continue as its directing heads; and H. S. Richardson will be added to the directing board of Drug, Inc.

The future policy of Vick Chemical Co. is outlined as one of expansion. For a number of years its program has included the development of companion products of Vicks VapoRub, and one of the controlling factors in entering the merger is stated as the greater facilities for the perfection of such products. In addition, the alliance with Drug, Inc. is considered a stabilizing factor for Vick stockholders through a much wider diversification of interests.

Drug, Inc., headed by A. H. Diebold, is the world's largest holding company in the drug field. Besides controlling a large number of nationally known trade-marked drug products, it owns the Liggett Drug Stores and a controlling interest in Boots, largest retail drug outlet of England and Continental Europe. The action of Continental stockholders today in voting to merge with Drug, Inc., was a final ratification of a recommendation by its directors a short time ago.

The Vick expansion program for development of other products will be carried out, it is announced, under the personal direction of W. Y. Preyer, first vice-president of Vick Chemical Company and actively associated with the direction of the company for many years.

Dixie's Corn Yields Rival Nation's Best

The Corn Belt, long famed for its economical corn production, is in danger of losing some of its laurels. For instance, a Dixie farmer, W. Y. Thrash, of Walnut Grove, Miss., might well contest the honor of producing the highest yield of corn during 1929. In an official contest his average yield on a 3-acre field was 180.52 bushels of shelled corn an acre. In making this exceptional record, Thrash made liberal use of fertilizers. He side-dressed twice with Chilean nitrate of soda during the season, using 200 pounds an acre at each application.

A striking illustration in economic crop production was furnished by another southern grower, Paul Simmons, 18-year-old boy of Plant City, Fla., who won the 4-H Club corn contest of that state. He produced corn at a net cost of 18 cents a bushel. His yield on a one-acre plot was 111 bushels. The only fertilizer young Simmons used was 200 pounds of Chilean nitrate, which was applied as a side-dressing when the corn was knee-high.

Watson, assistant United States District Attorney for the southern district of Texas, announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Congress from the 15th Congressional district. It will be the first time in recent years that a Republican has sought election to Congress from this district. Watson will oppose Congressman John N. Garner and is said to have the support of R. B. Creager, Republican National Committee from Texas.
