Speaking of how to whip the depression, as they call it, how about the example set by Dalton Johnson...

Since taking the job in October Dixon not only bought all his clothing, all his school supplies...

A lot depends upon the point of view you happen to have upon any public matter. For instance, the Baytown Chamber of Commerce...

We know a lot of local Chamber of Commerce who certainly are in favor of those suits (another instance, by the way, wherein the fact is demonstrated that all Chambers of Commerce are not bound by the action of others).

But not so the Baytown folks. They have mailed throughout the state a letter pointing out that the Humble paid Baytown school taxes totaling $180,000 for 1931...

So, these facts considered, the Baytown people express the belief that the company deserves considerable credit for "its services to mankind, and as an asset to the state of Texas."

So, its all in the viewpoint. As, for instance—suppose the attorney general has filed suit to put the Texas & Pacific Railway company out of business...

The oil business, as often predicted, is going to be the first to stage a genuine comeback.

But, one thing that always has struck us as a great testimonial to the dependability of oil people is the fact that more money changes hands, more work is done in the oil business on verbal agreements...

A veteran drilling contractor once told us that at one time an oil company owed him $50,000—and not a word had been written, nothing had been signed. Still, he got his money all right.

300 Ballots Cast To 1 p. m.; Six Aspirants

Opinion Advanced Votes Evenly Divided Between Two Groups

Balloting in the city election—three of the five members of the board of city commissioners are being selected—reached slightly more than 300 at 1 p. m. Tuesday. Conversations with voters casting ballots during the morning indicated they were about evenly divided between the two groups of candidates.

A late edition of The Herald, carrying results of today's election, will be on the streets a few minutes after the polls close at 7 p. m.

'administration' ticket, was opposed by three other candidates—S. B. Stone, H. V. Jones and L. L. (Roy) Freeman.

Number of votes cast during the morning was practically the same as in last year's election, when a total of 1,000 ballots were cast during the entire day.

The polls close at 7 p. m. In 1930, the last year in which three of the five members of the commission were chosen, a total of 753 votes were cast—227 of them by 1 p. m.

Last year, when two commissioners were named at the polls 256 ballots were cast by 1:30 p. m. J. B. Pickle, who has served as mayor, or chairman of the commission, for the past two years, with C. E. Talbot and Joseph Edwards are the members of the commission running for additional two-year terms.

Edwards was appointed a few months ago to succeed L. L. Bugg, who resigned.

Mr. Jones and Mr. Freeman, Texas & Pacific engineers, and Mr. Stone, dealer in real estate and former dry line operator, are the other candidates.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Battle Is Not Won

It is too early to sound the tocsin and announce that Congress has balanced the budget. All that has happened so far is that a sufficient semblance of order and discipline has been restored in the House to bring it to make a general declaration of principle. The House has pledged itself. But the application of that principle and the fulfillment of that pledge are not yet in sight. The political difficulties have not yet been surmounted. The pressure of special interests has not yet been defeated.

If, then, the country relaxes because it is led to suppose that Mr. Garner's speech and the remarks of the insurgents mean that the House is really ready, as some are saying hopefully, to balance the budget no matter what it may cost in the way of sacrifice, the surrender of personal opinion or abandonment of positions taken, a rude awakening is ahead of it. All we can be reasonably sure of thus far is that the House will throw together some sort of revenue bill which theoretically balances the present budget, and then pass the matter on to the Senate.

There is, as yet, no real assurance that the new tax bill, which has been so hastily contrived over the week-end, will really do what it is intended to do. The burden of proof is on its sponsors. We know that in the considered opinion of the Ways and Means Committee a very different bill was called for, and something more than the emotions of Tuesday afternoon are needed to prove that the new measure is what is purports to be. The estimation of tax yields in times like these is at best a very difficult and tricky business. A tax bill hastily thrown together in the hysterical atmosphere of the last few days must be looked at skeptically.

But even if we take the best possible view of the new bill we cannot avoid asking for more specific assurances than those which Speaker Garner persuaded the House to give. Did the House mean when the members rose from their seats to declare in favor of balancing the budget that the House will vote the economies which are part of the program? Did the House mean that it will vote no new appropriations beyond those in the program? Finally, how do the members who rise in their seats square this pledge to the nation with the report that 167 members are pledged to the bonus bill with another 177 listed as non-committal?

For if, in addition to the billion dollars the veterans are already receiving, Representatives vote there another two billions the pledge to balance the budget is sheer deception. The only question is: who is to be deceived, the veterans or the country? If the payment to the veterans is to be made in the same kind of scrip or depreciated paper it is the veterans who are to be deceived while the country's credit is injured. If the plan is to vote the payments on the theory that the Senate or the President will save the country from the folly of the scheme, then it is cowardice as well as deception. If the plan is to be sincere with the veterans and really pay them this exorbitant sum, then the pledge to balance the budget was broken before it was given.

The prospect now is that there will be tedious and complicated debate and maneuvering many weeks before the financial policy of the government has actually been established. The problem is to maintain a vigilant and resolute public opinion in this interval. For it is our habit as a people to become quickly excited and no less quickly bored and diverted. The campaign which has to be waged will call for the utmost perseverance. For such a sustained effort in the face of all the plausible distractions which will be presented it is necessary to have firm and simple convictions as to the reasons why it is necessary to balance the budget.

The whole world, including America, is suffering from a stupendous fall in the prices of commodities. This fall took place after nearly the whole world, including governments, corporations and individuals, had borrowed enormous sums of money at the old higher prices. Thus, nearly all debtors everywhere are in great difficulty and as a result almost all creditors are either in difficulty or at least deeply hesitant to lend any more money. So great is the volume of debts which cannot be paid at present prices that the private credit system of the whole world is almost immobilized.

There remains, however, the public credit of the United States which rests, of course, on nothing but the fact that the American people still have enormous resources and that Congress has the legal right to tax them. With the drying up of private credit it has been necessary to mobilize the public credit in the effort to preserve a large part of the nation's economy from bankruptcy.

This use of public credit is obviously an emergency measure. It cannot cure the depression. For that steps will have to be taken which neither party in Congress has as yet seriously considered. All the present measures can do is to protect sounder enterprise from having to liquidate and by limitation to depress prices and deepen the depression.

It follows that if the emergency use of public credit has effective the public credit must be beyond reproach. But if the government has to borrow great sums of money to pay its current expenses if the government's own revenue are not enough to pay its bills, the government is deprived of the strength to support the private credit of the nation. It becomes another corporation in the red and by all odds the greatest. Therefore the balancing of the budget is peculiarly necessary. The situation is the exact opposite of the war years when the government was running huge deficits in a country where prices and profits were booming. Today prices are collapsed and profits are largely deficits and it is the government itself which must be solved if private credit is to be tided over.

The balancing of the budget and the measures to sustain private credit can not of themselves do more than prevent things from becoming worse. But it is necessary to do that if they are ever to become better. For if the government credit is impaired, the situation will be lost to all central control and the world crisis will be liquidated here not by orderly adjustment and concerted and considered measures, but by a great financial and economic disaster. This is no alarmist prophecy. This is the lesson of the experience of dozens of countries, and it experiences, I think the judgment of experienced students of the matter.

The problem is understood better abroad than it is here, for since the war Europe has twice gone through the experience which confronts us. When Europeans see dollars on hearing that Congress may not balance the budget when or start selling American securities they are not moved by hostility to America. They have put their money in America because they hoped it would be safe here. When they take fright and start withdrawing it they are moved by the memories of the agonies they themselves have suffered because their legislators lacked the courage to protect the national credit. They do not believe there is any escape by which the United States can escape the consequences of the same failure. Their action is, therefore, genuinely significant as a practical judgment on the merits of the question.

Darrow Presented In Motion Picture Due Here Friday

On Friday there will be shown in Ritz Theatre a film unlike any other previously produced or exhibited. This is "The Mystery of Life," Universal Film Company's picturization of the theory of evolution as interpreted by Clarence Darrow, the eminent criminal lawyer.

Regardless of one's convictions regarding evolution, it is said, this picture will be found one of absorbing interest. No effort is made to convert anyone to a belief in evolution. The film is not being presented as propaganda but as an entertainment which opens to the beholder a vast store of knowledge.

The picture takes one from the probable origin of this planet in the limitless universe and traces life hereon, from the simple forms of single cell animal life that first resulted from electro-chemical disturbances in the cooling swamps of our early cosmic era, to the forms of life more complex such as the sea anemone and other jelly-like fishes to the jointed animals, the crustaceans and the vertebrates.

To substantiate the theory that different vertebrates must have had a common origin, several animals are shown in embryo form at corresponding stages of development, and it is seen that fish, turtle, bird, pig, monkey and human child look uncannily alike. Mutation, as shown in several laboratory specimens, would account for the evolving of various forms from a common ancestor.

The love life of various creatures illustrates the process of sexual selection and natural selection by which species were improved. Fossil remains which enable a reconstruction of prehistoric monsters and early Man, are introduced. And the social evolution of Man furnish some of the most interesting sequences. There are early cave dwellers of the Pleistocene period and later lake dwellers, giving evidences of Man's climb, his upward striving to his present eminence.

The film is brought to a close by a conjecture on the ending of the world, and remarks by Clarence Darrow which make it easy of real theory of evolution if one is so inclined, without disrespect to the eminent criminal lawyer.

a lot of others have. My bill once showed I owed $4.15. They said I used 7,710 gallons. I've got one little rose bush at my yard and it looks like a t. b. And I don't take a bath except when my wife makes me. I'll bet I didn't use 710 gallons and I defy 'em to meet me on it.

"I wanted to put some super-visors at the election tomorrow. You know, there're lots of alphas between the cup and lip. The city attorney asked me if I didn't think the people they had to hold the election were all right. He said the only way we could get super-visors would be to file requests with the city commission and let it appoint them. I told them I wouldn't be any better off that way than I was before. Tom Coffee at the request of the city manager gave the qualifications for voters in the election. I asked an older lawyer if he didn't say before one election that all you needed to vote was a watch or some other piece of personal property. He said he didn't, that you've got to have a poll tax receipt.

Assessments

"The city manager said in The Herald they found 12 houses that had not been assessed for taxes. I'll bet the truth were known a third of the property in this town has not been assessed. I'm going to put an assessor to work, and a board of equalization that's at least as straight as I am. I'm liable to be murdered if I get in there and it might not be best for me but it will be for you if I am elected.

"If you are against high taxes, high water rates and equalization of taxes don't vote for me the last three on the ballot tomorrow. They did us a great favor by putting our names last. If you want to vote for good government scratch the first three names on the ballot. Vote as you please. I please to vote for good government."

Tax Collections

"They say 70 per cent of the city taxes were paid. I venture to say 35 per cent of those who did pay borrowed the money. The Herald sure banks on the city manager. He's a great man. He's done a lot of good. You know, that city manager's organization is the stiffest proposition in the country. They bring in a fellow who hasn't got a foot of land in town and I don't think he's got a vote coming in this election. Yes, these city managers are great fellows. Take 'em all, and they'll break any city you've got to furnish them with money and plenty of it. They tell me one city manager came here that sank San Angelo several millions. Carr at Fort Worth sank millions. The bigger the bond issues they get over the better the politicians like 'em, so Carr went up for a bigger salary to some city in California. If we're going to have a city manager I believe men here have just as much sense as anybody. I don't believe in sending out of Big Spring for a city manager. I don't blame Mr. Spence for taking this job—I might take it myself if I had sense enough. The Herald says he's brought us out of the kinks. You'll think kinks before this million-dollar indebtedness is paid. The Herald says vote bonds. So long as this depression is on and unless it is absolutely necessary if I ever vote for another bond issue I hope to be struck dead.

"I had a lot of compliments on the streets after my little talk up here the other night. They said my talk had done some good. That their water bills had been cut in half. The Chamber of Commerce hates me worse than the devil hates holy water. I have nothing against them.

"Inconsistent"

"Somebody said the Catholic people would not vote for me because I was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. They're inconsistent in that. I signed a paper to vote for a Knight of Columbus for president. I'll go half way with anybody but I'll be damned if I'll go the other half. I had dozens of friends try to get me to use the soft pedal. They told me not to get hard. One man who is going to support me tried to get me not to speak to night. I said, 'boy, you don't know me.'

"Most all the cities are cutting expenses. I have here news items from Houston and Fort Worth telling how they are cutting expenses. But when I raise my voice for lower salaries I'm a bolshevik. If that's being a bolshevik then I'm 100 per cent a bolshevik. I expect to investigate a lot of things if elected—things my friends have told me of since I got into this race.

"They wouldn't give me supervisory but I warn them now that I have reason to believe that I came near being elected, although defeated. I'll have those ballot boxes opened by a court of justice. I don't know, the election may be carried on all right. I hope it goes off fair and square. They cut me out of 200 votes when they said you had to have a poll tax receipt.

"I think I know how these other boys, who are running with me will vote. I spoke for them the other time. I'm not electioneering for them but I want you to consider those boys if you think we stand for right vote for the last three on the ballot.

Cut Him Out

"I'll cut off the city manager. I figure on putting that on another job for $50 or $75 a month more and cut out this four or five hundred dollar a month salary.

"A business man told Billy Davies when he was running for commissioner that he couldn't support him because he would throw a monkey wrench in the machinery. If I'm elected I won't only throw one monkey wrench in it, I'll throw a whole barrel (cheers). I'll fight your battles for you if you give me a chance.

"The Herald man here was up here before. He printed my speech. I thought he'd print all of it. I wrote him a letter. Some who were not at the meeting said they heard I said I was in favor of low wages. I said that's the biggest lie a man ever uttered. I'll tell you what I did say. I said if I had my pick no man in Big Spring would pick up a pick and shovel for less than 30 cents an hour. Two years ago before that bond election they were

SPORTS ON PARADE

By CURTIS BISHOP

Saturday San Angelo had a track meet. It was a very good meet only there wasn't much opposition. Abilene couldn't enter, you know. The lads over there had gotten in some sort of April Fool's prank and as a result there wasn't anyone to speak of over there but the Big Spring Steers. No, we made a slight mistake. George Delker of San Angelo won first place in the 440 yard dash. Oh, well, the 440 isn't much of a race anyhow.

Tack Dennis had a miserable afternoon. He ran himself out in the high and low hurdles and the 440 and as a result did very poorly in the weight events. He managed, of course, to make 15 points, but then 16 points is no points at all when one is a pointmaker like Tack Dennis. Lloyd Forrester proved to be the siege gun of the local thimble clubs, which is very nice, and which we hope will happen again in the near future. Forrester entered six

Delegates Appointed For Methodist Meeting

The Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist Church met at the church in regular business session Monday afternoon.

All officials made reports of the past month's activities.

Mrs. Russell Manion and Mrs. W. D. McDonald were named as delegates to the North Texas conference which will be held in Abilene on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The members present were Mesdames G. A. Hartman, Manion, Joe Faucett, W. A. Miller, Vitoor Flew-ellen, Fox Stripling, McDonald, L. V. Croft, G. E. Fleeman, J. B. Pickle and C. E. Thomas, Chas. Morris, Pete Johnson, C. A. Schull, and Frank Powell.

Additional Donations To Scenic Drive Fund

Additional donations to the fund for repair of Scenic Drive have been received from Jack Cummings and Lotus Price, B. F. Robbins, who volunteered to raise the fund and oversee the work, using means obtained through the American Legion's unemployment relief committee, has announced that the work is being completed and that he will issue to the public a report of receipts and disbursements.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Few advertisements in your newspaper start that way. Yet most of them are just as personal, and almost as promising.

Manufacturers and merchants must know your needs and wants, or go out of business. They must know, for instance, that about the first of next month you'll be very much interested in a new hat, or a new lamp, or new towels. They must foresee your wishes—and have what you'll want when you want it.

And they do—constantly striving to suit, at the lowest possible prices. Then telling you in advertising of the gifts they have brought from the far corners of the earth, to please Your Royal Highness.

Read the advertisements in this paper. They are addressed to you—personally. They bring you news of better things to have and easier ways to live. Intimate news, of immediate interest.

tested vigorously. But the fight suggested that they notify one of the class presidents, and a capable and determined committee will determine the identity of the offender and deal with him severely.

The favorite punishment dealt to unfortunates who have been captured is to drop them several miles from town on an abandoned highway and leave them to find their way back the best way they can. Almost always they are picked up by friends before they have walked very far, for cars from both classes are on the roads continuously carrying out captives. It is all in fun and almost unanimously is the unwritten code of sportsmanship adhered to. Only occasionally does someone violate the rules and kick out a windshield, slug, or exhibit some other unsportsmanlike trait. Then there is the "kangaroo" court and the "belt line."

There is nothing quiet on this battle front.
