hear it rumored that Eastland hunters are daily going into the wilderness and bringing back to civilization great quantities of venison.

to glow with delight at their success. We are glad new horns can be hanging over the man. We hope new rugs will soon line the soles of multitudes of feet.

see where the editor of the Point Chronicle says, "This is true to brag on and about Van county ribbon can syrup, the community of its kind, but it is done with more vigor and spirit than the 'syrup' editor who is presented with a bucket of the delectable substance by thoughtful syrup maker."

that editor either has brains, memory. He wants a bucket and he doesn't mind asking for it. He detests bush beating. He takes a stand and carries it to his death. An editor can't have time to make editorial. But an editor does time to eat it, provided it is at his office.

is the connection? Deer and venison and syrup, editors editors. Check?

fellow who used to chide that cowboy and now cows, flies over a town and says, "all that air and no port."

and here it circulated that Eastland man climbed a tree to shoot at a deer. Now that's a good idea. We didn't hear it worked.

did hear, however, that the cook on the same hunting came back and said, "Mr. So-and-so, he was scared all the time he was gone, he stayed in the top tree."

it is a good way to hunt deer, though we hadn't thought of it before. Climb into the protective cage of a giant tree, wait the deer comes bounding through the brush and stops beneath the tree, then jump on his back and bulldog him.

PETITIONS BEAR NEARLY 5,000 NAMES

Many Against Commissioners Making Appropriation To Eradicate Predatory Animals

The County commissioners' court at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon, had taken no action on the petitions, presented both for and against the proposal that Eastland county make a suitable appropriation for eradication of predatory animals in the County which have been doing much damage by killing sheep, goats, turkeys and chickens.

Petitions, circulated throughout the county for the proposition, are said to bear some two thousand signatures. While petitions against the proposition are said to bear a fewer number of signatures.

County Judge E. S. Pritchard stated that the Federal government had offered to pay one-third of the salary of one trapper in the County and to furnish bait and traps for as many others trappers as the County saw fit to put to work, should the County decide to make an appropriation for the purpose.

The County Judge Pritchard said, had no funds available at this time for the work since there were none appropriated for such a purpose. He estimated that it would require some $3000 or $4,000.

Opposition to the proposition seems to come largely from the owners of dogs and from others who oppose the move because of added taxation.

LAST CHANCE

How many bricks in a chimney? At a certain price for each, how much would an hour's work amount to?

Yes, we missed it to, but inasmuch as we are not allowed to enter the contest for the $20 cash prize to be awarded, we can't say we care.

The Santa's Chimney contest, which appeared in Sunday's edition of the Telegram, will close Tuesday night. All answers must be in this office by that time. Mail them, bring them, send them or relay them, but see to it that they get here.

Many have been received already. These, however, will not be judged until the final answer has been received.

Look up the contest, work an hour, be original, and send in an answer. Attractiveness counts, neatness does also, and correctness. First prize $10, second $7, third $3.

CRIMINAL CASES START IN 91ST.

Judge Elzo Bean of the 88th district court this morning took up his criminal docket and called a number of cases for trial. Among these was the case of Mrs. Eula Roberts, charged with the theft of a watch valued at $60. This case went to trial at 11:00 o'clock a. m. The defendant pleaded not guilty.

The case of John W. Brawley, charged with possession of liquor, was passed until December 17th, on illness of the defendant.

Pete Spivy, charged with cattle theft, will face trial this afternoon as his case is set for that time.

C. C. Custer and R. L. Custer, both charged with possessing liquor, announced ready for trial as did District Attorney J. Frank Sparks representing the State.

These cases are to be taken up as soon as the court can get to them. The case of the state of Texas vs. Henry Mrashman, charged with burglary, was postponed. In the case of W. H. Baker, charged with possessing liquor, the defendant was ill and the case was postponed until Wednesday morning at 9:00 o'clock. All witnesses in the case were excused until that time.

ALLEGED BALLOT FRAUD PROBE STARTS

The committee announced no session would be held this morning for hearing witnesses but conferences between leaders of the two political factions of the county will be held today to determine what angle of the election fraud charges should be considered first.

RANGER-BRECK CLASH TUESDAY

One of the greatest games of the Oil Belt season will be waged on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 on the Ranger gridiron when the Bulldogs battle furiously to retain a chance at the championship of the district. The Breckenridge Buckaroos, who appear to have regained the form that they showed in early season, will strive valiantly to win the first game that Breckenridge has ever won from Ranger.

The fans—and there will probably be several thousand of them present—will see one of the best balanced backfields in the district perform for Breckenridge. Boon Magness, who is easily the best punter in the loop now that Hammett has been ruled ineligible and is almost entitled to rank as the equal of any punter in the district, will be the Buckaroos' ace. Magness, besides kicking the ball high and far and being able to chunk bullet passes, is a very capable ball toter. He is a hefty lad, weighing around 165. He will be ably assisted by Graham, 170-pound runner, plunger and pass-receiver; Pruitt, a defensive man, and Robinson, a fast man. Aubrey Magness, triple performer, who is a brother of Boon, probably will be seen in action along with Bus Ligon, a cotton-topped boy who can throw them passes; Zarfafonitis, who never carries the ball but is a superlative defensive pastimer; and Carey, a red-headed streak. Zarfafonitis, by the way, is a brother of Jim and George who used to shine for Ranger, and, later, for Breckenridge.

"The Breckenridge-line has been the team's drawback this season. Perhaps that is a rude way to express it but anyway that bulky forward wall—averaging 175 from tackle to tackle—has not performed up to par, as represented by the backfield.

Ranger Bulldogs are going to fight with all their might. They will be battling for a chance to meet the winner of the Abilene-Cisco game—and that means a chance next Saturday to repeat the glorious achievement of 1925 when Ranger won the district crown. The Bulldogs tomorrow will be scrapping too because, if there was nothing else at stake but just a football game, they would want it—especially against their old-time rivals from Breckenridge. Ranger has never lost to the Breckenridge team—and the 1928 team doesn't intend for Breckenridge to get started at winning from them.

go on with the story: She was not tea! He was watching her. "What's the matter," he asked "you like it?" "I stuttered. Her throat and her eyes smarted. She almost choked over the beverage and only a heroic effort had saved her from distress. "Too strong," she managed when she could take away a sip from her lips. "I'm sorry," Alester said. "I have asked you what you'd like to drink." "You don't mind," she said "I'd like tea." Then he said, "with sugar." "Wasn't it at all the way she wanted to act when she got here?" "Where was her in-charge, the woman-of-the-world meant to assume?" "I glanced anxiously at Alester. He apparently he was not no-her splendor. His attention held by someone who was approaching them unseen by her. His face wore a very odd expression. CHAPTER VI. He turned to see who or what brought that queer expression to her face. He saw nothing more startling than an unusually attractive woman, her late twenties perhaps, as toward them.

Leontine Lebaudy had estimated Jerry quickly as an outsider. Jerry decided to be natural. She did not drink and they might as well know it. She wasn't going to apologize for it either. "I never drink intoxicating liquors," she said stiffly and Leontine turned to Alester with uplifted eyebrows. "Are you undertaking her education?" she said. "I think I'd rather learn from Miss Ray how to be good," he answered slowly. Leontine gave him a furious glance. Jerry was aware by this time that they were crossing swords. "Who gave you this table?" Leontine said crossly. "It's reserved for dinner. I didn't want it used." Alester half closed his eyelids but not sufficiently to hide a gleam of amusement in his eyes as he answered. "This table is for me whenever I want it," he said. "You know that, Leontine." To Jerry's amazement the woman he addressed turned a suddenly appealing look upon him. "But you never want it any more, Alester," she said, and Jerry had the sensation of feeling her presence forgotten. "Not since I learned who else reserves it," Alester returned coolly. "I prefer something more exclusive." The woman shrank back as though from a blow, but the next instant she laughed. "Some people can't be dropped, you know," she said almost under her breath. "It isn't safe." Jerry thought she detected a pleading note in her voice, but if it were there, Alester seemed unaware of it. "So far as I know," he said,

"you never tried it. But you can fix up another table. Miss Ray and I will keep this one and stay to dinner." Again that cringe, so fleeting that Jerry was to wonder later if she really had seen it, and Leontine made a motion of resignation. "Let's have some radio music," Alester added. "I'd like to dance." Leontine Lebaudy left them. Jerry felt a twinge of pain in her head and remembered that the doctor had ordered quietude. This was certainly not being quiet, she thought, when Alester insisted that they dance. He must have forgotten about her recent injury. It tired her to dance, but she felt she ought to do it inasmuch as she would not drink. You could not be thinking only of yourself when you were another person's guest. . . . She wished that Alester had not been so disagreeable to Miss Lebaudy. Perhaps they ought to give up the table. She started to suggest as much but at her first words Alester silenced her. "It is my table," he said firmly, and Jerry could not dispute him. But Miss Lebaudy seemed to blame her. Now and then when she came to their table as hostess—Alester had said she owned the place—Jerry could fairly feel her animosity. But her dark eyes wore a non-committal expression and her words were pleasant enough. Jerry's sense of an undercurrent of ill feeling was based on something too intangible to put into words. And her impression that Alester was deliberately wounding Miss Lebaudy at every opportunity persisted. It occurred to Jerry that he might have brought her here as an offense to Leontine. She began to feel miserable. "I think I'd like you to take me home," she said at the end of a dance. "It isn't fair of me to leave my friend alone." "She doesn't expect you," Alester objected. "I told her not to. And you know you said she's going to New York with someone tonight." "I'd like to go with them," Jerry explained. "I have to get some things." "I'll drive you in," Alester offered. Jerry could not find any further excuse to leave so she sighed and drank some more tea. She noticed that Alester watched the door pretty closely as the dinner hour drew near and more people arrived. She found herself doing the same under the power of his expectation, though she did not understand it. "Oh, there's Mr. Harvey," she cried in pleased surprise as Dan came and stood in the doorway, looking around the room. Alester glanced at her sharply, noting the eagerness that she herself was unconscious of.

the table reservation? She looked at Dan with new interest. Alester had implied that whoever was his competitor for the reservation was not exclusive. And Miss Lebaudy had hinted that he was dangerous. (To be continued) PLAINVIEW.—Construction of new eight-story Hilton Hotel progressing.

"BOOSTERS WHO DESERVE TO BE BOOSTED"

There are many reasons why we should, and do, believe in Eastland. It has only been a few short years when its population was less than one thousand. And today after the boom, we have settled down to a more substantial steady growth, and boast of a population of over ten thousand, and still growing. With prospects of better conditions, firmer foundations, and a more friendly people with which to do business with. Whether or not we continue our steady growth, depends a great deal on our boosting Eastland. With the continuation of the good work now going on, building to a city of fifteen thousand is just a matter of time. Let's all tell the fifty thousand people in our surrounding community about our city, what we have for sale and how to reach us. Selling is merely a matter of TELLING.

ROBERT TASKER ACQUIRES FAME WHILE CONVICT

Success of "Grim Haven" Finds Him Still in San Quentin Prison

By EARL H. LEIF United Press Staff Correspondent SAN QUENTIN STATE PRISON, Cal.—Within the melancholy gloom of his cell at San Quentin State Prison, No. 39962 ponders the strange whim of Fate that brought fame, fortune and acclaim to his door and then placed bars and bolts on that door.

of wild adventures. During the in his fiction, is the story of Robert Joyce Tasker, editor, author, woodcutter, short story writer, printer and felon No. 39962, serving a sentence of from five years to life for first degree robbery. And now he has become a figure in contemporary American literature, his efforts in this direction culminating in the publication of a complete book, "Grim Haven," fresh from the presses of a large eastern publishing company. Thus the 25-year-old prisoner attains the distinction of being the first author to have a book published while still an inmate of a United States penal institution.

course of his mad career, he held up a crowded dance-hall single handed at the point of an empty gun, for which he received his prison sentence. Worked in Print Shop. After serving an apprenticeship in the prison jute mill, he was transferred to the print shop, where he is still working. Shortly thereafter he became editor of the San Quentin Bulletin, official organ of the prison. He became a charter member in the short story class conducted in San Quentin by Sydney Herschel Small author of Thundergate, The Splendid Calloways, Fourscore, and several other novels.

Small immediately recognized the gift of the man and encouraged him to further efforts. The American Mercury articles followed, by which he is known to thousands in the United States. Months followed when the creative spirit of the convict drove him to work far into the morning hours with only the light of a wretched candle. Warden James B. Holohan of San Quentin gave all the encouragement and assistance possible and Tasker co-operated by his exemplary conduct, maintaining himself as a model prisoner at all times, remaining out of disciplinary difficulties and never losing any privileges.

Noted Authors Aid Him. When a publishing house asked Small if he knew of a man in San Quentin capable of writing a book on prison life, his thoughts immediately turned to Tasker. He asked the latter if he would attempt the book—and that marked the beginning of Grim Haven. Many noted California authors became interested in his writing. When the manuscript of Grim Haven was completed, the paper Tasker wrote on and the stamps with which to mail the manuscripts were supplied by a fund collected by Small and contributed to by Gertrude Atherton, George Sterling, Kathleen and Charles Norris, Charles Caldwell Dobie, Barrett Willoughby, Gladys Johnson and a dozen other noted authors.

The book is described as a "stern, realistic account of prison life, revealing the attitude of the prisoners toward the outside world, the prison officials, and each other." It was written, every line of it, in his cell. Shortly after the manuscript was placed in the mail, the California state prison board issued a decree forbidding inmates of San Quentin and Folsom to sell their literary work.

Sports Matter

By William J. Dunn United Press Staff Correspondent Miles Lane is no newcomer to the world of sports. Any ardent football fan can tell you innumerable tales of the flashing half-back who led Dartmouth through a successful football season in 1927, and who topped the cast in individual scoring.

But Lane's ambition no longer centers on the gridiron. He has accomplished the phenomenal feat of gaining a berth with the New York Rangers, hockey champions of the world and in doing so becomes the first American ever listed on the roster of a major league professional hockey team. Heretofore Canada has held an airtight monopoly on the ice. There are more big league hockey teams in the United States than in Canada, it is true, but, without exception the American promoters like the thirsty fans, have had to cross the northern border to get the best material.

Prefers Hockey Lane as a collegian is best known for his prowess on the football field. At Dartmouth, however, he also remembered his skill on the ice rink and steel blades. And it was the latter sport that captured the fancy of the star himself.

After his graduation last spring several football managers approached him with lucrative contracts designed to lure him onto football. To these offers he refused to listen.

In the back of his mind he was evolving a scheme which became a reality when the management of the New York Rangers, several weeks ago, came to him and offered him a berth on the squad which won the world championship last year.

He accepted but not without misgivings. He realized that professional hockey was a vastly different game than the sport in which he engaged during his winters at college.

Then, too, he was an American. Perhaps the Canadian's might resent the sudden appearance of a "foreigner" in their ranks.

His love of the game, however, furnished the final decision and he signed the contract. Yet to Make Good As yet he has not made good. Few Canadians have made good in their first year in the major circuit; and, with the season hardly under way, he has had no opportunity. But he has shown unexpected ability and the same managers who signed him because of his fame as a football star and the resultant power he would have as a drawing card, now believe he has an excellent chance of working himself into a regular position.

His determination, combined with his evident lack of fear, has won his teammates to his side and they are bringing him personal instructions in the things a good hockey player should now.

In deciding on hockey as against football, there are few who doubt Lane's wisdom. He will be physically able to play hockey long after his football days would have ended and the ice sport seems to have captured the imagination of the sport world as professional football probably never will do. Lane's college career brings to mind that of Hebe Baker, Princeton star who captained the Nassau eleven in 1914. Baker was considered the greatest college hockey player of all time. He started on the football field but his long suit was the rink and puck. Baker might have been one of the outstanding professional stars of the present day but was killed in an aviation accident in France, December 25, 1918, while a member of the A. E. F.

Gin Not Regarded By King as 'Friend'

LONDON.—The "friendship" between the people of Akyem Abukawa and gin has officially ended. Sir Ofori Atta, the "king" of the Gold Coast province, visited London recently and received his title and a great many presents, including one case of the best gin produced in England. When Sir Ofori returned home and made the official report of his British tour, the ceremony ended by burning the gin.

The Amanehene of Akyem Abukawa urged during his visit here that large imports of Dutch gin into West Africa should be stopped. At a dinner given Sir Ransford Slater, governor of the Gold Coast now visiting England, the following letter from Sir Ofori was read:

GERMANY OWES LOTS OF CASH WASHINGTON.—Almost a quarter of a billion dollars still is owed the United States by Germany for expenses of the American army of occupation after the war. General Roderick L. Carmichael, chief of finance, said in his annual report to Secretary of War Davis made public recently. The balance due this country June 30, 1928, was $233,141,247.42 and this sum has been reduced by subsequent payments to $810,582,775.85. The army bank maintained for the receipt of soldiers' deposits contained $2,021,900.43 on June 30, 1928, and the average deposit amounted to $253. Carmichael said his department was handicapped by a shortage of officers and that it had been necessary to assign officers from other branches of the service to finance duties. He recommended a change in the law to regulate this situation. Massachusetts has an anti-blasphemy law, passed in 1697, but they're not enforcing it any more. What's the use, with so many thousands of people playing golf?
