Texans Hold Conference On Oil Code

Alfred And Thompson Talk In Washington With Vice-Administrator

WASHINGTON (AP)—James V. Alfred, Attorney General of Texas, accompanied by Railroad Commissioner Thompson and several oil men, conferred Wednesday with C. M. Simpson, assistant industrial administrator in charge of efforts to work out an oil industry agreement on wages, hours and related matters.

Rocky

NIRA's road is getting rockier and rockier. Sub-surface rumblings show that the men in charge of industrial recovery are just beginning to realize the enormity of the bit they took. A tremendous amount of modifications is going to be necessary before digestion is possible. To use President Roosevelt's favorite football simile, the quarterback is still calling signals. But the right side of the line seems to have become fearful the opposition is splitting the plays in advance. And the ends are getting smothered on a forward pass.

Blanket

The administration lets on that a blanket temporary code to speed industry into line will iron everything out. Administrator Johnson speaks of a general 25-hour week with a $14 minimum wage. Adjustments would be made as each industry proved them necessary. This bluff is so thin that insiders here, big and small, are laughing out loud. Many industries, some of them important, couldn't stand such a setup even temporarily. The only way the Industrial Recovery Administration could make necessary adjustments fast enough to avoid industrial collapse would be to have about a thousand deputy administrators holding simultaneous hearings. Even then, the deputies would have to be of one mind and the supreme council would have to pass on their findings.

Post Takes Off On 1,000 Mile Hop

NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia (AP)—Irkutsk airport became concerned Wednesday over lack of word about progress of Wiley Post.

Associations

Much of the Recovery Administration's reliance is being placed on trade associations. Since Uncle Sam toppled down the golden stairs these associations have suffered in membership and operating personnel. Some of the stronger ones are still up and doing nicely. Others have shriveled under the necessity of salary and staff cuts.

Hours

Thus far, there has been an almost unanimous disposition on the part of industries filing codes to demand a 40-hour week. No one realizes better than the administration's much publicized Brain Trust that the working week must be shortened more than this if the vast army of unemployed is to be absorbed and recovery made permanent. It took years of bitter, and even bloody, struggle to get us to the 1918 48-hour agreement. Charts mathematically indisputable have been prepared that show in 1929, at the crest of our false wealth, there was only enough purchasing power to insure general employment for a 36-hour week. The keenest analysts forecast that if such hours is the best obtainable now there will be a tan-

'Why A Criminal?' Is Question For Which University Research Envoy Seeks Answer In Investigation Here

William Sidney Porter, writing under the name of O. Henry, once asked the pertinent question: "Why a policeman?" Weldon Cooper, University of Texas graduate student in government, was here this week seeking the answer to a slightly different problem, more perplexing, indeed. Cooper's department has sent him out this summer to collect data on an attempt to answer: "Why a Criminal?" Tuesday he engaged in investigating fifty felony cases reported in this county. He was surprised at the number of forgery cases filed here. They ran thirty per cent of the total. He had found them to amount to approximately five per cent elsewhere. Special Deputy L. A. Shanks, who is manager of the local credit bureau, told Cooper there

Codes Proposed Under National Recovery Program To Be Reviewed At Meeting Of Merchants Friday

Codes proposed for adoption under terms of the National Recovery Act will be discussed at a conference called by the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce for Friday morning at 8 o'clock in room No. 1, mess hall, local hotel. J. H. Spann, chamber manager, urged that at least one representative of each retail business firm be present. Minimum wages, working hours, and other provisions of the codes being drawn for dry goods, drug, and other retail trades will be discussed.

Service Club Not New Says Dr. J. R. Spann

Service clubs did not originate in America, and are not new. Organization of similar nature, wielded strong influence in the golden days of Greece and Rome, and in the life of England three and four centuries ago, declared Dr. J. Richard Spann, pastor of the First Methodist church, in an address before the Rotary club Tuesday noon at the Settle hotel. Dr. Spann was principal speaker on a program presided over by Ben Carter. Formerly the controlling sentiment in this country was "get you the other fellow before he gets you", declared Dr. Spann. "Service clubs have brought competitors in commercial and professional life to be more tolerant of each other. "Any institution lives simply because it serves," he declared. "The most difficult thing we have to contend with in service organizations is the individualism. We forget what the institution is for, the service it is designed to perform, and pay more attention to protecting the institution itself. We ought to be more concerned about what we can do for our community than what the size of the club. This ought to be a better town, with richer friendships and greater understanding and cooperation among the citizens because of service organizations. The Man of Galilee said 'he that would be greatest among you, let him be servant of all.' "Five hundred and fifty years before Christ clubs exerted a most creative and educational influence in Greek life. Clubs played a prominent part in the Roman Empire. History shows that they were so numerous citizens could not attend them all. In those days meetings were in homes and lasted for hours. "The modern type of service club emerged from those of the Great Britain of the seventeenth century, when coffee became the popular drink from a social aspect. Shakspeare and others owe much to those clubs. Charles the Second opposed them because they opposed him and discussed politics. "Service clubs of the United States grew out of the psychology and emergency of the World War. "The people of our country have not learned how to use leisure time. We are individualists. The lunch club brought men together to learn the viewpoints of each other. Then brought fellow competitors into better relationship and understanding. "We of the United States have always been 'whole hog or none'. Perhaps we have not been a civilization long enough to find a happy balance and see the common interest locally as well as nationally." Jess Hall, program chairman, assigned next week's program to Dr. E. O. Ellington and Byron J. Cook. The topic will be fellowship.

Extension Of Time Obtained By West Texas Delegation Allowed 138 Howard Farmers To Benefit

Producers Of Cotton To Get Orders Friday

Agent Informed Of Procedure To Allow PLOWING Up Of Crop

Printed instructions and emergency permit blanks to be used by farmers to secure permits from county agents to destroy immediately cotton leased to the Secretary of Agriculture under provisions of the cotton acreage retirement plan are expected to arrive here Friday, O. P. Griffin, Howard county farm agent, said Wednesday morning. Mr. Griffin was informed by telegraph from the Department of Agriculture of issuance of an order making final approval of cotton acreage retirement contracts by county agents and county committees. The message, however, stressed that farmers are not to destroy their cotton until permits are issued by the county agent. Application for a permit to take land out of production does not relieve the producer of the requirement of executing the formal acceptance which will be sent out later to individual producers, according to Washington advice. Checks will be mailed to farmers when they have furnished proof of performance of their obligation to destroy the portion of their crops covered by contract. Certificates of performance of the contract terms are to be obtained from the community committees which originally accepted the contracts. The message sent county agents by the Department of Agriculture said: "The secretary of agriculture has authorized acceptance and approval of all producer contracts where the same are approved by county agents and county committees. "Printed instructions and emergency permit blanks are on the way to be used by farmers to secure permits from county agents to destroy cotton immediately. "In no event shall producers begin the destruction of their cotton crops until their applications have been approved and permits issued by the county agent."

Eastman Orders Railroads To File Name And Salary Of Every Employee

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Joseph B. Eastman, coordinator of transportation, has ordered the railroads to file with him the names and salaries of every employee on their payrolls during May. The order would require the railroads to comply with the section of the emergency transportation action which forbids reduction of the number of workers because of any order issued by the coordinator. The lists are to be divided according to the divisions of each railroad and will contain, besides the name of the man, his total compensation for May. W. A. French, division engineer of the state highway department, Wednesday telegraphed county judges all counties in his division, asking that a representative of each commissioner's court attend a meeting in his office in Abilene at 3 p. m. Thursday to discuss distribution of federal highway funds in the area. The message received back by County Judge R. R. Debenport asked

Solid South Dry Line-Up Broken Apart

Alabama Casts 2 To 1 And Arkansas 3 To 2 Majority

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Socialists appeared to have captured at least 55 of 75 delegates elected Tuesday to the state convention here August 1 to cast the state's vote for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

By Associated Press Arkansas and Alabama, first states "solid south" to speak on the prohibition amendment have voted repeal. Approximate or incomplete figures showed Wednesday Alabama favored repeal by about two to one. Arkansas voted repeal by a three to two margin.

Late returns from Alabama rural districts whittled slightly the early long lead in favor of ratification. One thousand, two hundred and sixty eight of 2,137 ballot boxes in the state showed a 31,663 majority for repeal.

Tabulation of 1,133 or 2,044 Arkansas precincts, including the complete vote of several counties gave a 20,126 majority for repeal.

HOUSTON, (UP)—Repeal of the 18th amendment "unquestionably is on the way," Major A. V. Dalrymple, federal prohibition administrator, said upon his arrival from Ft. Worth.

Although predicting repeal will be accomplished by the end of 1933, Dalrymple said that would not necessarily mean drastic reductions in the forces now employed by his department.

"After repeal is voted we will require approximately the same number of workers to protect dry areas and to eliminate moonshining, production bootlegging and racketeering," he said.

AUSTIN, (UP)—Legality of the Texas act regulating and taxing sale of beer, passed ahead of submission Aug. 25 of a constitutional amendment to legalize the beverage, will be examined by the state attorney general's department.

It was learned First Assistant Elbert Hooper, acting in the absence of Attorney General James V. Alfred, will answer the request of Civil District Attorney Mack Taylor, Dallas, for an opinion of legality of the beer enabling act.

If the beer act is held void, the opinion probably will affect also the Home Rule enabling act, which the legislature likewise made contingent on approval of a constitutional amendment in the Aug. 25 election.

A special session of the Texas legislature immediately after beer legislation is virtually certain if the present beer regulatory law is held void. "The boys are awfully thirsty and shouldn't be held off any longer than necessary," former Governor James E. Ferguson has said.

Mary considered it a month, perhaps she should have done it sooner. She might be engaged to Dick by the time Martin came back and that would end her obligations to him. He wouldn't blame her for deserting him, if he left her for a whole month.

"Perhaps I can, unless Mr. Foster needs me to work later," she agreed. He was really pleased. "Leave that to me. Is Foster in? I'd like a moment with him, anyway, if he isn't too busy."

Mary spoke into the telephone and the moment was readily granted. She turned back to her work with the thought of her promise to Dick with Foster in the next evening. Her subconscious mind was filled with anticipation for this evening with Dick. She had worn a simple black lace dinner dress that day to be ready for the evening. It formed a becoming contrast for the smooth, creamy texture of her skin and combined with the happiness within her to emphasize the poise and beauty that were naturally hers.

It was a long, slow drive uptown with Dick in the early evening traffic; but finally, they arrived at one of the brown-stone mansions in the West Forties where an Oriental sign swung from an iron frame over the arched iron railings that flanked the steps. As they entered, a very stout, obese, black-eyed man waddled up to greet Dick with an expansive, oily smile. The room was small for a public restaurant and radiant with foreign food odors.

Mary wasn't so sure she was going to like it. Then she thought with amusement. "But of course I shall like it. Dick and I are in India on a world tour."

The menu was only a single brief column, but she hadn't the least idea how to use it. "You only have to make one choice here," Dick explained. "Do you want egg, chicken, shrimp or vegetable Kabab Curry? You get all the rest on the list."

"Egg Curry, then. One guess is as good as another. Then what?" studying the small card, "Bhadam soup, rice, dahl—what is that?" "Indian peas."

"Turkish vegetables, rose petals with honey, Oriental coffee. What a menu! Just imagine eating rose petals and drinking perfumed coffee. I shouldn't want them for a steady diet. How long are we staying in India?" blithely.

"We sail tonight," he promised and their smiles embraced each other as only two people can smile whose hearts and souls are in perfect accord.

Mary found the food highly seasoned, but enjoyed it well enough. "I prefer Sukiyaki, however," she decided.

"We do. But I thought you would like to try this."

The dessert was delicious, like a fanciful dream, she thought. It was sweet and delightful after the spicy heavier food; like this evening's sparkling hours that followed the busy, excruciating day at the office.

There was not a vacant seat in the theater, but they two might have been the only spectators for all they knew or cared. Sitting there, close beside Dick in the vibrant dusk, the vast sea of tense faces about them seemed to recede into space. They were alone, together.

The play was brilliant, ostentatiously modern, quite risqué. There were quips and bits that left Mary somewhat bewildered, but she feigned a sophistication that she did not possess, and got along very well. Dick liked the theater. He was fond of premieres and first-run shows. He liked the best in anything, but he was not bouche as like Martin Frazier. All his life he had been accustomed to the best that money could buy, with a certain conservatism. That was the way Mary wanted to live, but it was not the way she had lived.

She could count the times on the fingers of one hand that she had been on Broadway at Times Square in the evening. It looked to her as if most of the people in the world must be there. The streets flowed with people, all in holiday mood and attire. Everyone seemed to be happy, or perhaps it was the thousands of electric lights. Lights glowed and blinked and flowed in prescribed, colorful lines. Their hard brilliance stung her tired eyes, but they were cheering diffusion of optimism.

Again, she snuggled against Dick's broad shoulder while he drove with one hand, after they had crossed the river through the tube and were on the Jersey side.

"Do you know dear that's just four times as far from your house back to New York as it is from here home? Funny, isn't it?" he chuckled.

Mary's husky-sweet laugh responded. "That's a queer kind of a transit you use to survey the distance. Or isn't your speedometer working?"

"Seems to work all right going this way, but it slows down going east."

"I wish you didn't have to go back alone, dear," she ventured the endearment timidly.

His arm tightened about her and his lips caressed her cheeks. "I wish I didn't have to take you home at all, darling. Won't it be something now, when we can slip home together after an evening out?"

Mary wondered, lying watrily content within his arm, her heart beating high and the blood moving sluggishly, thickly through her body—when that would be. How long could they endure this close intimacy that set their blood afire and their pulses racing, loving each other as they did—while economic forces kept them worlds apart? Not that Mary was afraid. She trusted Dick to know what was best,

Stanton Linksman Upset Dope To Win From Midland Sand Belt Team

MIDLAND—Midland Sand Belters suffered a crushing setback at Stanton Sunday when the Martin county athletic strokers drove and putted a 24-16 victory over the 11-then Midland favorites to capture the association honors.

Stanton won with telling strength taking every low ball match. C. L. Jackson won from Woodward but Gentry Kidd lost to Glassner in the first foursome; Frank Shaw lost to Harding; De Lo Douglas lost to Haynie and Joe Chambers to Burnham; Harry Adams lost to J. Burnham and Billy Baily to Adams.

Midland did not take all its regular team, three members being out of the city, but the defeat was nevertheless surprising, the club having expected, at the least, to split honors.

The reversal may make it impossible for Midland to win the Sand Belt association.

Lamesa failed to "show up" for a Kat Klav match with Midland, the locals taking a 32-0 forfeit.

The match was put off from the Sunday before due to the death of the father of a Lamesa player.

previous winter, she knew she had gone to work for Foster in the autumn and it had been late in the spring before she ever saw Martin Frazier. How well she remembered that first day when he came in and found her there. His satty grey attire had attracted her attention instantly. Smartly patterned tweed, blue-grey tie and shirt, gloves and spats blended and became one, as water met the sky at the horizon and began inseparable. She had guessed at once that he was Martin Frazier, of whom Foster spoke with something akin to awe and whose holdings in stock seemed staggering to her.

And now, she was dining with him tomorrow evening, for the second time within a week. Well, it would be the last time, also. (To Be Continued)

Yanks Return To Top Place

Ninth Straight Wins Lead From Washington Senators

NEW YORK—The Yankees recaptured the American league lead Tuesday, forging ahead of Washington as they defeated the Chicago White Sox, 9 to 4, for their ninth straight victory while the Senators suffered a setback at the hands of the St. Louis Browns.

The Yanks smacked Ted Lyons, veteran knuckle ball star, for an early lead and were too far ahead to be worried when Johnny Allen weakened in the ninth and Wiley Moore had to be hurried in to stop a Chicago rally.

The triumph not only gave the world's champions a full game margin over Washington but it gave them the longest unbroken winning streak that has been compiled in the major leagues this season.

IMPRACTICAL

Miss Florence Weaver, spinster-teacher who died three years ago in Oklahoma City, had a beautiful idea of leaving her $600,000 estate to the children of Cincinnati, Ohio, where she spent much of her life. The only flaw in her idea was that it wasn't to take effect until after the lapse of 500 years. In her will, she directed that the estate be impounded and interest paid for half a millennium, at the end of which time the money was to be used in building parks and playgrounds.

County Judge C. C. Christian, before whom the will appeared for probate, threw it out of court and ruled that the estate should go to four nephews and nieces. His reason? "Such a procedure," he said, "would be impractical, contrary to public policy and in violation of statutes."

A computation developed that Miss Weaver's fortune, drawing compound interest for 500 years, would amount to 24 quadrillions of dollars by the year 2453. That is more wealth than the world would know what to do with and more than all the budgetary experts could manage.

Six hundred thousand dollars put to use now would do far more good than 24 quadrillions 500 years hence.

The Drive For Shorter Week

By BURTON KLINE
 For McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Manufacturers and retailers, economists and labor leaders, and large numbers of John W. Citizen, all have an eye on Washington and what it is going to do with and for the short week. All are concerned over what the 30-hour week, if it comes, is going to do to them—for their good or their hurt.

The Administration tacitly admits that some such work-week is one of its aims—if not the 30-hour week at least a short one. Some call it a fetish of the Administration. Whatever its name, Washington is bearing down on it in every code submitted under the Recovery Act. Everywhere else two questions are asked: What is the shorter week going to do to business and to life? And is it anything more than a New Year's resolution?

Take the last question first. The 30's saw countless strikes for the 8-hour day, then another aim that jolted industry. Historians of our industrial history set down these strikes as "lost," most of them were fiery and bloody and all were ended by force. Yet we ended by having the 8-hour day.

It never was in universal application but it became general throughout enlightened industry.

The late Judge Gary, head of the U. S. Steel, fought one of these strikes for the 8-hour day—and won it. He contended that in steel manufacture such a day was out of the question. Just as you can't work the 8-hour day on a teething baby. He will get awake out of hours. Steel was the same, Judge Gary argued. It called for the 12-hour shifts, and that was all there was to it.

Gang Changed

Suddenly after he had put down the strike for the 8-hour day, Judge Gary instituted the 8-hour day in steel. He did it because all the "lost" strikes for the 8-hour day had won their case. Each had been an advertisement, an educational effort. Every such strike had referred to public judgment the argument for the shorter day. The public decided the matter.

We appear to have left strikes behind us. We publicize now in other ways. The wiser public of today sees the light without being knocked on the head with a costly strike. And the chances are pretty strong that it is "sold" on the short hour week. That also begins to look like what we call a logical step in progress.

Washington is banking on this. But employers will tell you that the short hour week enters heavily into costs of production—raises the question whether the industry can accept the short hour week and exist against the 8-hour day, but public opinion happened to be behind it, and over it went. And what passed the laws blanketed under the Roosevelt recovery program was not alone Mr. Roosevelt. It was public opinion. Which will probably turn out to be the answer as to whether the short hour week is a New Year's resolution.

Ford's Contentment

Taking the short week to be on its way, what then is its effect on business and on life? Take business first. Henry Ford has contended that the workers, 70 percent of the buying public, have been kept so many hours producing things that they had no free hours to buy. Give them more time to buy, said he, and they will make better business, more profits, and more wages. We have been more than ahead of the times in the science of production: the science of consumption has lagged—this balance between making things and using them up. The short hour week may help strike that balance. Big and important as this is, it

State Files For Title To Pecos Tract

$1,880,000 Back Oil And Rentals Asked In New Suit

AUSTIN, (UP)—Suit for the recovery of 561 acres of land in the Yates oil field in Pecos county and for rentals and oil aggregating $1,880,000 in value, was filed by the attorney general's department in 98th district court here.

The land involved was held to be vacant unsurveyed school land in the Supreme Court's recent decision in the Smith-Turner case. The state's suit named the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company, Fred Turner Jr., Fred Turner, Sr., and the McGinley corporation as defendants.

The attorney general's petition contends the state owns all minerals in the land, that the defendants' rights to the land and minerals are subordinate to the state's under the relinquishment act, and alleges that no bonus has ever been paid the state for mineral development.

The state claims three producing wells were drilled on the land by the Mid-Kansas Oil and Gas company, and that the wells have produced approximately 1,800,000 barrels of oil. The amount sued for in oil value is $880,000, based on an average price of 55 cents per barrel.

The state also seeks the rental value of the land for the past two years, alleged to be $1,000,000.

Appointment of a receiver was asked by the state, which alleges that surrounding wells are draining oil from the disputed land. This Turner defendants joined in this plea.

Yanks Return To Top Place

BOSTON—Monte Pearson held the Red Sox to four hits Tuesday and pitched Cleveland to a 2 to 1 victory. The only run made off the former Toledo hurler was Jolley's homer into the right field bleachers as the first man up in the third.

Pearson walked Warstler and Cooke in the ninth with two out and Manager Walter Johnson jerked him in favor of Mel Harder.

Before that, the two teams had been deadlocked at 2-2, with Vic Sorrell and Rube Walberg dividing the hurling honors. Both twirlers lasted the full nine innings, Sorrell holding the A's to six safeties.

Green said he was asking Administrator Hugh S. Johnson to investigate to determine whether workers were being discriminated against because of trade union affiliations. Green referred to the discharge of workers in Chattanooga and said he had reports of employees being dismissed in other plants supposedly operating under the newly effective code.

John P. Frey, who with Green is a member of the labor advisory board of the N.I.R.A., said he had received numerous complaints of discharges throughout the country.

Horner, Professional Pleaser Of The Public, To Ballyhoo Recovery

WASHINGTON (UP)—Charles Francis Horner, former head of the Liberty Loan speakers' bureau, chautauqua executive and professional pleaser of the public, now is head publicist of the national industrial recovery administration.

In a few more days he expects to loose such a blast of publicity that "national industrial recovery administration" will become a household phrase, and "NIRA" a household word.

Even now the sloganizers are thinking at top speed, producing catch words to make NIRA stick in the public mind.

The poster men are sitting tight. Their first creation is a beauty. It is done in red, white and blue, with an eagle, NIRA's phrase "We do our part" superimposed on a background of chimneys and grinding wheels.

This poster—and others—will be placed in every shop window, every factory door and every home where NIRA is exerting influence. The man who gets a job through NIRA will get a poster to display. So will the man who raises wages. Even the housewife who pays full prices for NIRA approved meat waists will get a NIRA poster to put in her parlor window.

The NIRA speech-making "band" is wrecking typewriters. Authors are pounding out speeches by the arm-load for all occasions.

The men who will say these speeches, the four-minute men, are buying cough drops and practicing before their mirrors.

So much for the official part of publicizing NIRA. Horner has ten official helpers throughout Washington who are doing their bit free. They are the punsters who still insist among other things that NIRA is getting NIRA and NIRA.

Colorado Governor Flies To Washington For Drought Relief

GUYMON, Okla., (UP)—Governor Edwin C. Johnson of Colorado Tuesday was flying to Washington to present the Panhandle relief program to Secretary of Interior Ickes.

The plan, approved by representatives from four states and their representatives was the seven year old Blake food control plan. Its author and present sponsor, E. E. Blake, Oklahoma City engineer, was to take off from his home airport Tuesday to assist Governor Johnson in presenting the request.

Five hundred persons, many of them drought-stricken Panhandle farmers, gathered in the stuffy courthouse here late Monday.

Texas county which last year grew 12,000,000 bushels of wheat, this year produced but 10,000 bush. It was estimated that of the county's 2,500 farmers at least 1,200 had registered for federal-state relief work. A few years ago they were prosperous farmers—wheat kings of the southwest.

Youth Freed On Vagrancy Charge After Casually Plunging Into Niagra Rapids And Becoming First To Swim To Canada

NIAGRA FALLS, N. Y. (UP)—William Kondrat, the only person who has been able to conquer the Niagara River rapids and whirlpool, was freed of a vagrancy charge by Judge William J. Watts.

A youth brave enough to swim the rapids has too much courage to be classed as a vagrant, the judge said in discharging the 17-year-old Chatham, N. J., hitchhiker.

Kondrat was brought back to Niagara Falls and arrested shortly after he had succeeded in casually swimming the roaring rapids of the lower Niagara river, a feat some of the world's greatest daredevils have feared to try.

With little thought of what he was doing, the youth went into the whirlpool and came out without a scratch.

With Arthur Hecht of New York City, Kondrat went for a swim in the river just above the lower arch bridge. Kondrat said that a desire seized him to swim to the other side so that he could say he had touched Canadian soil.

The rapids which rise ten feet or more as they plunge over huge boulders hid Kondrat from sight. Hecht dressed and ran to police for aid. Kondrat was given up as lost.

More than an hour later the youth was safe in police headquarters in Niagara Falls, Ont. He had been carried down stream, but he continued swimming where Captain Webb, who came from England for an attempt at the feat, failed. For more than a mile he was carried down the crest of the river to be caught finally by the big eddy in the whirlpool, through which no man ever had been known to swim before.

There he managed to make shore, exhausted. After a short rest he climbed several hundred feet to the top of the gorge where employees of the aerial view car gave him a pair of overalls and took him to police headquarters.

He was none the worse off for his experience.

Smuggling Of Chinese Into El Paso Uncovered

EL PASO (UP)—An arrested plot to smuggle Chinese from Juarez, Mexico, to El Paso was nipped by police today with the arrest of three Chinese in an El Paso residence near the border.

They gave the names Quon Ng, Mok Tun and Chong Sio.

Interpreters said the men told them they were merchants and fled from Sonora, Mexico, when their property was confiscated recently.

They said they came to Juarez with other Chinese who fled from Sonora because of intense anti-Chinese feeling.

Police Capt. Mike Snider said he received information that 12 or 15 Chinese were hiding in the house.

Immigration officials said smugglers in Juarez were offering to bring the Chinese to El Paso for $50 each.

You can summon an ounce of French garden in a perfume vial; intricate pieces of Switzerland in a tiny wrist-watch; a corner of California in an orange; a handful of Virginia to stuff in your pipe; sunny Seville in olives; a taste of Ceylon in tea.

Advertisements tell you the desirable portions of the world you can buy. How most quickly to call them to you. How much you'll like them when yours. Grown on a far island—dug from a mine—if it's advertised and you ask for it, it's yours. If you ask it to do what it's advertised to do, it will. If you ask others who have used it what they found out about it, they will repeat facts advertised about that product. Advertisements are your surest, quickest means of enjoying the world. Dallas Chamber Holds Sessions For Executives

DALLAS (UP)—A precedent set by the Dallas Chamber of Commerce is being cited to similar bodies all over the United States by leaders at Washington entrusted with administration of President Roosevelt's national industrial recovery act. They are urging that chambers of commerce everywhere follow the lead of the Dallas organization in calling state-wide meetings of industrial executives to effect cooperation with the administration program.

The council is to be made up of presidents of all cooperative trade associations in the state and representatives from industries not now participating in a trade association. Each association has the privilege of designating one officer other than the president. It is chosen, as its representative on the council.

The purpose of the council will be to coordinate the activities of all Texas trade associations in a unified drive to obtain 1000 per cent cooperation with the national program from this state. It will function in a purely advisory capacity. More than 100 chief executives of various trade organizations in Texas have been invited to Monday's meeting, which will be held on the Roof Garden of the Adolphus hotel.

In Chicago's Hall of Science there was rioting recently when rival groups undertook to celebrate Armenian Day after their own fashion, which appeared to differ in one essential detail. One group wanted to hoist the flag of the "Armenian republic that is to be." Another group insisted that the red flag of Soviet Russia be raised to full staff in honor of the occasion. Nationally when two such irreconcilable views met head-on, something popped. Flats flew, noses were reddened, hair was pulled.

Codes
Some of the codes now coming along are putting Administrator Johnson and his assistants in a plenty tough spot.
No better illustration is at hand than the proposal of the Ship Builders and Ship Repair Industry. Hearings on it open today.
The Ship Builders suggest a 40-hour week. They say it will more than consume the available labor in that field.
Privately, they will tell you they are perfectly willing to take a 32-hour week, if the administration demands it.
There's a joker, of course.
At the present moment there are only two big commercial keels being laid in the country. All other work is by government contract.
The Navy has approved the Ship Builders' submitte' code. If General Johnson wants a 32-hour week, or even higher wages, it's okay by them.
Their lifeblood is coming from the U. S. Treasury.

Ships
The Ship Builders have one large fly in their ointment. That's organized labor. They're ready to go to bat about it.
Subscribing shipyards are large-ly non-union. They have formed are forming "company unions." Recently they learned their work-ers were being circularized about follows: "Join the Union now or nothing. In two weeks it will cost you $100. After that you'll be out of a job." Company heads tried to pin this on the American Federation of Labor or one of its affiliates.
So far they haven't been able.

Texon Wins Top Notch In West Texas League

SAN ANGELO—Texon was back on top in the West Texas Independent Baseball League today after the second round of last-half play. The Oilers, winners of the first half, defeated Abilene at Texon in a double-header, 5 to 4 and 6 to 0, while San Angelo and Ozona were dividing a twin bill here. The Sheep Herders won the first game here 12 to 3 with the veteran Jake Freeze hurling winning ball and the visiting Giants took the nightcap, 7 to 4 with Slim Kinzy, sensational T. C. U. pitcher, the winner.
Texon and Abilene played a 2-2 tie Saturday at Texon but only eight innings were played. Abilene's team was late in arriving. In the first game at Texon Sunday the Oilers nosed out the Gasers by scoring in the last half of the ninth on a bunting attack. Flop Harris, Texon hurler, was master of the second game.
Texon moves over to Ozona for a double-header Sunday, the only league games scheduled.

San Angelo 2 2 .500
Ozona 1 1 .500

Brady In Abilene City Net Finals

ABILENE—Leo Brady, University of Texas student who was a finalist in the Abilene city tennis tournament last year, reached the same stage of the current meet Monday. His semi-final victim was Willard Foster, high school ace here for the last two seasons. Foster was beaten in a volleying duel, 1-4, 6-4, 6-3.
The other bracket was only in the semi-finals after M. M. Ballard, champion for three years, had been eliminated by Arch Holder, south-paw star. Holder rallied to win after he had lost the first set and had fallen behind 5-2 on the second. Scores of their match were 2-6, 8-6, 6-4. Holder was matched with J. W. Treat, A. C. C. net coach, in the semi-finals.

Advertising Hikes To Be Expended In Daily Newspapers

NEW YORK (UP)—Any marked increase in advertising during the next two or three months will be confined to daily newspapers, the Standard Statistics Co. of New York predicted Tuesday.
"The reason lies in the fact that the flexibility of the newspaper as an advertising medium allows it to derive immediate advantage from increased space expenditures on the part of such consistent newspaper advertisers as base their outlays on the day-to-day conditions," the Standard Statistics Co. said.
"On the other hand, most magazines, radio and billboard advertising is the result of longer term planning. Expansion in these divisions requires changes in corporation budgets, the formulation of new campaigns, and preparation and production of new display."

By WALTER LIPPMANN The Four-Power Pact

The four-power pact which has just been signed in Rome may be said to mark the end of the European political crisis of last spring. This crisis was produced by the rise to power in Germany of men who had for years openly declared that they would, if necessary, use force to bring about revision of treaties. How serious this threat was to be taken depended upon the attitude of Mussolini. For years Fascist Italy has favored revision. If Fascist Italy aligned itself with Nazi Germany, carrying with it Hungary, Bulgaria and perhaps Austria, Europe would have been divided into two hostile and irreconcilable camps. Here lay the danger. But almost at Big Spring. He was found by the side of his car and removed to a hospital where he died.

Rev. R. E. Day, pastor of the First Baptist church, said he knew Rev. Reynolds but that he had not known of his being in this section recently.

Confronted with the situation, Mussolini chose to practice a realistic diplomacy. The four-power pact is the visible sign of his decision to pursue a policy of stability rather than a policy of adventure. The pact recognizes Germany as one of the four great powers of Europe, and concedes to Germany that moral equality which she ought never to have been denied. But at the same time the pact completely rejects the idea that Europe can be divided into two groups of powers, and it recommitments Germany and all the others to the whole system of treaties set up to preserve the peace. Thus, under Mussolini's leadership, Hitler has accepted for Nazi Germany a network of treaties which the Nazi propaganda has consistently scorned.

The most important aspect of the pact, however, is that a path has been definitely opened for a better understanding between France and Italy. Not only has Fascist Italy drawn back from an alliance with Nazi Germany, but it has moved forward to a point where it is not impossible that a way will be found to compose, at least for a time, the rivalry between France and Italy in central Europe.

The peace and the prosperity of central Europe depend upon an understanding between France and Italy. Without this understanding the new nations of the Danube Valley, which have arisen out of the wreck of the Hapsburg Empire, can not hope to make economic arrangements which will permit them to prosper. For ten years every arrangement which these new nations might have reached has been vetoed by one or the other of the great powers. If these votes can be withheld, there is hope for central Europe. They will be withheld only if France and Italy can understand each other.

The next few months will show whether this is possible. In the meantime the position of the new nations of central Europe has been considerably strengthened by the conclusion of a series of treaties with Russia. These treaties of non-aggression, which are more precise than any that have been written since the war, greatly reduce anxiety all along the whole European frontier of Russia. In as far as treaties are to be relied upon, they are a new barrier against the revision of frontiers by military force.

Thus, the next result of the crisis of the spring has been to confirm and solidify the existing territorial boundaries. For the time being the idea of revision has been put entirely aside. It has been recognized that in fact the only kind of peace that Europe can have is peace based on the existing frontiers. The alternative would be war and once that alternative was clearly visualized in the crisis of last spring it was rejected not only by France and her allies, who have always rejected it, but by Great Britain, by Russia, and by Italy as well.

contracts under which they may transfer to the new West Texas Cotton Growers' association.

Clyde Daniel, for several years district manager at Abilene for the state association, has been selected manager of the new West Texas association. It was announced this week. A contract has been made between the West Texas association and the national sales agency, the American Cotton Cooperative association, by which the national agency will buy the West Texas association's cotton as long as the national price is "in line." At other times, the West Texas association is privileged to sell elsewhere.

"The member will be guaranteed a price in line with that paid anywhere in this territory," Mr. Daniel said, "and in addition, he will get a patronage dividend on cotton sold through the national agency, whenever the national agency is able to re-sell cotton to the mills at a profit."

The national will be represented at Abilene by V. A. (Pete) Taylor, who will have charge of classing and financing. Mr. Taylor has been in the sales force of the American Cotton Cooperative association and the American Cotton Growers Exchange for the past nine years, lately having had charge of the ACCA sales office at Memphis, Tenn.
