League Can't End War, but Still Is Valuable

The League of Nations has not exactly been covering itself with glory in the last few years. Having been defied by its enemies and deserted by its friends, it has withdrawn to a quiet corner of the stage and is, seemingly, waiting only for the undertaker to come and provide a decent burial.

But it hasn't been buried yet, and it is still as busy as it ever was in those quiet, unobtrusive activities which never do get the headlines.

A recent bulletin from the League of Nations Association in New York summarizes some of the things which the league is now doing.

It is preparing to summon an international conference on the sugar trade, by which the industry may be stabilized and decent security assured to planters and workers in far-distant parts of the globe.

It is continuing to help the Chinese in their reconstruction program. League experts are busy advising the Chinese on such matters as health, finance, agriculture, hydraulics, and flood control.

The league also is enabling Chinese engineers and other specialists to study abroad and get contacts and information which will enable them to serve their country better.

The league's health organization, meanwhile, has been getting international standards set for such things as anti-pneumonia serum, staphylococcus antitoxin, and so on. Governments and commercial laboratories throughout the world, as a result, are enabled to give their people better protection against disease.

Standing alone, this catalog of activities is impressive. It is only when contrasted with the great war-prevention work that the league was designed to do that it looks small. Because the league has failed miserably in the larger sphere, the solid and substantial work it has done in the lesser one escapes our notice.

And yet, with this kind of work being done quietly, honestly, and fully, we cannot say that the league has failed. For if it is doing nothing else, it is at least giving us a constant object lesson in the value of international cooperation and mutual help.

The dictators and the war-mongers may rant and strut and rattle their sabers; all the while, these self-effacing league workers are doing their part to make men happier and life richer—doing it with a serene disregard for international boundaries, hatreds, or suspicions.

May the power of that example have its effect on us, before the world slips into the orgy of collective throat-cutting which seems to lie ahead of it.

Building of Floats Is Their Business

SAN ANTONIO — Emile and Marmel Robin are not particularly daring, nor do they know anything of the trapeze business, but they "float" through life with an ease that is astounding. Citizens of France and residents of San Antonio, the Robins' business is floats. They build them. After studying art in France the Robins deserted their homeland for America—and some practical experience in costume and display designing. Their line turned to the building of parade floats. The Frenchmen designed Casa Manana and Cavalcade at Fort Worth and Dallas respectively for the Texas Centennial Expositions in 1936. This year they are designing Fiesta de San Jacinto at San Antonio.

close of the present school year, and the contemplation of that retirement caused her to grow renitent recently. In the old days, she recalls, dates were few and far between, literary societies were the only campus organizations, and an automobile ride with a boy was absolutely taboo for a co-ed. Freshman girls weren't allowed dates at all, and the girls in their second and third year were carefully limited in their number of dates allowed. Senior girls who had maintained a good record for three years were permitted to go out with the boys twice a week—even three times if there were an extra-special occasion! "But there was more trouble with girls ruled by an iron hand in those days than there is now with no arbitrary regulations," Dean Beckam reports.

In this column answers will be given to inquiries as to Texas history and other matters pertaining to the State and its people. Address inquiries to Will H. Mayes, Austin, Texas.

Q. Will you tell something of the old Nassau (Fayette county) farm?

A. It was a league of land near the present Round Top postoffice, bought in 1843 by Count Boos-Waldeck, who, with Prince Leiningen, both of Germany, came to Texas representing the Mainz Verin, in locating German colonists. Count Boos-Waldeck built a large two-story log house there, with adjacent cabins and barns, making it the show place of the section. Boos-Waldeck was a cousin of Queen Vivtoria. Many prominent Americans and titled Europeans were lavishly entertained at Nassau with races and feasts, the place being always open to distinguished guests.

Q. What finally became of the Nassau plantation?

A. The German Verein, for which society Count Waldeck bought and improved it, was unable to pay for it, and it was sold to Otto von Roeder in 1848, von Roeder having come to Texas in 1834. From von Roeder it passed into the hands of William von Rosenberg and other German families by purchase.

Q. What further Texas enterprise did Count Boos-Waldeck promote after leaving Nassau?

A. He bought and improved a large estate in Brazoria county, building a large brick residence, laying out a park and ornamenting it with costly statuary, erecting a church, constructing a large water reservoir, and putting up the first sugar refinery in Texas.

Q. What acreage in East Texas is guarded by the Texas Forest Service and what amount was burned over last year.

A. The Forest Service covers 10,620,014 acres in 29 East Texas counties, in the commercial timber belt. In 1935, 7,827 fires burned over 217,902 acres, or about two per cent. The loss in 1935 was lighter, with 62,201 acres burned, or nine-tenths of one per cent of the 6,731,200 acres then under Forest Service Protection.

City Commission Gives Review of Activities During Last Two Years

Following is an article contributed by the Eastland city commission:

The Board of City Commissioners met in regular session Monday night and gave their attention to routine matters as well as hearing applications for tax adjustments. The matter of adjusting inequitable valuations on property has engaged the attention of our City Commission for more than a year, and the great number appearing before the City Commission and the careful consideration given to such matters has prolonged many sessions of the City Commission far into the night.

Among other items of business transacted at the last meeting, the Board of City Commissioners ordered an election to be held in April for the purpose of electing three City Commissioners. The Board of Commissioners has worked together diligently and harmoniously, and at the close of the official meeting C. W. Hoffmann, Chairman of the Commission, and Commissioner H. O. Satterwhite announced that they would offer themselves for re-election in April, and forthwith filed their application with the City Clerk. Mr. L. J. Lambert, at the solicitation of his friends, has agreed to become a candidate for City Commissioner to fill the place left vacant by the untimely death of Mr. T. M. Johnson. Mr. Lambert has been in business in Eastland for many years, and his sound judgment and public spirit will be an asset to the City Government. The record discloses that Mr. Lambert filed his application as a candidate on Tuesday, February 23, 1937.

Notwithstanding the past few years' depression, the City Commission has been able to do a great deal for the City. Probably the most lasting and gratifying result of the labors and diplomatic activities of our City Commission is in the permanent improvement to our streets. The City Commission has been able to persuade the federal government to gravel and drain all of the unpaved streets within the City at a cost of $24,800, which project was completed several months ago. The next project was the building of a swimming pool on the City Park Hill at a Federal cost of $9,000.

Seaman Street is now being put in fine condition by the State Highway Department, with Federal funds, to the extent of $14,400. Likewise, the Federal Government is spending $27,000 on West Commerce street, in the way of widening the pavement and putting in lateral curbing.

Mayor C. W. Hoffmann admits that his greatest satisfaction is in the beautification of the cemetery. It will be well worth the time of anyone to drive through the cemetery and note the vast improvement of this piece of public property both in its arrangement and general upkeep. Another worthwhile service, instituted by the City Commission is the free disposal of garbage. The Sanitary Department maintains a truck which calls at every residence each week and takes up trash and garbage of every kind. During the hot summer months the water consumer is gratified to know that he may use three times as much water on his yard and garden as heretofore, and at the same time his water bill has been reduced 15 per cent.

The City Government was likewise instrumental in a very material way in assisting the Fire Department in the erection of one of the most modern softball parks in Texas. The average citizen all through the summer months had the privilege of resorting to this place of recreation at a very nominal cost.

It might be well for the citizenship to understand that the City Officials found it necessary to institute a program of enforcing tax collections, which became necessary because of litigation instituted by the bond holders in 1935. The first step in the collection of taxes was the appointment by the City Commission of a committee of three men, who in a body, inspected each piece of property on the tax rolls and made their recommendation as to the value of same, to the end and with the result that the property on the tax rolls of the City are as nearly equal as possible. Several suits have been filed to enforce the tax lien, and it will be necessary to file many more unless the tax payer gives the matter his personal attention.

An item of great interest to the entire citizenship is the litigation now pending which seeks the cancellation of $115,000.00 Water Bonds. These bonds are alleged to have been illegally issued, and were never authorized by a vote of the tax payers of the City, and it is the hope and purpose of the City Commission to free the City's Water System of the burden of these outstanding bonds and deeds of trust, and ultimately to provide a better and cheaper water supply from the reservoir proposed to be built by the Leon River Flood Control District. The City is sponsoring this federal project and is hopeful of its ultimate completion.

LILY PONS, JACK OAKIE AND GENE RAYMOND, "THAT GIRL FROM PARIS"

Again the golden voice of the world's premier coloratura soprano, Lily Pons, comes to the screen. The little opera star's second motion picture, "That Girl from Paris," is scheduled for showing Friday and Saturday at the Connelle Theatre.

Starred with the vivacious French prima donna are Gene Raymond and Jack Oakie, and Herman Bing, Mischa Auer, Frank Jenks, Lucille Ball, besides other well-known mirth-provokers, are seen in supporting roles.

"That Girl from Paris" is the story of a famed French opera star, played by Miss Pons, who rebel at a marriage of convenience jilting her wealthy impresario, and hitch-hikes across the ocean to the United States in pursuit of a handsome American jazz band leader, who has ignited a latent romantic spark in her soul.

The vicissitudes of this charming little singer, who smuggles her way into a strange land, incognito, to find herself a fugitive from the immigration authorities, and entangled in an almost hopeless romance, are at the same time heart-rending and highly humorous.

Judiciously spotted throughout the picture is a pot pourri of musical offerings ranging in rhythm and color from a sizzling "swing tune" to "Una Voce Poco Fa," the aria from "The Barber of Seville" sung by Miss Pons.

Showing an amazing versatility, the diminutive diva also sings "Tarantella" by Panofka, a swing version of "The Blue Danube Waltz" and three modern original numbers by Arthur Schwartz and Eddie Heyman, "Seal it With a Kiss," "My Nephew from Nice" and "Call to Arms." Jack Oakie also sings one of the five original songs written by this pair for the photoplay, "Moonface," and the other is an instrumental number played by a "swing" band.

Deviating sharply from the average opera star vehicle, "That Girl from Paris" is crammed with hilarious comedy, and Miss Pons displays a surprising flair for her light, humorous role.

A series of colorful backgrounds are shown, the action starting in Paris, shifting to the French countryside, next to an ocean liner and finally to New York and environs, where a typical New Jersey roadhouse and the Metropolitan Opera House are the principal locales.

Gene Raymond, blond screen Adonis who has played opposite almost every prominent feminine screen star, is cast opposite Miss Pons in the romantic lead.

DARING MOVIE BASED ON MICHIGAN ORDER'S REIGN OF TERROR SOON SHOWN

By ARTHUR ZELLNER
The news of recent headlines

the Warner Bros. studios in Hollywood was reenacted a few weeks ago at wood.

The "Black Legion" once more spread its reign of terror.

Hundreds of masked men in flowing robes slipped from the shadows of a little cottage. Behind its lighted windows was a scene of peace and comfort. A young man reading at a table. An old man studying.

Outside a figure darted forward with a lighted torch. Hooded figures banged on the door. In a moment a tongue of flame licked about the little porch. Inside, peace became panic.

The door opened and the masked cowards easily overpowered the helpless young man and his old father. Resistance was useless. Dazedly they heard the threat of death unless they left town at once. The flames were spreading.

The victims were shoved ahead—the guns of their attackers at their backs. They were allowed only a single backward glance. That was enough to see their earthly possessions going up in smoke, leaving the charred ruins of all their hopes.

This was just one of many thrilling scenes directed by Archie Mayo for the gripping melodrama that comes to the Lyric Theatre Sunday, Alonzo Price was the leader of the "Black Legion"; Joseph Sawyer, his cruel henchman; Henry Brandon the young man whose home was burned; Humphrey Bogart, the bewildered newest member of the "Black Legion," not yet aware of the horror of his offenses against law and order.

"Black Legion" is a daring and thrilling melodrama based upon the actual operations of the secret, hooded, night-riding order which terrorized Michigan recently.

The cast includes among others, Dick Foran, Ann Sheridan, Erin O'Brien-Moore.

Sheriff Gives Up Battle on Sparrows

FORT WORTH, Texas.—Sparrows, those noisy little birds that have caused Police Chief Henry B. Lewis almost as much worry as criminals, can keep their homes if they want.

Lewis for three years has tried to dislodge the countless sparrows that nest and roost in the tall sycamore trees around the Fort Worth city hall. They can take the place—and keep it. Lewis is through chasing them.

"I tried once," said the chief dolefully. "Things didn't work out right. They can just have the city hall before I lift a finger against them again."

In 1933, Lewis began his campaign to eradicate the chattering birds from the premises around his office. He dispatched janitors with long fishing poles, who thrashed the trees at night. The sparrows flew away—then flew right back when the janitors went back inside.

The chief was determined. He chose a squad of patrolmen, armed them with riot guns and sent them to war on the sparrows. Sparrows fell from the trees by the dozen, but the total number showed little appreciable decline. After a protest by the Tarrant County Humane Society, Lewis called off his riot squad.

Lewis' next strategy was an attempt to frighten the birds away with fireworks. The cheery sparrows sat on their perches, seemed to enjoy the spectacle, and stayed. There was only one thing left. Lewis decided to cut the trees down.

"Never!" declared the city park board as one man. "Never again!" replied Lewis. "The sparrows can have the place—"

DAPHNE BRETT, good-looking, successful young New York advertising executive, decides to rent a beautiful Connecticut estate her father left her when he was killed in a hunting accident. She needs the money after five years of providing for the education of her younger sister, JENNIFER, who has just finished college.

Daphne spends a day house-cleaning at the estate preparatory to showing it. She is almost forced into renting to an undesirable family when an attractive young man she has never seen before hops over the garden wall, asks for a bit of lunch, and later comes to her rescue, offering to rent it himself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER II

DAPHNE BRETT saw twelve hundred dollars float out her window and was relieved. Not but what she would feel very differently when the Snyders departed and she was once more faced with the inescapable truth that she needed it badly.

For the time, she permitted herself the luxury of that relief and was glad the shadows of late afternoon filled the drawing-room when she introduced "Mr. Van Dusen"—the name had been the first to spring to her mind—to the Snyders. He might not have appeared in a brighter light so perfectly turned out in the riding clothes he wore with careless grace.

"A hundred and fifty a month!" Mrs. Snyder fluffed the lace of her jabot. "Well, I'm sure I don't blame you, Miss Brett."

Daphne's unexpected visitor, looking up from his tea-cup, glanced at Daphne and addressed himself with surprise-tinged tones. "Look here, how stupid of me! You're the people who wanted the place before I saw it?"

"Oh, no," Daphne said quickly. "That was . . . someone else who wanted to buy. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder wanted to rent for a year but I . . . I told them I had promised to give you time to make up your mind."

There was no mistaking the appeal in her face, or the meaning of her words. The dark eyes and the bright blue eyes traveled at the same moment to the youngest Snyder and her fruitless effort to prevent a dab of sandwich filling from slipping down her pinafore with awful certainty to the handsome brocade of the sofa.

That settled it. Blue eyes addressed himself to Mrs. Snyder with the charm of a diplomatic attack. "If I were not so selfish, I should make the now-impossible gesture of turning the place over to a lady who would lend it greater grace."

MRS. SNYDER adjusted her laces and her smile. "Did you hear that, Henry?" she asked her husband and returned to more flattering attention. "Tell me," she said, "are you by any chance related to the South Orange Van Dusens?"

Looking exceedingly regretful, he said that he wasn't. "We're Virginians," he said. "This is my first introduction to Connecticut and I mean to make the most of it."

"I'm sure you will," she said graciously. "Come along, Henry, we've got to be getting back. Anyway, we've enjoyed the visit, Miss Brett, and I'm pleased to have met you, Mr. Van Dusen. Shall I tell the South Orange . . . that is, my friends, who you are?"

"By all means," he replied with a quick and dazzling smile. "I'm Derek Van Dusen."

Daphne walked to the road where the Snyders had left their car, saw them off with a mutual exchange of goodbyes and hoped that Prunella was, by now, in the drawing-room where the combination of her mother's finest silver and the presence of an unknown young man did not make for a feeling of security.

A man who would ask for a handout at the back door, turn up in strange circumstances four hours later and slip with such suspicious ease into the role of her maid, had all the earmarks of being a dangerous character. Why was he hanging around her house all day? He didn't look like a tramp certainly with his fine clothes and manners but after all, the depression had turned up strange types. Daphne hastened her footsteps.

He was, she was relieved to see, sitting in Tom Brett's chair turning the pages of a magazine when she entered.

"Well," he said, looking up at her brightly and rising, "shall we estimate the damage?"

"There has been some, hasn't there?" she answered ruefully, and noted, surreptitiously, that all the silver seemed to be on the tray.

It hurt her eyes to see the spreading grease spot on the gold brocade, the jagged scratch on the satiny surface of the mahogany table. The crumbs didn't matter

Desdemona Masonic lodge held its annual George Washington birthday celebration at the new Masonic hall Monday night. Gifford Acrea, W. M., presided. He was assisted by the secretary, A. D. Baker. There were 45 guests and 15 members present, some being friends of the Masons. Among the guests were members of the following lodges: Strawn, Ranger, Breckenridge, Loreno, Glenrose, Gorman and Stephenville. The welcome address was given by Rev. H. N. Baldersee, pastor of the Baptist church, after which the main speaker of the evening, Rev. H. B. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church of Ranger, made an address. Others who made short talks were C. E. May of Ranger, W. A. McFarland of Breckenridge, district deputy grand master; Mr. Pendarvis of Gorman, Mr. Bogdon of Stephenville, Mr. Goforth of Strawn and Rev. O. D. McDonald, pastor of the Methodist church, and W. C. Bedford, a charter member of the lodge and a past worshipful master. Music was furnished by Elmer Abernathy, Homer Abernathy and Mr. Clayton. Refreshments of chili, crackers, sandwiches, pies and coffee were served.

A number of men have come here recently from Caddo to work on the gasoline plant formerly known as the Mid-Kansas, which is being dismantled and the pipe lines are being removed.

N. D. Gallagher of Cisco was here Friday afternoon. He was returning from Hamilton county, where he had been looking after the well being drilled for the Seaboard Company by himself and his partner, O. G. Lawson.

gile girl like herself did not indulge in the kind of work she had been doing when he had mistaken her for a maid, unless she was pretty hard up. Nor did the gesture of serving tea—the Snyders escape him.

"You did a very fine job of helping me," she said and wondered how she could invite him to go.

"Oh, the Van Dusens—the Virginia Van Dusens, not the South Orange Van Dusens, mind you—go about constantly, rescuing ladies in distress with the greatest of ease."

"Yes, I noticed that," she said. "I mean the ease. What else do you do when you just 'go about'?"

"Contemplate the cosmos," he said pleasantly.

"That's approximately what I thought," she said pleasantly.

"Tell me what else you thought," he encouraged.

"Were the scrambled eggs to the taste of the Van Dusens?" she asked pointedly.

"Excellent," he said graciously. "Plentiful and fresh but, my dear girl, no Worcestershire seasoning!"

"An oversight," Daphne said with a fine edge of sarcasm. "The next time you come to lunch, do let us know beforehand."

"I will," he promised. "What about tomorrow?"

"TOMORROW," Daphne said coldly. "I am not entertaining. I'm a working girl. I shall be back in New York at my job." She stopped thinking and said sternly:

"Much as the country and the open road appeal to me, it's a luxury I can't afford."

"I can't either," he said and sighed.

Daphne's suspicions were immediately confirmed in her mind. "I see," she said, conveying nothing.

"I, too, have a job in the city but I shall forget its confinement when I return to this peaceful loveliness each night."

Daphne sat up very straight. Oh, why had she told him that she was not to be hired?

"That's our arrangement, isn't it?" he inquired easily.

"At a hundred and fifty a month?" Her words had a smart sting.

"Certainly, I said I agreed to your terms. I'd like to take it over at once for occupancy until October first."

It rather took Daphne's breath away. It had possibilities of also taking away her problem. Against her better judgment, she threw discretion to the winds.

"Would you," she asked leaning forward so he saw the hope in her dark eyes, "would you really like to rent Brett Hall?"

"I thought it was all settled," he answered calmly.

"Then . . . then it is."

"You'll want references, of course."

"Of course," she said, wishing she had thought of it first.

"Unfortunately, they'll prove that my name isn't Van Dusen. It isn't even Derek. It's Smith," he said, looking at her reproachfully.

"How could you have missed it?" Daphne permitted herself a smile. "It was too obvious, which you are not," she said.

DAPHNE BRETT, good-looking, successful young New York advertising executive, decides to rent a beautiful Connecticut estate her father left her when he was killed in a hunting accident. She needs the money after five years of providing for the education of her younger sister, JENNIFER, who has just finished college.

Daphne is showing the estate to some rather unimpressive prospective renters when, unannounced, an attractive young man steps into the picture offering to take the place. Liking his appearance, Daphne accepts, learns he is a "Mr. Smith" and able to pay $150 a month rental.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER III

"I'm not quite sure that you mean it as a compliment that I'm not obvious," Larry—Lawrence Hunter—Smith said.

"I did," Daphne assured him gravely and then remembered that he hadn't seen the house. "I think you ought to get acquainted with your future home before it gets too dark to see what you're getting into. Come along."

"If the rest of the rooms are like this one, I shall be happy enough," he said contentedly while his eyes traveled slowly and appreciatively around the gracious room, noting the elegance of fine woods and fabrics, the proportions and design—all eloquent of the taste of the comfort-loving person who had made them.

"They're not all like this. The rooms are as different as our family was," Daphne said as they crossed the wide hall and she opened a door.

They stopped before the portrait which hung above the hearth in the shabby room that had been Tom Brett's study. Studying the portrait of the golden-haired Margot with her two babies—one a small yellow-haired cherub, the other a grave-eyed child of six—he saw that they were indeed all "different."

The portrait interested him. Some day when he lived here, he would study those faces, reading the things he saw in the lovely and unlike lineaments. For they were all sensitive faces, the kind that can hide nothing of the natures back of them.

"This was Father's study and it is more like him than his photograph," Daphne was saying with warm affection in her voice. Larry Smith looked away from the eyes that were suddenly dim and then suddenly bright. He saw that the old-fashioned desk was closed, that dust had gathered on the fishing tackle, the guns, the sporting prints, and he understood.

"I'm going to like it here," he said.

"I hope so," she answered and led the way to the staircase. "We'll go upstairs now." She talked as they ascended.

"There are four large bedrooms and two baths. There's also the nursery and the playroom and a sewing-room which I expect you will not need. On the first floor, in addition to the rooms you've seen, there's also a smaller dining room, the library which was Mother's favorite room."

LARRY was beginning to understand why Daphne Brett—lovely name, he thought—had been anxious to rent the house. The orphan girls were hard up.

"Then, there are little rooms sort of tucked around here and there which you will discover."

and there which you will discover."

 She went back to Tom's study and settled down in his worn old chair the way she had when she was a long-legged, big-eyed child.

Daphne finished. "I've been looking into some of them," he said calmly.

Daphne turned her face to him with a puzzled frown. "I meant to ask you that. Do you mind telling me if you are a mind reader or, otherwise, exactly how did you happen to come to my rescue? How did you know how I felt?"

For a second time she saw the quick and dazzling smile that illuminated his features, too irregular to be handsome.

"So you won't give an ordinary fellow a chance to borrow a little glamour?"

Daphne shook her head. "I'll tell you then," he said. "I'll tell you the whole story. I'm spending a few days with a chap who has a camp back here near Cornwall. This morning I came out for a cross-country ramble, saw your house, was utterly charmed by it. Reluctant to leave until I had seen all of it and, having a hearty appetite, I . . ."

"I know," Daphne said and her voice was her apology.

"Since I wasn't invited to see it, I prowled. Prowling, I happened to observe the arrival of your . . . my guests . . . who did not, to my way of thinking, add to the picture. Fortunately, I happened also to be studying the framework of your drawing-room window where your reluctance was quite plain to be seen."

"And where you heard me mention my imagined prospect?"

"And heard you mention him," he admitted.

with taste and, undoubtedly, beauty, since he had married her. Or would he be the kind of a man who would marry a girl if she were not beautiful? Daphne felt like a fool for giving it a moment's thought.

If there were little Smiths, she need not worry about them. They'd be nicely disciplined and their father would see that her things were well protected. He had the same kind of love for beautiful things she herself had, she knew. Yes, Larry Smith belonged. She knew that he would find in Brett Hall the same things that she and Tom Brett had loved—loved every minute of the changing beauty that came with each new season. He would be, she felt, the kind of man who would wonder, as she and Tom had wondered, with awe at the miracle of each new spring and autumn.

When he had gone, Daphne saw that she had more than an hour until it was time for her to dress for her return to the city. She went back to Tom's study and curled up in his worn leather chair with her knees under her chin the way she had when she was a long-legged, big-eyed child. The ghost of the little girl in a pinafore with a slipping red ribbon on her black curls sat there. Sat there now, seeing her yesterday and longing for tomorrows that were postponed.

It was only that they were postponed, Daphne promised herself.

There would be other summers to enjoy the hollyhocks, the warm sweet raspberries that grew along the garden walls. There would be other autumns, golden, red and fragrant with the scents of wet pine and burning leaves and good things baking in the oven of the wood stove. There would be other winters when the rolling hills, covered with a blanket of snow, would mirror the stars that brought the heavens closer to earth. And with them, peace.

Daphne shook off the thought impatiently. She didn't want peace. That was what old people wanted. She wanted only a slower tempo to her life. She was mentally short of breath at this speed at which her life was paced. But she wasn't ready for the old ladies' home at 24 simply because she was bored with night clubs and occasionally found the proportions of her small apartment confining.

What did she want? She asked the ceiling above her and knew the answer while she refused to admit it. Fun? She had that. She had beaux, parties, dates. A career? Wasn't she molding that successfully at that very moment and loving it at this speed at which her life was paced. Sport Glances. By Grayson

WITH all the harsh noise from New Orleans and Baton Rouge about phony names, run-outs, and fakes, it is obvious that what Jack Torrance requires is a professional builder-upper.

Mike Jacobs, who has more than a rooting interest in Torrance, should page Prof. Billy McCarney right away.

The old professor would steer the hurler of the 16-pound shot to within putting distance of the more important money, in no time at all, and with a modicum of squawks, raised eyebrows, and oblique glances.

It seems strange that Jacobs didn't think of Professor McCarney in the first place, instead of sending Herb Brodie, the former light-weight, down south to get the Big Bay Window of the Bayous in all that trouble.

Taking a golden heavyweight prospect on the road and bringing him back unharmed while making steady progress is a real art and one that no other manipulator of manhandling ever mastered quite as well as Professor McCarney. The professor is as subtle as Brodie has been apparent.

Professor McCarney was making bulky blokes seem what they were not long before he bumped into the real thing in the lamented Luther McCarty, who was lifted from a Calgary ring to die on the threshold of the championship.

THE better minds of the manly art of mangling mugs recognize Professor McCarney's peculiar talent. Jack Kearns had the professor line up the animated bags whose jutting jaws Jack Dempsey used as doors of opportunity.

Jimmy Bronson promptly engaged the professor when he started to pave the way for Bob Martin, the A.E.F. champion.

Tex Rickard sent for the professor when he wanted something out of the ordinary made of Luis Angel Firpo, and again when Jess Willard launched his comeback. Max Schmeling wasted plenty of time around New York until he stumbled into the able hands of the professor and his then partner, Joe Jacobs.

Had not Professor McCarney been tied up with Schmeling, Bill Dufy no doubt would have hired him when Prime Beef Carnera first was unloaded on a lower Manhattan wharf.

Carnera's representatives on the Great American Sucker Tour of 1930 equalled Professor McCarney's best record for digging up assorted canvasbacks, but they fell down badly where the professor stands out. They were as ruthless as the professor is gentle.

PROFESSOR McCARNEY is a genius at keeping young heavy-weights out of danger. The professor is a firm believer in the rule that styles beat fighters. He either knows his proteges' opponents or gives them a thorough appraisal before accepting them. Bobbers and weavers and those too fast afoot are out. He forages for sizable loogans who stand up straight where they can be belted and who move none too rapidly.

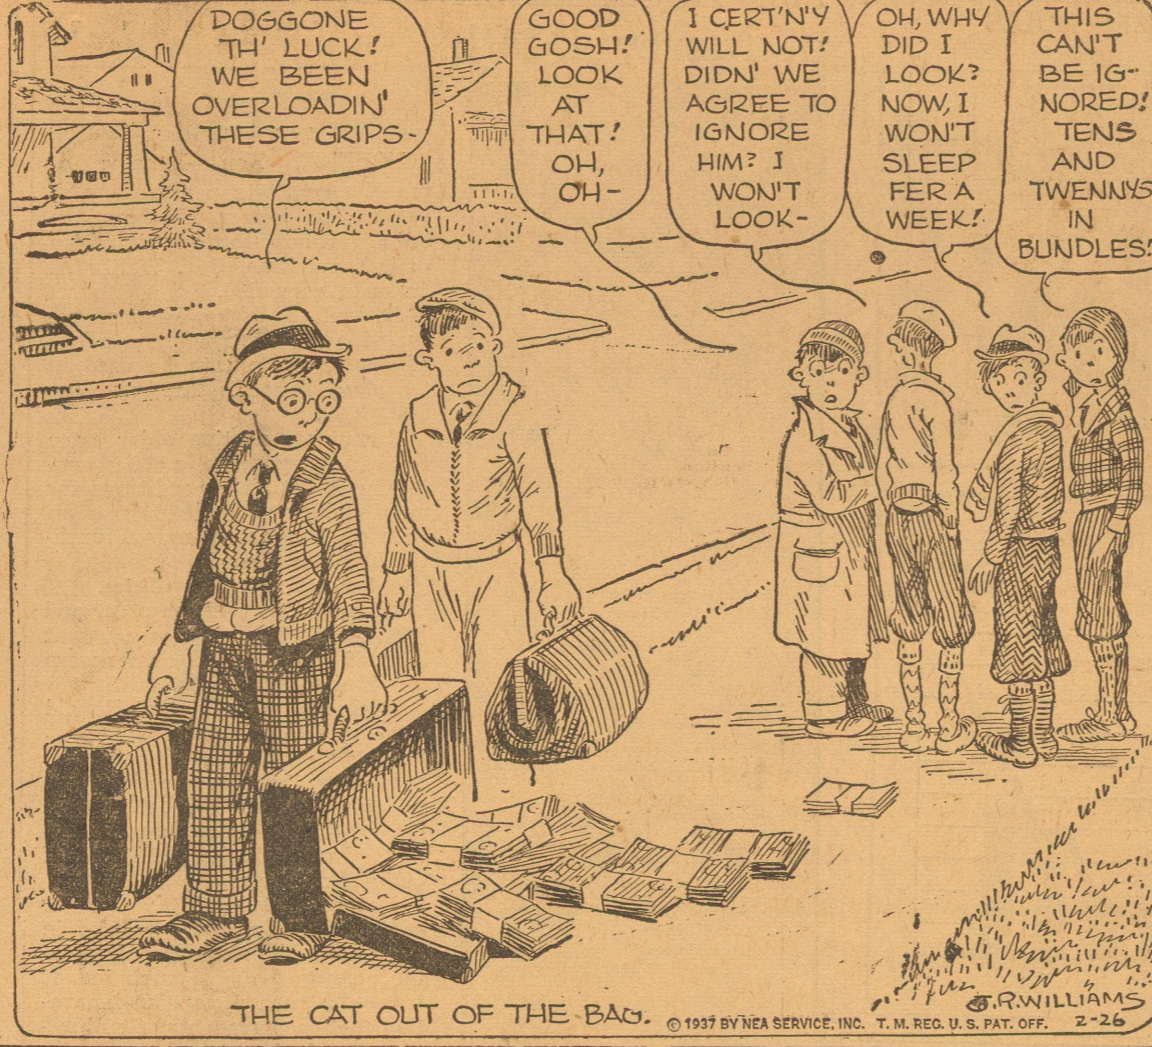

Professor McCarney is not only a satisfactory booking agent, but the daddy of sock salesman. The professor can do more with a broken-down and fierce-looking wrestler in fighting trunks than any man alive. If a show is a bit below par, he already has the trade talked into letting it down easy.

Brodie can't be criticized for taking Torrance along carefully. It was the clumsy way he went about it that got him in the jam.

All fighters, especially heavyweights, require cagy guidance, at the outset. The object at first is to give them confidence. Then there is the task of establishing a reputation.

The trick is to leave the customers satisfied—and keep a jump ahead of the sheriff.

VEGETABLES respond to friendship. An onion seems better for the society of a squash, and even a turnip perks up when invited to join a baked casserole.

Casserole of Vegetables (4 to 6 servings)

Six medium onions, 6 small turnips, 1 light summer (Florida) squash, 1-2 cups bread cubes, 1 egg, 1 tablespoon sugar, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon grated Italian cheese, seasoning.

Clean, pare squash, removing all seeds. Pare turnips and peel onion. Cut vegetables into wedge-shaped pieces. Beat egg slightly, mix with bread cubes and stir in seasoning and melted butter.

Butter baking dish. Fill with prepared vegetables, season with salt, pepper and dust with sugar. Cover with bread dressing moistened with meatless stock. Dust top of bread dressing with grated cheese. Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 1-2 hour.

This makes an adequate main course for a meatless dinner.

The trouble with most vegetable plates is not their lack of vegetables but their lack of character. Don't regard a vegetable plate as a substitute for something else. Look at it as a very definite something in itself.

Use fresh cooked, sprightly vegetables and keep a weather eye out for rich color and alluring flavor. Try this combination and see how you like it: Blanched and steamed broccoli heads with golden Hollandaise sauce, an opened and buttered baked potato, 3 grilled fresh mushrooms, richly brown, exciting in flavor,

Sunday's Menu

BREAKFAST: Strawberry-pineapple cup, Canadian bacon, cornbread, jam, coffee, milk.

DINNER: Spiced grapefruit juice, crown roast of lamb, green peas, brown gravy, potato souffle, glazed carrots, deep dish nectarine pie, coffee, milk.

SUPPER: Shredded cabbage salad, chili sauce dressing, toasted cornbread slices, orange layer cake, tea, cocoa.

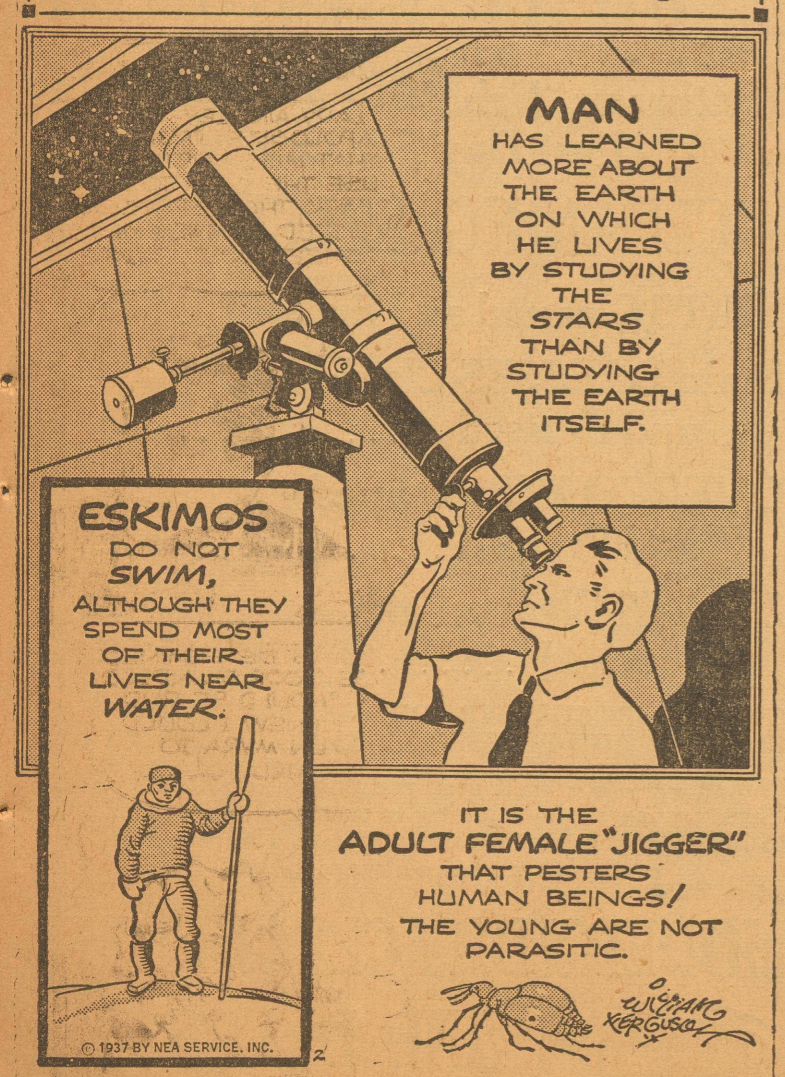

A few lightly cooked carrots, cut in strips. That is a lively dish, diverting in its range of appetizing color—from the white of the meaty potato, through the golden tones of Hollandaise, the orange of carrot, the Van Dyke brown of grilled mushrooms right up to the bright green of broccoli.

Scalloped Tomatoes With Peppers and Onions (4 to 6 servings)

One can tomatoes, 1 green pepper, 1 onion, 1-4 cup bread crumbs, 1-4 cup melted butter.

Drain tomatoes and chop pepper and onion. Combine melted butter with bread crumbs. Butter a round baking dish. Place half the buttered crumbs in bottom. Mix pepper, onion, drained tomatoes and seasoning. Add extra tomato liquid if needed. Place in baking dish over crumbs. Cover with remaining buttered crumbs. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) until crumbs are brown. A luncheon in itself; quite a buddy to broiled lamb chops.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

MAN knew little about his earth until he began to understand the stars and planets. Through his study of the heavenly bodies he became to know what part the earth plays in the universe. And from his study of the earth, he came to know more about the stars.

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS--By Blosser

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON WITH RODNEY DUTCHER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — The so-called era of good feeling which was popularly supposed to have set in after the election has been blown to what—for want of an uninvited better word—might be called smithereens.

Papa Roosevelt, according to all his pals writing for the weekly magazines, was going to be conciliatory toward the conservative business element. But he has turned a backward somersault by plopping his message, proposing to revamp the supreme court and the rest of the federal judiciary, right down at the feet of those who thought he was anxious to kiss and make up.

One of the first examples of the renewed bitterness observed here came when Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, foremost southern liberal in Congress, made a speech to the exclusive Harvard Club here the day after the presidential message. Maverick, who sat next to Frederick Delano, Roosevelt's uncle, took the topic: "College Men and Their Lack of Education." The happenings of the occasion have not been previously reported.

MAVERICK, himself a lawyer, said he had been in Washington two years and about all he had heard about liberty had been said by high-priced lawyers in application to liberty for corporations. He had heard practically nothing, he said, on behalf of civil liberties for individual citizens.

Maverick said he was still waiting to hear some graduate group speak up for academic liberty or freedom of speech, that lawyers had expanded in influence only as corporations had grown in size. Some lawyers, he declared, still thought their profession was very powerful, but the last presidential election had proved their power didn't amount to so much. Furthermore, said Maverick, the supreme court wasn't sacred.

Then the chairman, a Harvard law school graduate who practices locally, arose, livid with rage. Inasmuch as Maverick had criticized university men and suggested they were prejudiced, the chairman said, the usual period for questions to and answers from the speaker would be omitted.

MAVERICK stood up and said he didn't care what the club did, but if he were going to be treated with discourtesy, he wanted everyone to understand that he knew it.

The meeting then became a turmoil and the cry "We want Maverick!" was overwhelming. Maverick made speeches, others made speeches pro and con. The secretary of the club apologized. Delano and others got the chairman in a corner and made him apologize, too.

Inaugurated for his second term, Roosevelt had his choice of repeating the oath word by word after Chief Justice Hughes, or of simply saying, "I do." He chose the former.

Otherwise, he whispered later to a close friend, he might have had to feel he was making a promise to follow the oath as it was conceived in the mind of Hughes—whereas if he spoke the words himself, he would know exactly what he himself meant.

CHEANEY

The play that was rendered by the seventh grade pupils at the school house was a grand success, well presented and a large crowd. We were glad to have a crowd from Ranger and hope they will come back often to our entertainments.

Mrs. J. U. Elrod was called to the bedside of her sister, Mrs. Walter Rucker, at Roby. She passed away and was buried there the 19th. She never realized her sister was with her when the end came.

Mrs. Elrod has the sympathy of the entire community.

Mr. James Dion and L. C. Love were at Eastland Saturday selling junk, as that's the order of the day around here at present.

Mrs. R. L. Yardley is reported some better but not able to sit up yet.

Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Browning visited Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lawrence at Triumph Friday.

Quite a few neighbors gathered at Mrs. Minick's Saturday night for a radio party, and all reported a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Camie Lee of Cross Roads attended the program at the school house the 18th.

Mr. Jonah Kitchen was a business visitor in Ranger Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hother Thomas and children of Roswell, N. Mex., visited his grandmother and Uncle Berry Thomas and family last week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Blackwell attended Miss L. C. Odee's funeral at Alameda Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hazard of Staff visited in the R. L. Yardley home Sunday evening.

There will be prayer meeting at Mr. and Mrs. J. U. Elrod's home Friday evening. All are invited to attend.

Bro. Ross Duncan of Ranger filled his regular appointment on Sunday and Sunday night at Cheaney.

Archie Elrod and Harold Ham were business visitors in Eastland Saturday.

Garland and Rex Elrod were in Eastland Monday on business.

Miss Modell Montgomery, called in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pirtle, Wednesday night.

The New Hope Home Demonstration club met in the home of Mrs. T. A. Esion, Thursday, Feb. 11th, for an all day quilting. There were sixteen members present and two visitors.

Mrs. Roy Bennett joined the club. Miss Ramey could not be with us as she was ill.

Mr. Frank Moore and family visited Mr. Virgil Weaver, Wednesday.

Gene Autry at Lyric Friday

Local admirers of Gene Autry will be glad to learn he will appear in his newest picture, "The Big Show," at the Lyric Friday and Saturday. He is shown above with Kay Hughes in a scene from the picture. Autry made many friends in Eastland recently when he made a personal appearance at the Connellee.

Law Has Forgotten Town of Katy In Southeast Texas

KATY, Tex.—The law has "forgotten" this little community of western Harris county—the nearest peace officer lives 28 miles away in Houston.

Katy hasn't had a justice of the peace or a constable in so long that those who formerly held the office have to stop and figure how many years ago it was.

And citizens are tired of being forgotten. They want a full-time deputy sheriff stationed in the community to stop a wave of cattle rustling and chicken thefts.

A delegation asked county commissioner's court to provide the community with an officer. Sheriff Norfleet Hill recommended that a deputy be employed.

Commissioner's court changed justice precinct lines many years ago in such a manner that Katy was left without the protection of even precinct officers.

Neither the former justice of the peace nor the constable complained about losing their jobs—then. They served only part time and found that unpinning community disputes was more bother than the jobs were worth.

"We really did not have much business," said J. K. Seber, who was constable for 10 years, but who is now pastor of the Inter-denominational church. Seber couldn't remember when he served.

"Ed Romack was the last justice of the peace," Seber said. Romack is a merchant. Seber said, "Ed might remember when we served."

Romack couldn't recall the exact terms either.

"I was appointed to serve out an unexpired term and after that I guess I just resigned or the job didn't hold out or something," the merchant said, "because I know that after a time I just wasn't justice of the peace any more."

Romack said justice suits among his customers hurt his business and he did not want the position.

Seber said there was one thing he was unable to understand about his tenure of office.

"I ran the first time," he said, "and after that they notified me every two years I had been re-elected. I just got tired of the job about the same time they decided to abolish it anyhow."

But the law enforcement situation has changed in Katy. The community of 500 persons complained that it is being victimized by petty thieves.

Sunday School Class Meets
With Teacher:
A division of the Senior department of the Young People of the Methodist church school met Wednesday evening at the home of their new teacher and hostess, Mrs. Gwendolyn Bittle-Cox, who was assisted by her mother, the house hostess, Mrs. P. B. Bittle.

A formal dinner of three courses was served at 6:45 p. m., about one large and three smaller tables, centered with spring flowers and lighted candles. The large table was presided over by the pastor, Rev. P. W. Walker, and the president of the class, Miss Ruby Lee Pritchard.

The tables were surfaced in linens and the spring time green and yellow place cards, matched the yellow napkins and holders, and place favors of sweetpeas corsages.

Guests were received at the door by Miss Sylvia Ann Cox.

An informal evening of singing was taken by Misses Madge Hearn, Nora Frances Mahon, Eleanor Harper, Lucy Mae Cottingham, Helen Rosenquest, Louise Cook, Geraldine Harris, Mildred McGlamery, Nettie Lee Miller, Nina Mae Seale, Thelma Stokes, Marie Plummer, Ida Lee Foster, Kathleen Earnest, Wilma Williams and Ruby Lee Pritchard; Rev. Walker; Miss Ruth Hart of Monahans, a guest, and Mrs. Cox, hostess.

Martha Dorcas Members Start Membership Contest:

A meeting of the Martha Dorcas class of the Methodist church was concluded Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. E. Coleman, house hostess.

Assisting hostesses were Misses M. B. Griffin, A. A. Edmonson, and George I. Lane.

A brief business session opened by the president, Mrs. Coleman, brought minutes by their secretary, Mrs. Jack Dwyer, and reports of chairmen of committees.

A membership contest, to be graded on points of attendance and new members, was started under leadership of Mrs. W. E. Harris for one side, and Mrs. C. H. McBea for the other side, with contest to end in three months when the losing side will entertain the winners.

The next social meeting was announced for fourth Wednesday in March, 8 p. m., at home of Mrs. C. W. Hoffman with Misses Mack O'Neal, H. C. Williams, B. O. Harrell as cohostesses.

The "forget-me-not" friendship quilts were exchanged for another three month period, and the identity of the concealed names of closing period, revealed at this time.

The session closed with prayer by Mrs. Ida Foster. On account of the group attending the funeral services for Mr. Herring, there was no social program.
Refreshments were served, stacked sandwiches, individual cherry pie with whipped cream and iced tea, with patriotic colors carried out in the red and blue tea straws, tinted cream, colored sandwiches and the table service.

Personnel Misses: Robert S. Searles, W. J. Peters, C. H. McBea, J. W. Miller, L. Bargesley, J. I. Burkhead, C. L. Fields, C. C. Robey, A. J. Treadwell, Fred Hale, Roy Stokes, B. O. Harrell, Ed T. Choir Presents Taken to Department Member:

As a mark of appreciation for the services of B. M. Collie, who has directed the music of the Methodist church during the summer months, for some years, he was presented a white gold pocket knife and watch chain during the rehearsal of the choir at the church Wednesday night.

The presentation was made by Mrs. J. M. Perkins on behalf of choir, and was followed by a talk by the choir director, Wilda Drago, an expression of her appreciation of Mr. Collie's assistance with the music of the church.
Mr. and Mrs. Collie leave next week for their new home in Austin.

Gadabout Club Meets With Miss Vickers:

An informal evening of visiting and planning was spent by those members of the Gadabout club who assembled at the home of Miss Norma Frances Vickers Wednesday night.
The gathering was small as some members were engaged in rehearsal for the Margaret Hart-Blanchard recital and others practicing with the Dramatic club.

Miss Vickers served a supper plate of tuna fish salad, lettuce and mayonnaise, snacks, pickles, olives, small cakes and tea.

Basket Ball Game Postpones Meet:

On account of several members of the Sub Deb club playing in the basket ball game set for Saturday afternoon in Strawn, the club will not meet until the following Saturday, when Miss Mary Lou Harbin will be hostess.

Mrs. Guy Patterson Hostess to Club:

Mrs. Guy Patterson entertained the Bluebonnet club at her residence.

Convicts' Study Of French Ends

By United Press
TOPEKA, Kan.—Inmates of the Kansas State penitentiary at Lansing no longer will be given the opportunity to study French in their spare time, Gov. Walter A. Huxman has ruled.

Several years ago, Huxman revealed, a photograph was purchased for the prison to be used in teaching French. The machine cost $290.
Recently a routine order came through the governor's office containing a list of expenditures for new equipment. Included was an item of $400 for a new French-teaching phonograph.

Studies Prison Facilities.
Huxman canceled the order and began checking up to see what kind of educational facilities were provided for prisoners.

A check revealed that Ronald Finney, former Empora, Kan., banker and Kansas forger, had been promoted from work in the prison mines and had been put in charge of the prison library. Finney advocated the teaching of cultural subjects.

Not content with the meager educational facilities offered in the prison, the first French-teaching phonograph was purchased. It was soon such a popular innovation that the exponents of culture-at-prison decided to ask for another machine so more men could be accommodated.

"I don't know what good the study of French will do the inmates of the state penitentiary," Huxman said, "and anyway, whether it does them any good or not, French teaching is going to be cut out."

He revealed that the state prison had a deficit of $200,000 and that his primary concern was cutting out all unnecessary expenses.
