The state ought also to put a minimum of 4-10 of a cent per thousand feet on gas, recognizing the average 20 cent price at the well that exists over the nation. This 4-10 of a cent would be immaterial in the $1.50 per thousand-foot final price paid by the domestic users of the gas.

The Governor's Race.

A development in the governor's race following the basis of "business and economy," has been intimated for this year if Governor Sterling should stay out of the running, or later if he runs for re-election.

It is a definite movement to bring Lee Simmons, manager of the Texas prison system, into the governor's race.

During the past several months of indefinite line-up for the campaign, friends of Mr. Simmons made much headway toward drafting him. They have made it clear that there is no prospect of his opposing the present governor.

Mr. Simmons, they point out, has made a remarkable record, almost spectacular in its far-reaching achieve ments, toward taking the state's most troublesome financial institution, and make it an exemplar of good business methods, taking up of slack, wiping out customary losses, and relieving the taxpayers of a heavy money drain.

administration. Better prison morale, saving of much money, better op-eration and use of the prison system's facilities have been cited by Mr. Simmons' friends and by the prison board and state officials generally as results of his work. Hot food in cold weather is best for breakfast and lunch. Cooked

His protagonists feel that Mr. Simmons' service would be of the same kind if he were in command of the entire state's administration. They are enthusiastic about him: sible a little stewed fruit either and believe that the popularity he has won in his business job of running the prison system would push him far to-ward election as governor. They point out he is not of the politically-minded type; and they believe he is the type

EASTLAND TELEGRAM

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist The story of the meeting of Jesus and the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well is remarkable; but the strangeness of the narrative does strangeness of the narrative does not appear until one takes into ac-count its background in the cus-tom of the time. General accounts in the New Testament would suggest that there was no such vivid and strict privacy for woman in the time of Jesus as has developed in later ages in the east, and espe-cially among the Moslems. For a man and woman to con-cially among the Moslems. For a man and woman to con-verse publicly, as did Jesus and this woman at Jacob's well, was against all the prevailing custom . and tradition, and the narrative indicates more strongly than any-thing else the extent to which Jesus was unconventional almost to the point of rebellion in disre-garding the social usages of the time.

Probably if it had not been for her reputation she would not have been so free in conversing with a stranger. At any rate, when we are told that as the dis-ciples returned they marveled at finding Jesus and the woman con-version so intimately. versing so intimately.

The narrative, however, is one of the most interesting and most instructive in all literature. There is, first of all, that very important is instructive to see how con iderably and tactfully Jesus dealt with her. He did not burst out into censoriousness, nor was out into censoriousness, nor was he in any haste to display his knowledge of the woman's actual life. On the contrary, rather quiet lv, yet very effectively he probed the wound in her life that he might quicken her confession and bring her into the atmosphere of life and healing. The any mass of the slayer of Mrs. Search for the slayer of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, right, in her cottage at fashionable Mid-dleburg, Va., near Washington, has spread to several eastern cities. Mrs. Ilsley, a wealthy sportswoman, had lived in the cottage, shown here, on her 200-acre estate since leasing her

The conversation concerned the water of life—a very vital theme in the east where wells were so few and scarce as to be of remark-able value, and a very important theme for other times and places where the wells of truth and right living have often run dry. The in-cident has been expressed in a hymn that used to be sung much by the last generation: by the last generation:

Jesus the water of life will give Freely, Freely, Freely. Come to that fountain; O drink Freely, Freely, Freely.

NB

It is a good theme and a sound invitation, for, though it may not be at Jacob's well, we all have the privilege of discoursing with Jesus and partaking of the eternal foun-

Last Saturday might the Stags met the Church of God team from Cisco and won an easy victory. In the first half the Cisco team held their own, but they were complete-ly bewildered when the Stags came on the floor in the second half. They finally managed a score of 16-30 for W. M. U. Immediately after this game the Stags played the fast Oakley five. In the first half it was a walk-away for the Stags. The score at the half was 36-8. In the last half the Oakley boys played a better game but they were unable to run up a good score. The final whis-tle blew and the score board show-ed 50 for the Stags and 25 for the Oakley team. The Stags seemed to get the old spirit back again and we hope they will continue their rally through the rest of the sea-son. They will soon play A. C. C.'s freshmen. We wish them 'good luck! luck!
