

The dime-a-dance girl

Beautiful Ellen Rossiter, who works by day as a salesgirl in Barclay's Department Store, lives with her brother, Molly Rossiter, and her 12-year-old sister, Myra, and her 12-year-old brother, Mike. Irresponsible Molly has long since spent the fortune left by her English husband and the two girls support the family.

Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Ellen decides to work at night as a dance hall hostess until the sum is made up. She goes to Dreamland and interviews Jacob Salomon who offers her a job on condition that she supply her own evening dresses. She has no evening dress.

Back at the store again, Ellen begins to cry in her bitter disappointment. Steven Barclay, owner of the store, sees her and asks her to come to his office. When she tells him of her problems he offers to give her a dress which she refuses to accept it. He then offers to lend her one of the dresses worn by the models. She borrows a lovely white taffeta frock.

Ellen is half-pleased, half-frightened by Barclay's obvious interest in her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IV When Ellen accepted Steven Barclay's offer to drive her to Dreamland she did so with the same naturalness he had shown in extending the invitation. Their friendship had made such strides that her only hesitancy sprang from the vague fears which had troubled her in his office, fears that his name would be linked with hers by gossiping fellow-workers.

But Barclay himself had no such fears. He moved in a different world than his employees. He would have been amazed had he dreamed of the complicated feelings of many of them, of their bitter narrowness, of their jealous envy of those more fortunate. He was too naturally modest to imagine that his comings and goings, however trivial, were of absorbing interest to scores of men and women who had never met him. Nor did it occur to him that he might be subjecting a girl to the breath of scandal.

The Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pop)

By Cowan WASHINGTON—HIS LIFE STORY IN PICTURES, COMMEMORATING THE 200TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTH No. 1—BOYHOOD

The first president of the United States was born on a plantation near Fredericksburg, Va., on Feb. 11, 1732, although his birthday is now celebrated on Feb. 22, due to a change in the calendar system.

A church sexton was young George's first teacher. Most of his education was gained from practical outdoor companions.

The boy spent many hours riding about his father's estates, watching slaves at work and Virginia estates. The boy spent long hours riding about his father's plantations, watching slaves at work and learning the fundamentals of growing tobacco and raising stock.

He became interested in surveying at an early age and quickly mastered the elements of this profession. At 14 he was able to plot and measure fields for his brothers and neighbors. Almost everybody agrees that the story about young George chopping down the cherry tree was pure fiction—just a figment of the imagination of Parson Weems, who had a habit of turning all of Washington's traits into virtues. The legend still persists, however, as the best known of his boyhood.

Houston Has Good Prospects For 1932 Team

By United Press. HOUSTON.—Fred Ankenman, president of the Houston club which won the Texas league pennant last year, says nothing will help the league more this coming season than six well-balanced clubs capable of being up in the running most of the year. "What the Texas league needs is a good race," Ankenman told the United Press. "It seems that for the last 10 years or so there has usually been a race in which from one to three clubs only had a chance to win the pennant. It would be a great stimulant to have six or more clubs in a good, tight race."

Ankenman said his own club was pretty well set for the coming season, except for the second base position and a good utility man. He expects to complete a deal for a second baseman before the training season begins. He is not depending upon Carey Selph to return and will plan accordingly. However, he would think it a fine break if Carey were returned to Houston by the White Sox. Selph insists he cannot report to Chicago, any other major league club or any minor league club. He considers his business connections too valuable to leave Houston to play baseball. He says he will return to the White Sox the draft price if they will let him remain in Houston.

The following players from last season will return to the championship team for spring training: Harold Funk, catcher; Elmer Hanson, pitcher; George Payne, pitcher; Charles Breedon, pitcher; Eddie Hock, third base; Tom Carey, shortstop; Homer Peel, outfielder; Joe Medwick, outfielder, and Jimmy Saunders, outfielder. These newcomers will be on hand:

Mike Cvenegos, pitcher; Ralph Judd, pitcher; Raymond Moss, pitcher; Ed Rogers, pitcher; C. M. Gaffney, pitcher; Lamar Moreland, pitcher; Sam Warrack, pitcher; Alvin Wicks, pitcher; Dominic Ryba, catcher; Lee Dixon, catcher; Lee Stebbins, first baseman, and Howard McFarland, outfielder. Ankenman believes Ryba, who plays all positions, will prove one of the most valuable men in the league. Last year he was voted the most valuable man in the Western association. He played in 142 games and batted .342. In 1929 and 1930 he hit .440 and .356 respectively for Stockdale in the Middle Atlantic league. Houston broke all attendance records last year, but the league as a whole ended in poor financial shape. Ankenman believes Beaumont would have drawn 40,000 more people last season with night baseball and Wichita Falls would have shown better likewise. The Houston president says he wouldn't start a season without "ladies' night" on Mondays and Fridays and without the Knothole Gang. He believes the broadcasting of games under proper supervision and by good announcers also is good for the game.

A specialist says we are worried over imaginary difficulties. As, for instance, where is our wandering prosperity tonight?
