THERE IS JOY IN THE PETROLEUM WORLD
 Tulsa is the oil city of Oklahoma. Tulsa is on the map again. Crude prices were hiked March 24 when an advance of 15 cents per barrel for crude oil to a $1 top was posted effective April 1 by the Continental Oil company of Ponca City. Then the Sinclair-Prairie people were the first of the larger independents to schedule a similar advance. Other companies, large and small, indicated that they will follow with an announcement of increases by April 1. Now that are the principal reasons given for the increase? Why, controlled operation of flush fields like Oklahoma City, East Texas and California Kettleman Hills to prevent over-production and field destruction; the approach of summer and the season of peak gasoline consumption "and the decision of operators to obtain more money for their product in an effort to avoid losses incurred last year."

According to the Associated Press, Texas is not expected to enter into a contact with Kansas and Oklahoma to limit the production of oil. Martial law appears to have saved the day in the East Texas field. It hiked the price of crude from 10 cents a barrel to the price level of today. It placed millions in the pockets of landowners and lease holders. It placed millions in the shape of royalties in the lean chests of Texas and its institutions and citizens. Yes, there is joy in the petroleum world. Pass it all down the line.

PRICE FIXING OF FARM PRODUCTS
 Representative Anderson of Minnesota is a Republican. He has introduced a price-fixing bill on farm products. His measure would provide the following minimum prices on basic agricultural products; wheat, $1.25 a bushel; cotton, 15 cents a pound; corn, 75 cents a bushel; rice, 70 cents a bushel; barley, 65 cents a bushel; hogs and cattle, 10 cents a pound; butter, 32 cents a pound.

William Gibbs McAdoo is a Democrat. He calls himself a Jeffersonian Democrat. His plan of salvation calls for the price fixing of wheat and cotton imports and then graciously permit the growers of these important staples to throw the surpluses in the world market and bid defiance to all competitors. Now a Republican congressman from Minnesota where the rebels of politics are said to be all powerful would go all the road. His plan is to fix prices regardless of tariff. To a puzzled wayfarer on the ground or in the treetops it would appear that Democrats are breaking away from the fundamentals of Jefferson and Republicans are breaking away from the political ideals as well as the fundamentals of government promulgated by Alexander Hamilton and Abraham Lincoln. Are bogus party trademarks to carry any weight in the balloting the nation over in the coming month of November?

PRESIDENT DAWES ASKED TO COME ACROSS
 Representative Bachmann is a Republican of West Virginia. He has introduced a bill asking for information without delay. It concerns President Dawes of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Representative Bachmann calls for a report within 10 days showing the names of persons and concerns receiving loans and the amount of the advances. He also asked for a report of the officials and employees and the salaries they receive. Representative Bachmann is a very inquisitive personage. He says there has been so much secrecy about the Dawes finance corporation that the information he asks should be made public. Moreover to whom this $2,000,000,000 is being loaned and whether the salaries paid to officials and employees are acceptable. A reminder that the special house economy committee agreed that all government salaries should be cut 11 per cent, with a $1000 exemption.

There are 298,000 government employes drawing $3,000 annually but only 7000 making $4,000. Representative Bachmann wants to know, "you know," what the big fellows attached to the many commissions are taking down annually. There is ever a busy fly foundering in the political ointment.

ELLIS CAPTURES THE COTTON PRODUCTION BANNER
 Ellis county in the blackland district of Texas was the banner cotton producer in 1931. Official figures give the county 130,880 bales according to complete ginning figures made public by the general census bureau. Nueces county held the record for 1930 when its growers produced 148,442 bales. In 1931 production, Williamson county ranked second with 106,243 bales, Collin county third with 103,696 bales, and Hill county fourth with 92,434 bales. Texas in 1931 produced a million bales over the crop of 1930 and was close to one-third of the national total of 16,595,780 bales. Now what will the harvest be this year? Will the price level be far below the cost of production?

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT the purchase of advertising space by jobbers and manufacturers is not a speculation. It is a substantial investment.
 If their goods are quality goods and can stand the test, they should keep them before the public with truthful advertising.
 It will create a demand.
 It is the biggest help in selling goods.
 It will make steady customers.
 It will introduce the goods into a new field.
 It will build a business.
 Advertising is necessary to any business.
 No business can succeed without it.
 Goods that can't be advertised cannot get anywhere.
 Merchandise that is made to imitate advertised goods can't stand the test.
 If fake goods are sold, the public soon finds it out.
 When they get stung once by buying imitations of quality goods, that is enough.
 It pays to get the habit of buying advertised goods.
 When you do you get quality goods.

All Aboard, Leatherneck!
 SHORTSTOP JAMES LEVEY is to have one more chance to play baseball for the St. Louis Browns. Bill Killefer, boss of the Browns, says, "And you can quote me on that."
 Bill has appointed himself first mate and definitely called off "shore leave" for the former marine. It's "all aboard what's going aboard" for Levey, or else. And First Mate Bill is going to get some sleep.
 Levey came up last year, and after displaying such promise in training camp that he was assigned regularly to shortstop, began to rather the idea that a big league season was just like one long lark in Newport News.

Now if That Was Alex
 ONE night Killefer sat up and waited for his wandering boy, who arrived in the hotel just in time for breakfast.
 "I'm getting a little too old to sit up all night waiting for sailor boys to come home," Bill told me here today. "I didn't mind it so much when I was younger, when I had to put Grover Alexander to bed after a hard night."
 Killefer is a patient man, but he was in earnest when he declared Levey would have to pay attention or go back to the bushes.

Brethren and Sisters!
 THE story of James Levey, contrasted with that of Irving Burns, first baseman of the Browns, might be taken as a text for a sermon on the uncertainties of baseball.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

By STUART CAMERON, United Press Sports Editor.

Crossetti Elected to Star of Rookie Brigade.
 Frank Crossetti, 22-year-old shortstop rookie of the New York Yankees stands out as the one best in a spring training camp season that has contained many potential brilliants.
 Although remembering that the grapefruit season do not always hold to their lustre through June or even May, it seems safe to predict a definite and successful major league career for this former Pacific coast star.

Crossetti was born of Italian parentage and comes to the Yankees in a season which may see the passing (from the Yank club) of another Italian star. That latter, of course, is Pooh "Em Up" Tony Lazzeri, who has done the second basing for Col. Ruppert's club for some seasons, and whose position seems destined to pass to Jack Saltzgaver, an acquisition from St. Paul.
 Crossetti has plenty of speed and on the bases. His hitting in big league exhibition games has been fully creditable and comparable to the 343 record he made in the Pacific coast league last season.
 Yankee club officials have decided—and you can't blame them—that Crossetti just better be good. He came to the New York club for a reputed outlay of $75,000.
 Crossetti fits well into the current major league drive for more speed. Especially does he excel in starting the double play, a phase of the game in which the Yankees did not excel last season.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

with BILL MAYES

The Cisco Lobos football team is a thing of the past—for a year or two at least.
 The state executive committee of the Texas interscholastic league met yesterday and finally decided to uphold the recommendations of the executive committee of district 3 and declare Cisco ineligible, as far as football is concerned, for a period of one year. That means that the Lobos will not be able to play a football game until the last Friday in September, 1933, because there is a ruling in the league now that teams cannot play over practice games, until the last Friday in September.
 The Ranger Bulldogs will now have to scout around and try to find as remunerative a game as the Bulldog-Lobo clash, which is played each Nov. 11, and the other teams in the Oil Belt will probably be seeking some team that will draw the gate that Cisco commands. Regardless of eligibility or any other rulings, the Lobos always managed to draw the crowds and bring in the needed dollars.

Coach Jefferies has secured a berth in Wichita Falls as head football coach and Assistant Coach Hill is rumored to be scouting around seeking a place.

With no football this year, the Lobos will not be inclined to work out, and the boys who planned to make the team this year will be the losers by one year of school. Those who leave the school will not be eligible because of the one-year transfer ruling, so there you are.

By 1933 Cisco fans and the boys in school will probably not be as football conscious as they are now. They will have to start from the bottom and build up another team, which should take several years. From a football standpoint the Cisco school will probably not be rated as one of the Big Four for several years to come, if ever again.

In handing down the verdict, Roy B. Henderson, athletic director for the league, said: "Upon recommendation of the District No. 3 football executive committee and after investigation, the state executive committee has suspended Cisco in football in 1932. The suspension will not apply to Cisco's participation in other interscholastic league activities."

L. E. Dudley, of Abilene, district committee chairman of the Oil Belt, has announced that a meeting will be held next Monday to work out an official schedule for the next season. The schedule was to have been formulated some time ago, but action was delayed until the outcome of the protest against Cisco could be definitely decided.
 The meeting will probably be

held in Eastland, Mr. Dudley says, and the five-team schedule will be worked out.

Benny Butler, editor and sports writer of the Cisco Daily News, says that the Lobos will probably have a football team this year anyway, playing strong teams from out of the state.

Football without a schedule, without a championship of some kind at stake is not much of an incentive for either the players or the fans. There is not as much to be gained by defeating a team from Opelousas, La., or Ochelata, Okla., as there would be for the Lobos in defeating Ranger, or Breckenridge for that matter. And we would like to be able to see the Cisco-Breckenridge game of 1933. It should be worth the price of admission—even to a sport writer.

Fred Hightower and Cnuek Van Horn would both have been eligible to play with the Lobos this year, which would have made a combination that would cause lots of grief to Oil Belt teams. However, by the time Cisco gets off the black list Hightower and Van Horn will both have passed on to other fields and the Oil Belt will have nothing to fear from them.

At the time this is written—at 9:15 a. m., CST—there has come no word as to whether the Elks have a fight card for next Monday or not. It would be just like some-

Sweet Are the Uses of Adversity

Amarilloan Renews Acquaintances With Wife and Neighbors, Returns To Church, Thanks To the Depression.

The author of the following, Henry Ansley, is a well known newspaperman of the Panhandle-Plains, on the staff of the Amarillo Globe-News, an original associate of Gene Howe and Wilbur Hawks. This article, reproduced from the latest issue of West Texas Today, monthly magazine of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, is a boil-down of an address he has been delivering, with riotous success at many places in the Globe-News' circulation territory.

Editor's Note.

I like depression.

No more prosperity for me. I have had more fun since the depression started than I ever had in my life. I had forgotten how to live, what it meant to have real friends, what it was like to eat common every-day food. Fact is, I was getting just a little high hat.

Time, Neighbors, Clothes.

It's great to drop into a store and feel that you can spend an hour or two or three or a half day just visiting and not feel that you are wasting valuable time. I like the depression.

I am getting acquainted with my neighbors. In the last six months I have become acquainted with folks who have been living next door to me for three years. I am following the Biblical admonition, "Love your neighbors." One of my neighbors has one of the best-looking wives I have ever seen. She is a dandy. I am getting acquainted with my neighbors and learning to love them.

Three years ago, I ordered my clothes from a merchant tailor—two and three suits at a time. All my clothes were good ones. I was always dressed up. But now, I haven't bought a suit in two years. I am mighty proud of my Sunday-gone-to-meeting clothes. When I dress up, I am dressed up and I don't mean maybe. I like the depression.

The Wife.

Three years ago I was so busy and my wife was so busy that we didn't see much of each other, consequently we sort of lost interest in each other. I never went home to lunch. About twice a week I went home for dinner—at 6:30 o'clock. I never had time to go anywhere with her. If I did go on a party, I could never locate her, since there was always a "blonde" or a "red-head" available. I didn't much worry about it.

My wife belonged to all the clubs in town. She even joined the young mothers' club. We don't have any children, but she was studying—and between playing bridge and going to clubs, she was never at home.

My twin beds are stored in the garage and the old family affair is being used. We are enjoying life. Instead of taking a hotwater bottle to bed these cold nights, she sticks her heels in my back, just like she did before Hoover was elected.

When I would come home at night, if my wife was at home, she would already be in her bed and I would crawl in mine. If she came in first, it was vice versa.

Beds and Clubs.

We like the depression. We have come down off our pedestal and are really living at my house now. The twin beds are stored in the garage and the old family affair is being used. We are enjoying life. Instead of taking a hotwater bottle to bed these cold nights, she sticks her heels in my back, just like she did before Hoover was elected.

I haven't been out on a party in 18 months. I have lost my book of telephone numbers. My wife has dropped all the clubs. I believe we are falling in love all over again. I am pretty well satisfied with my wife. Think I will keep her, at least until she is forty and then if I feel like I do now, I may trade her for two twenties.

I am feeling better since the depression. I take more exercise. I walk to town and a lot of folks who used to drive Cadillacs are walking with me. I like the depression.

My digestion is better. I haven't been to see a doctor in a year. I can eat anything I want to.

Food—and Food.

I am getting real, honest-to-goodness food. Three years ago, we had filet mignon once a week, now we have round steak with flour gravy. Then, we had roast beef of guinea hen, now we are glad to get sow-bosom with the buttons on it.

I like the depression. My salary has been cut to where I can't afford to buy lettuce and spinach and parsley and we can't afford to have sandwiches and frozen deserts and all that damfoolishness which has killed more good men than the World War.

I like the depression. Three years ago, I played golf all day Sunday and besides I was so darned smart that there wasn't a preacher in West Texas who could tell me anything.

Now, I can get to church regularly, never miss a Sunday. And if this depression keeps on, I will be going to prayer meeting before long.

I like the depression.

Sod Houses Are Puzzle to Kansan

TOPEKA, Kan.—Kirk Mechem, secretary, Kansas State Historical society, is in a dilemma. He wants to build a sod house, and doesn't know how.

The history books say that the Kansas prairies were dotted with sod houses and that thousands of early-day Kansans lived in them.

Mechem, whose job calls for much familiarity with the history books, decided to build a sod house in the state museum. But now he can't find anyone who knows what the buildings were like.

Other states have log houses, stone houses and other types of pioneer structures in their state museums, but Kansas wants one of the typical "soddies." But how to build one is the question.

How thick were the walls and of what were the roofs made? What kinds of windows and doors did the soddies have, and were the rooms plastered inside? What kind of grass makes the best sod, and what time of year should the sod be cut?

the man HUNTERS. BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Susan Carey is learning stenography in a Chicago business school. Reprimanded one day for an error, she looks up to Robert Dunbar, another student, staring at her. She has heard he is heir to the Dunbar fortune and wonders why he is learning stenography. That night she goes to a party at the home of Rose Milton, one of her friends, expecting to have a miserable time since she has no escort and knows few of the guests. A dark young man named Ben Lanpman shows her attentions and sees her home. Susan says goodnight to him hurriedly because she doesn't want Aunt Jessie, with whom she lives, to rush out and scold her for dallying.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER II

Oh, Lordy, Lordy, how Susan did hate getting up! She yawned deeply, burrowing her head under the covers and trying to shut out the sound of Aunt Jessie's nasal call: "Susan! Susan! Get up this very minute. Breakfast's getting cold."

Shuddering, blinking at the light, the girl swung her feet over the side of the big bed which groaned in sympathy. Its springs were old and sagging. She stood in the middle of the little room with its bravely painted dresser and white ruffled curtains. She was slim and youthfully curved, exquisite in her thin cotton nightgown, limp from many washings.

"Su-u-san!"

"Coming!"

Aunt Jessie was grumbling as Susan came into the kitchen. She continued to grumble as she poured coffee from the spout of the old blue enamel pot and slapped thick slices of bread on the toaster. Susan liked this toast, but Aunt Jessie didn't believe in catering to young folks' whims.

"No egg for me, thanks," Susan remonstrated.

Aunt Jessie began to scold with fresh vigor. "You girls nowadays—never know when you're well off—striving bean shapes—no vitality!"

Susan had heard it all so many times before that she scarcely listened. She was thinking; if I press my dark blue georgette tonight I'll walk over to Rose's. Post-mortems on parties were always rather fun. Maybe Ben Lanpman would tell her about her catch, Ben Lanpman, the young man who had seemed so smitten. That would be exciting for Susan Carey had never had a beau. Not that she liked the young man particularly. He was too dark. Aunt Jessie didn't believe in catering to attract her. But he was a young man. A potential admirer. She was tired of having the other girls crow over her. Even a Ben Lanpman, moody and musical and taciturn, would be better than no-beau.

Thus Susan's thoughts.

"You're not hearing a word I'm saying," grumbled Aunt Jessie. "Can't think what gets into you these days! I said it's 10 past 8 and you'll be late again if you don't run for the car."

Susan came out of her haze and gulped the last of the coffee. She rushed down the hall and flung on her last year's hat. It wasn't at all like the ones in the shop windows but Susan couldn't help that. Her glowing gray eyes, curly curling hair, and the color that came and went fitfully in her heart-shaped face triumphed over the handicap of last year's millinery.

She hurried back into the kitchen to say goodnight to Aunt Jessie. The dishwasher was making an obligato in the chipped tin pan as Aunt Jessie hurriedly turned on faucets and swirled an aged dish-mop. Aunt Jessie did everything energetically. It was her way.

She pecked at Susan's cheek and murmured as she went, "You're born. Never did see such a sleepyhead. You take after your mother's folks, that way."

She was still grumbling as Susan ran down the back stairs to take the short cut to the corner where she caught the street car. The girl sighed, clinging to a strap. Why was Aunt Jessie such a grouch? She loved her—Susan knew that! Hadn't she nursed her through diphtheria during her first year in high school? Hadn't she brought her back to life when practically everybody had given her up for dead? Oh, Susan knew Aunt Jessie really cared for her but she had such a queer way of showing it. That, thought Susan shrewdly, was Aunt Jessie's generation. Uncompromising, hard on others as well as on themselves. They couldn't help it. "I was raised right and I'm going to see you are the same," Aunt Jessie often said grimly when the young girl complained of strictures.

"Raised right" meant going to bed early and rising early; having very little fun, made-over clothes, putting money in the bank, quoting "handsome is as handsome does" and thinking the devil lurked in a wineglass. Well, maybe they were right but Susan thought there must be more to life than just that. She hoped so, anyway.

Her heart sank when she thought of the day before her and she flipped the pages of her book as she swayed and jerked to the uncertain rhythm of the street car. In front, she saw the conductor as more and more passengers crowded in at every corner.

It promised to be a warm day. The freshness of early morning was vanishing as they neared the downtown district. The odor of asphalt on a comfortable suburban train, with room enough to stretch his long legs and read his morning newspaper. She envied him. He seemed to be a visitor from another sphere with his fine linen, his well fitting lounge suits.

At one of the downtown corners amid a clangor of street car bells and whine of hastily applied brakes, she alighted and began swiftly to walk east. It seemed good to be alive and young this morning. The sharp breeze off Lake Michigan teased her hat brim and blew her skirts. Susan walked very rapidly. Miss Allen was sure to deliver a scathing rebuke if she should arrive late. The clock in the bank on the corner said 10 minutes to 9. Susan fairly ran the last few yards, and crammed herself into an already packed elevator.

She said "Excuse me" to an unseen male as the car shot upward. Her elbow had jammed into a vest front and she flushed scarlet with confusion as she heard a muttered and quite involuntary "Ouch!" at the impact. As she stumbled out at the 11th floor she turned to find young Mr. Dunbar at her heels.

"Was it—oh, it WAS you I bumped so hard a minute ago?" cried Susan, overcome with embarrassment and shaken out of her shyness by the realization.

"It—uh—was nothing," said the young man, smiling with a flash of white teeth in a tanned face. Susan had time to observe the perfection of his white dotted cravat before the swinging door into the ante-room opened to admit them. Mr. Block, head of the school, frowned at them and signaled ominously at the accusing clock in the center of the room.

"Don't worry about it. I'm not permanently injured," the young man had time to whisper before Susan vanished, very much flushed, into the confines of the ladies' dressing room.

The morning passed more quickly than usual. Susan's half-hour of study on the street car stood her in good stead. She passed the spelling tests without an error and Miss Allen was almost affable. To make matters more interesting Robert Dunbar smiled at her as she returned to her seat after a triumphant bout with dictation.

"Made a killing, haven't you?" whispered Helen Marshall, observing the interchange of glances.

Susan shook her head, faintly.

frowning. It wouldn't do to permit the gossip Helen, friendly as she was, to start that sort of talk.

But at noon as Susan waited for Helen in the downstairs foyer young Dunbar intercepted her.

"Going to lunch?" he inquired pleasantly. It was by way of being purely a rhetorical question since lunch was the obvious order of the moment.

Susan smiled at him, her eyes widening under the brim of her dark hat. "I'm waiting for my seat mate," she said. "She couldn't get on the elevator with me."

"Do come along with me, won't you? I hate to lunch alone," begged the young man. "It's rather stiff, the way we all stand on ceremony at that dump upstairs. I know your name—and I suppose—I hope you know mine."

The girl nodded. "But I must wait for Helen," she protested half-heartedly. The tall young man shrugged. "Don't you do that every day?"

Susan caught her lower lip between her teeth, debating the matter. But the problem was solved for her because at that moment Helen Marshall emerged from a packed car, giggling and talking eagerly to two girls who had advanced class. The three passed out of the lobby without even noticing Susan and her companion.

"There, what did I tell you?" asked the tall young man in the gray suit, masterfully taking Susan's arm. "She's forgotten about you already. Do come along. I'll be over-laying in your debt. I'm bored with life and need someone to talk to."

Susan was conscious of a tremendous inward excitement. Things did seem to be happening to her after all just when she had given up the glorious possibility! For a split second her mind, automatically trained to this reflex, registered the thought: What would Aunt Jessie say?

She knew Aunt Jessie would not approve. This adventure would come under the head of "Gallivanting with strange young men."

Susan looked up at the young man striding beside her, trying to suit his steps to hers. The girl was no pocket edition Venus, but Robert Dunbar seemed extraordinarily tall.

"Well, what do you say?" Laughing blue eyes met serious gray ones. To the boy it might have seemed the merest casual encounter. To the girl the occasion was one of tremendous drama.

"I'll come," she said shyly.

"Good!" Susan liked his clipped voice. He put his hand under her elbow, the merest suggestion of protective masculinity, at crossings. He steered her into the great doorway of a marble palace.

"This isn't much," Dunbar said in apology. "Lots of gilt and gilding but it's decent, and the food's not bad. And we've only three-quarters of an hour."

Susan opened her eyes still wider. "Not bad," indeed! She was for the first time in her young life within the sacred portals of the "Splendid."

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT, United Press Staff Correspondent. PARIS—For pure unadorned smartness, there is nothing like white—nothing even anywhere near it—for it remains in a closed class all by itself.

Redfern, Augustabernard, and Lelong offer exquisite proof of the perfection of white in terms of satin and ermine. The Redfern model is draped suavely over the body, the corsage being rather high in front and over the shoulders, not in straps, but in wide strips extending from the throat to the shoulder tips. The back décolletage is a narrow but very deep V, extending almost below the normal waistline, where the drapings seem to suddenly become a soft bow, the ends of which extend below the hips.

Augustabernard's model is very sleek, showing a wide U back décolleté with a twisted roll of satin coming from the front under the arm and tying in a bow at the back. It fits the body without a wrinkle and fullness in the skirt is not obvious but simply suddenly evident. A short strand of pearls is the accompanying necklace, with bracelets of diamonds and pearls.

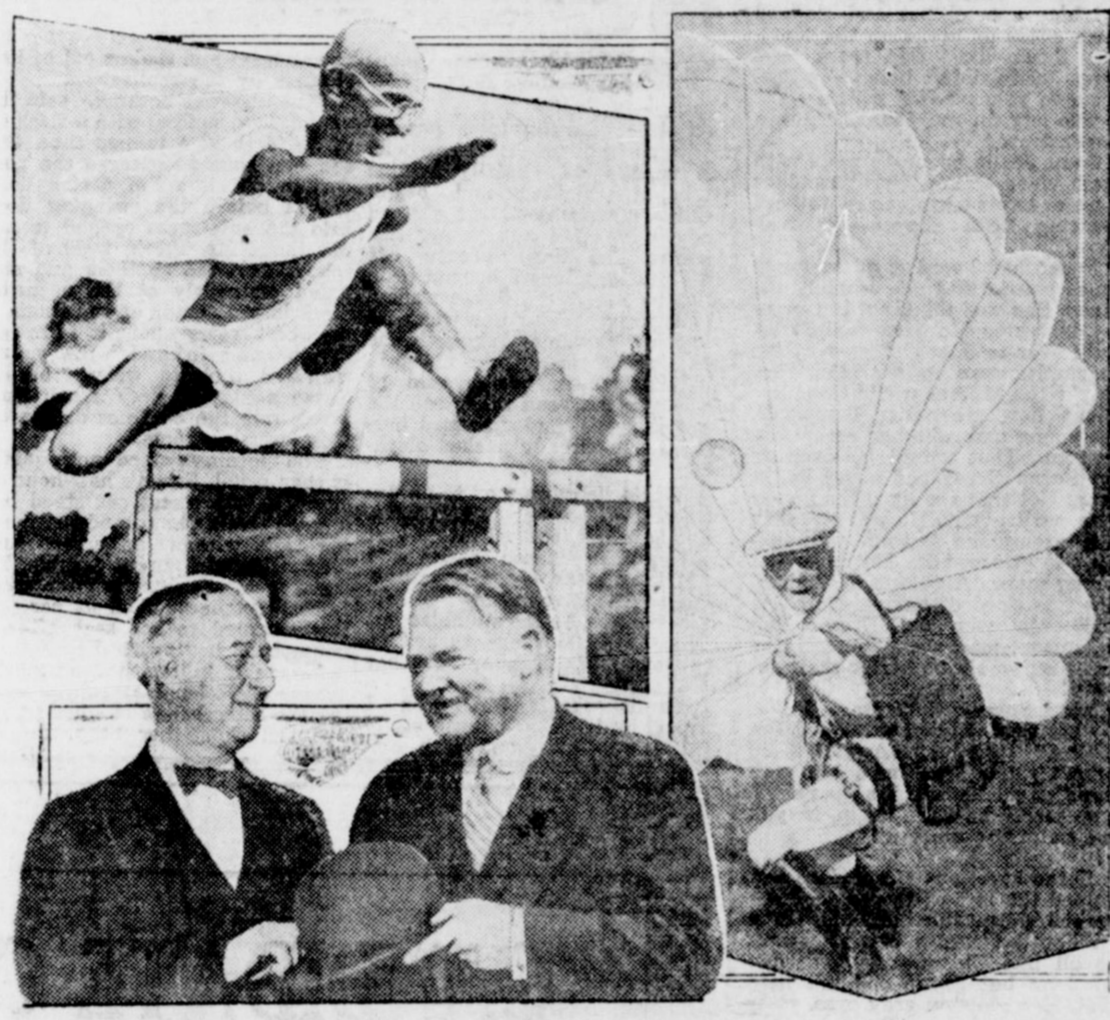

NEW ARRIVAL. Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Herring of Eastland announce the arrival of a 10½-pound son, on Monday, March 28. Mother and baby are resting well.

Eastland Baptist Church Notes

Y. W. A. House Party

The annual Y. W. A. house party which was held Friday and Saturday, March 25 and 26, at Simmons university, was, indeed, a joyous and profitable occasion, according to the report brought back by the Eastland delegation. Those attending from Eastland were Misses Opal Hunt, Aurelia Hunt, Aline Williams, Irene Williams, Rosebud Trammel, Mona Pritchard, Maurice Cole, and Mrs. Carl Spritzer. They were met by delegates and workers from over the state, several instructive conferences being held. The delegates were entertained in the dormitories, a lovely reception being tendered the Friday night.

Fidelis Matrons Business Meeting

The members of the Fidelis Matrons class met in the lower assembly room of the church Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock for their regular monthly meeting. After the business session, presided over by the president, Mrs. W. A. Owen, a beautiful devotional was led by Mrs. C. C. Robey, teacher of the Martha Friday night class of the Methodist church, her subject being "The Faithfulness of Women." A musical program was rendered as follows: Violin duet, Fay Campbell and Geraldine Terrell; piano solo, Mrs. T. J. Pitts; duet, Curtis and Geraldine Terrell. A social hour was then enjoyed by the class members and their guests, the newly organized Home Makers class. Lovely refreshments of cake and coffee were served, the plate containing Easter favors.

Sunday School

Notwithstanding the somewhat inclement weather, there were 320 in Sunday school last Sunday morning. On Sunday, April 3, beginning at 1 o'clock, 30 couples will take a complete religious census of the city of Eastland. During the week following a Sunday school training school will be held, classes each evening being taught by the pastor, Rev. O. B. Darby, and Rev. Blair, our efficient associational missionary. It is expected that many will take these courses in Sunday school work.

Complete Details of New Ford V-8 Are Made Known

Complete details of the new V-8 cylinder Ford car were made public here today by the Everett Motor company, local Ford dealers. The new Ford is large, long, roomy, fast, powerful and alert. Its V-8 cylinder engine develops 65 horsepower and it is capable of 75 miles an hour.

Fourteen body types of modern, streamline design are offered. A four-cylinder engine developing 50 horsepower also can be supplied with any of these body types at a lower price.

Numerous mechanical advances are incorporated in the new car. These embrace a synchronized silent gear shift and silent shaft gear, rubber engine mountings, down-draft carburetor and carburetor silencer, automatic spark control, fuel pump and rear fuel tank. Other improvements include a newly designed rear spring, thermostatically-controlled Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, large four-wheel brakes, newly designed electrically welded steel-spoke wheels with large hubs and hub caps and large tires. The chassis and running gear are cushioned by rubber insulators in the spring shackles and shock absorber links. The body is insulated from the frame by rubber pads.

The new bodies are fresh and modern from the gracefully rounded V-type radiator to rear bumper. The air-flow lines are carried out by the long hood with rounded steel center strip, the slanting safety glass windshield, and rounded roof line. The convex fenders, full-crowned fenders and long, low running board harmonize with the balance of the design.

Body interiors are roomy and richly furnished. Seats are of new style, designed for utmost comfort. Driver seats in all closed cars are adjustable. A large ventilator is provided in the cowl. The oval instrument panel is in engine-turned finish and has a rustless steel mounting strip. Inside sun visors, which fold out of the way when not in use, are provided in all closed cars.

The new Ford V-8 engine is remarkably free from vibration. Frequent and overlapping impulses deliver the power in a smooth constant flow.

The engine is of the 90-degree V-type, developing 65 brake horsepower at 3400 r.p.m. The 65-pound crankshaft is of the 90-degree type, with its four cranks at right angles to each other.

The crankshaft is statically and dynamically balanced and its throws counter-balanced. The crankshaft, connecting rods and pistons also are in balance so that the engine operates with remarkable smoothness at all engine speeds. Pistons are of aluminum alloy and have three rings, the lower acting as an oil-control ring.

Cylinder blocks and crankcases are cast in one unit, giving exceedingly rigid engine construction. New type, one-piece valves, which eliminate tappets, operate directly from the camshaft without push-rods.

Connecting rods from opposite pistons are placed side by side on each 90-degree crankshaft throw. These are mounted on new floating steel bushings, babbitted inside and out which serve to give the benefit of the full crankpin bearing area to each connecting rod thus affording longer wear.

A cast aluminum cover embracing the intake manifold forms the top of the engine, giving it an unusually finished appearance. The down-draft carburetor and the fuel pump are mounted on this cover.

The gas is preheated in the intake manifold by a hot spot created by hot exhaust gases surging back and forth through a small passage in the manifold cover plate. Exhaust ports are on the outside of the engine blocks, the left exhaust pipe being carried around the front of the engine.

The distributor operates directly from the front end of the camshaft eliminating the use of intermediate gears. Spark control is automatic. Crankshaft and crank pin bearings are lubricated by pressure as are the main bearings of the camshaft. Pistons and valves are oiled by spray and splash.

A fan of airplane propeller type and two centrifugal water pumps together with the large surface of the radiator insure ample cooling under all driving conditions.

The rugged new double-drop frame is formed to the shape of the body and, with the new low rear spring, provides a low center of gravity, with consequent increase in roadability.

The riding comfort of the cars is due to many factors, but particularly to the new flexible transverse cantilever springs, larger tires, rubber insulation and the newly designed shock absorbers.

Two new features have been incorporated in the Houdaille hydraulic double-acting shock absorbers. One, a thermostat control which compensates for varying temperature conditions, and the other, a special valve which automatically lessens the effect of sudden road shocks.

The Ford rear spring is of new design, being flatter and lower. It is mounted on perches at the rear of the axle housing and bowed out so as to clear the differential housing.

The new brakes have a braking surface of 186 square inches. Wheels are 18 inches in diameter. The large hubs enclose the bolts which attach the wheels to the drum. There are 32 steel spokes, sharply pitched and electrically welded to the drop-center rim and hub shell, forming an unusually strong unit. Tires are 18x25 inches. Each is balanced to prevent "tramping" or vibration at high speeds. The drive is of the familiar Ford torque tube type, the drive shaft being of tubular construction.
