NEW FARM PRODUCT MARKET DEMANDED

This is a swift moving age. President Hoover has had his problems and troubles. President-elect Roosevelt is facing as heavy a load as any chief magistrate ever carried. Louis J. Taber is the national master of the Grange. He thinks the war debts foreign nations owe the United States can be used to help "stabilize American agriculture." He thinks new uses should be found for farm products, and, above all, foreign markets preserved and in most cases reestablished. Louis I. Taber is a dyed-in-the-wool republican. He has ever been lined up with republican administrations. He was a never-die Hoover supporter in the late unpleasantness. Now what is his plan? War debts must not be cancelled but used to build trade, rather than 'trade, rather than to destroy it, by giving debtor nations credit on their debts for a certain per cent of their total purchases of farm products. Moreover he is thoroughly convinced that one million speeches on farm relief in congress are just a repetition of what has gone before; that a million members in the Grange means "a fighting, working addition to rural forces, adding to morale and stabilizing rural life." Speaking for the oldest of existing farm organizations founded 66 years ago this leader of the tillers of the soil has declared that handicaps placed in the way of agriculture by the government must be removed. William Gibbs McAdoo said it better. President Taber has ever upheld the tariff and taxation policies of the republican party. He backed to the limit the party of Harding and Coolidge and Hoover. Now he would trade the war loans made by America to foreign purchases of American farm staples. Perhaps President Louis J. Taber, now and all the time ultra-republican, will tell the farmers of the American world just how this plan will reliev the American taxpayer from the payment of billions representing Liberty bonds. There may be a way out of it somewhere or in some way. President Taber's plan is to pay foreign chases of American farm staples for their trade and then permit American taxpayers to liquidate in future times the huge bonded war debt of the republic of Washington. It may be the wisest way out but there are millions of patriotic and conscientious Americans "who must be shown."

GARNER WILL NOT MAKE CHOICE

There is a wild row coming over the naming of the successor of Speaker John Nance Garner. It is now an established fact that Garner knows "where to find his political hat." All American voters were taught in the campaign that is a dead memory the Texan knew when to speak and when to place the muzzle on his tongue. It was a magnifigent demonstration of individual self control. As to the battle over the speakership, Garner will not take a hand in the contest. Place his words in the record: "I will give everybzody here all the help I can until next March 4; but when it comes to the speakership, I expect to tell them, 'That's your problem; work it out to suit yourselves:' and I'll bet that I'll be friends with the next speaker." There is a merry political row brewing down on the banks of the Rio Grande. Garner has warned the democrats of his district that if it is a free-for-all voting contest the republican may get away with the plum. A republican from the old Garner district would prove to be a hard knock on the ose for the democratic donkey. National Committeeman Rene B. Creaker is a voter in the 15th district. He is a native Texan; he is a sly fox when it comes to politics; he is the close personal friend of the "Cavalier of the Chapparral." He will push one of his race horses onto the track whenever he sees an opening. There are many republicans in the 15th district. Just watch them perform when the flag falls in the contest to come for the succession. It cer-; tainly would be a grim joke at the expense of the Cavalier from his perch in the senate to read of the cavorting of a Rio Grande republican in the proceedings of the house after an unbroken record of 30 years for the donkey and

Not only was the thought of feeding the living behind all their work, but close upon this activity comes the feeling of showing respect for the dead.

The United States government it was learned would furnish free marble headstones for the un-marked graves of soldiers, sailors, marines, or war nurses, or those who have been honorably dis-charged from any war America ever engaged.

In 1929 this privilege was extended by congress to include Confederate soldiers.

This announcement, carried in the Eastland press, was accompanied by the offer of the Chamber of Commerce to forward applications to Washington, with the result that 60 of these headstones have been placed over unmarked graves through the efforts of Dr. H. B. Tanner, secretary of C. of C. All expenses of freightage were paid by the government. Beautiful ceremonials of the unveiling of the monuments were held and drew large gatherings, especially in the rural communities.

The pre-service included a biographical sketch, with the announcement, of day and place of service. On unveiling day, an impressive, formal procedure opened with flag placement at head of grave, assembly bugle call by Boy Scout squad, who accompanied Secretary Tanner at all ceremonies, and prayer by presiding pastor.

The sketch of the decedent was read by a citizen, and the head-stone was formally presented to the family by the secretary in charge, on behalf of the war department.

Firing of salute, by the American Legion, and "taps" by Boy Scouts, has concluded these services, which have resulted in the cementing of city-county friend-ships, and establishment of lasting

HUNTER KILLS HORSE.

BOZEMAN, Mont .- Mistaking brown horse for an elk, Captain David DeLap shot the animal from beneath its rider, Carl Figgins, killing the horse and slightly wounding Figgins.

Amos Peabody, elderly cousin of Linda Averill, falls to his death from the second floor balcony of the Averills' Long Island home. Linda reaches him just before he dies, in time to hear him gasp,

Linda, realizing her cousin had tried to tell her he was murdered, rushes upstairs to the balcony. Someone steps behind her, tries to strangle her and she falls in a faint. Her husband, Tom, sees her fall and rushes to her. There are four guests in the house and they all appear. The guests are: Mr Statlander, business associate of Tom's; Captain DeVos, handsome Belgian; Marvin Pratt, former suitor of Linda's; and Lian Shaughnessey, Irish writer. When she is finally able to tell Tom what happened she persuades him that they must keep the four guests with them until they discover who is the murderer. They are unexpectedly aided in this plan when Dr. Boyle, official medical examiner, sends word that everyone in the house must remain until he has questioned them. Boyle is on a fishing trip

CHAPTER XIX

With the shutting of the bedroom door Linda felt drop away from her all sense of worry and tension. She threw herself into the part she must play so thoroughly that thereafter she would forget it only in the few stolen moments alone with her husband. And it was as well that she was ready for, as she ran lightly down the last few steps into the central hall, a figure standing by the table whirled about, knocking an illustrated garden magazine to the floor with a flutter of gayly colored leaves.

"Linda"

"Wwy, Marvin, you look as if you had seen a ghost!" she exclaimed, and then thought this was perhaps not the most fortunate opening. But she doubted if the words actually reached him. He stooped to pick up the magizen and Tom, behind her started forward for the same purpose. As they both fumbled at it. Linda looked toward the formal drawing room and saw Statlander, his back to her, examining the carved Italian marble mantel which was considered one of the treasures of the house.

"I'm—I'm glad to see you down. Linda" said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda " said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda " said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda " said Pratt. "I'm own down. Linda "
