SECURITIES MARKET MAKES BRILLIANT ADVANCE

All along this newspaper has advised its readers to watch the tickings of the ticker. Well, late in August the New York securities market started in with one of the greatest advances of the summer recovery. As for the bond market it made its most vigorous climb since June 4, when prices were sent soaring by the Morgan sponsored $1,000,000 investment corporation. Rails made the sharpest gains of the year. There were net advances of $10 to more than $50 per bond of $1000 face value. Stocks jumped $1 to nearly a share in prominent issues.

A reminder that farm relief through the reconstruction corporation is expected by corporation officials to get under way in about three weeks. There will be eight farm credit corporations. These corporations will have as their primary object the financing of feed or livestock interests.

Feeding season for range cattle is approaching and feeders are reported in need of funds. Another reminder; according to a bulletin of the department of agriculture, the number of cattle on farms have been increasing since 1928 while the number slaughtered annually has decreased steadily since 1926. If the slaughter during the remainder of 1932 continues small, it was estimated by the department the number of cows on farms at the beginning of 1933 would be the largest ever recorded.

Sanity has returned to the planners and diggers of America. Sanity, political sanity, should declare itself today under the skies of Texas. Political sanity is constitutional government sanity. It is a sanity of efficiency in government, a sanity of justice in government, a sanity that protects those who need protection and keeps on the outside those who belong on the outside.

RAIL FARES FOR STUDENTS—AND GASOLINE

According to Washington advices, railroads of the South and Southwest are going to make this year's college education a little cheaper and at the same time attempt to meet again the increasing motor bus competition. These reduced fares, a new experiment in railroad business, will be offered throughout the month of September and the return ticket will be good at any time until June 30, 1933. Round trip tickets will be sold at one and one-fourth the regular one way fare.

Having hit bed rock and then running true to form of history, the adjusters and the builders launched an upgrade movement and now the tickers are telling the story and the prices of farm staples are slowly climbing to higher levels. A reminder that the Texas highway commission should continue its magnificent building program and make it possible for thousands of honest and industrious men to earn their own dollars with their own hands through the fall and winter months to come.

All this money for building purposes has been contributed by the gasoline users of the state. They should not be robbed of their rights, and they should not be robbed of their money by its diversion to other channels merely to gratify proxy practical politicians or their misguided followers. Gasoline users are taxed for highway purposes and public school aid. They should stand for their rights; they should enforce their rights; and they should vote for Texas.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

EDGAR G. HARRIS, owner and publisher of the West Point (Miss.) Daily Times-Leader; president of the Tupelo (Miss.) Daily News, and generally regarded as one of the most successful small city publishers in the South, says:

"Should the time ever come when the local newspaper cannot carry an advertising message to the people of its territory at less cost and with better results than any other medium, then I am going to retire from the newspaper business.

"In my more than 30 years as a successful publisher, I have never known a merchant to achieve noteworthy success without the help of the local newspaper, and I know of very few other businesses that can exist without publicity of some sort.

"The local newspaper should not sell space, but service. We should remember that the copy is more important than the size of the space it occupies.

"Please do not misunderstand me. I believe in big space for big stores and big businesses—the bigger the better. But big space and black type alone will not sell merchandise. Advertising should be easy to read and truthful. It should describe the goods or the service, or both—and it should be written in the same tone that a good merchant talks to a good customer.

"Advertising is today the greatest potential force in business, and there is no substitute for the local newspaper as an advertising medium."

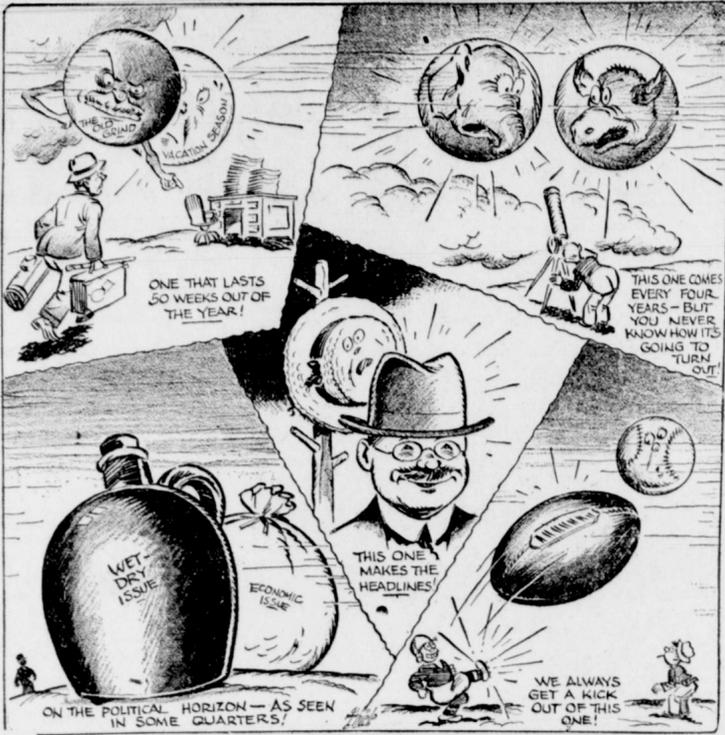

Pal And Bride Fight For War Hero

A war-time pal and a war-time bride fight it out for the possession of a war-time hero in "The Man From Yesterday," a Paramount picture, with Claudette Colbert, Clive Brook, Andy Devine and Charles Boyer in the leading roles, at the Arcadia Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday.

Miss Colbert, a war nurse, marries Brook in haste during the hectic days in Paris in 1918. They are very much in love but Brook is called to front line duty. A few weeks later he is reported killed. Claudette turns to Boyer, a young surgeon, for friendship and finds a new love.

While all this is going on intensive training is being given to the two stars, in case something might go wrong and the two stars might not be able to play. Of course they were eligible, the coach knew it, the protesting school officials were pretty well convinced before the protest was filed, but then it was a matter of opportunity to play part of the game off the gridiron before the whistle blew.

Other "Eclipses" on the Way

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE with BILL MAYES

Coach Eck Curtis, and no doubt all the coaches in the Oil Belt would like to see some kind of a reform of the protest rule or rules now in force in the Oil Belt district. The rules, as now used and misused, are the joke of the entire state where high school football is played and every other district has rules that are far superior in every way to the ones in force around this part of Protest District No. 3.

The Fort Worth district, including Mineral Wells, which is officially known as District 5, has a much better plan of protesting and determining the eligibility or ineligibility of players. It works something like this:

Each season, before any games are played, each coach makes up a list of his squad and sends it to the district committee. A meeting is called and all coaches and superintendents appear at the meeting with the records of their squad members. The names of the players and prospective players are read off and if there is any question as to whether or not they are eligible, their records are produced and checked. It is then decided whether or not they are eligible. If they are, they play, if they are not, they watch from the sidelines or the grandstand, if any.

And after the eligibility of a player is passed on no protests can be brought up at the last moment, as in the Oil Belt, to worry the coaches, the players, the fans and everyone in general, including the sports writers, and the morale of a team cannot be broken down by protests on technicalities for that purpose alone.

The Oil Belt is one big joke, and deservingly so, when it comes to protests. When it comes to playing football that is a different matter, but many a time a team has been faced with mental hazard by the protest method. That is a rather unfair advantage that can be taken in the Oil Belt and in no other district in the Interscholastic League.

Say a coach builds up his team around a good backfield. He trains his men and they become pretty good in their respective positions. The coach, the players and the fans have hopes of winning next Saturday's game. Then along comes a protest from the school to be played. John Bustem, demon line plunger of the local team or Bob Flash, speedy backfield ace, are protested. The protest is just a matter of form, concocted for the sole purpose of throwing a monkey wrench into the machinery.

A meeting is called. The records are scanned briefly. The protesting team is satisfied. And in the meantime, for about a week prior to the game the entire team is wondering if two fairly good subs will have to take up the majority of the ball carrying duties. The coach worries, the team worries, the fans worry and everyone worries except the protesting school officials. They know it is all hokum and chuckle up their respective sleeves.

While all this is going on intensive training is being given to the two stars, in case something might go wrong and the two stars might not be able to play. Of course they were eligible, the coach knew it, the protesting school officials were pretty well convinced before the protest was filed, but then it was a matter of opportunity to play part of the game off the gridiron before the whistle blew.

Coaches from all over the state and sports writers, too, for that matter, make fun of the Oil Belt for the insane protest rules in vogue. It is meat for the sports writers, because it gives them topics on which they can write columns, then, when the eligibility of the players is upheld it gives them an opportunity to write more and more columns about the findings of the committee, and, incidentally, as in this case, an opportunity to write about the foolishness and the unfairness of the whole proceedings.

Something should be done about the protest rules in the Oil Belt, and there is no time like the present for doing it. L. E. Dudley, whom we presume is still chairman of the committee, should call a meeting and have the whole thing discussed. It would do much to preserve the game, which is now being killed.

We have little hopes of seeing the protest rules changed, for this year at least, but we believe they must be changed if football is to continue for long in the Oil Belt.

Comedy Treatment For Tiffany Thayer Mystery Story

Despite the somewhat sepulchral atmosphere of the locale of "Strangers of the Evening," current Tiffany film at the Columbia Theater, in which much of the action takes place in undertaking parlors, police station and a cemetery, the picture is so full of numerous situations, adeptly handled by the excellent comedy of Zasu Pitts, Lucien Littlefield, Eugene Pallette, Harold Waldridge, Tully Marshall and others, that the picture does not become morbid during any of the scenes.

"Strangers of the Evening" was adapted for the screen by Warren B. Duff and Stuart Anthony from Tiffany Thayer's sensational novel, "The Illustrious Corpse."

The remainder of the cast includes Miriam Seegar, Theodore von Eltz, Alan Roscoe, Francis Sayles, Mahlon Hamilton and James Burtis. H. Bruce Humberstone directed.

Dr. Bradford Knapp Is Now Tech Head

LUBBOCK.—Dr. Bradford Knapp, recently elected Texas Technological college president, has arrived here, and is acquainting himself with the institution preparatory to assuming active duties Sept. 1.

His first task, Dr. Knapp said, will be to make a thorough study of the college, its faculty, equipment, policy, board of directors, background, and the law creating it.

"I must study the needs of Texas, and especially of this section of the state, in order to make the college pay the greatest return to the citizenry," Dr. Knapp said.

"I can say, however, I am profoundly interested in development of modern agricultural methods, because I believe business-like methods on a farm are as necessary anywhere else. Therefore agriculture will receive its due amount of attention."

School And Social Activities At Warner Memorial University

MISS IRENE SMITH, EDITOR

The Warner Memorial College registration will begin on Monday, September 12th. The college is especially eager to register as many of the local students as possible, since it is prepared to offer standard preparatory work. This year, Warner Memorial University is rechartered as a standard Junior College, and its plans are under way to complete affiliation requirements during the first semester. Practically every requirement for affiliation has been completed except the required number of students which promises to exceed the minimum of sixty when all the local prospective students have been registered.

The faculty, given below, as you will notice, consists of men and women from various colleges and universities over the United States. All are highly qualified to head their department.

J. T. Wilson, D. D., the President of the College, has proven his ability as an executive not only here in Eastland, but he has established one other school during the years of toil and sacrifice for humanity.

E. O. Bailey, B. S., who is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, has proven in the past his ability as Dean of student affairs. He is very sympathetic of student problems and has rendered great service in this capacity.

Prof. Allison F. Barnard, A. B., B. M., comes to us from McAlester, College, St. Paul, Minnesota. He is highly qualified to head the School of Music. Susie M. Barnard, B. M., who took her degree from the American Conservatory of Music, Chicago, Ill., will be the instructor in piano. Under the leadership of these two accomplished musicians, it is expected that the School of Music will make great progress.

Coach Lee L. Boles, A. B., M. A., comes to us from Vanderbilt College, where he has been taking graduate work. He took his M. A. degree from Peabody College.

Coach Boles will head the Science Department and will be Director of Physical Education.

Lyle Brown, A. B., M. A., Professor of Social Science, is a graduate of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, from which he took his master's work. His A. B. work was completed at Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia, Ark. He came very highly recommended from Southern Methodist University.

Victor M. Cano, A. B., M. A., comes to us from Southern Methodist University, having taken both his A. B. and M. A. work in that institution. Mr. Cano is a native of Peru and under his leadership the Modern Language Department will no doubt be one of the most progressive departments in the school.

Miss Alleta Svensson, A. B., M. A., professor of Mathematics, is a graduate of Texas University from which she took her M. A. work after having taken her A. B. work at Baylor University, Waco, Texas. Her few years of teaching experience in this department make her fully competent to handle the work splendidly.

Mrs. Marie C. Vilhauer, A. B., M. A., who is professor of English and Commerce, is a graduate of the University of Missouri from which she took her M. A. degree. She has had several years of practical experience in either of these departments and has proven her ability to the uttermost.

Prof. Charles E. Vilhauer, A. B., M. A., professor of Education, is fully qualified to head the Education Department, after having had several years of practical experience as Superintendent of high schools in Missouri. He also took his M. A. work in the University of Missouri. Under his leadership, it is expected that the Education Department will be one of the strongest and most valuable departments in the college.

A full athletic program will be pursued this year. Coach Boles will arrive in time to begin grid practice on September 1st. He is now in summer school at Vanderbilt College. He will use the Vanderbilt method of coaching in his football work this fall.

Coach Boles has had several years of very successful coaching in the East and he expects to put Warner Memorial College "on the map" this year in football. All local boys who are interested in football should report on September 1st in order to get the full benefit of his instructions.

The college has several game scheduled which come in is very important that grid practice begin without fail on September 1st. The prospects for football are very good this year since the team will consist of various high school stars from Texas and Oklahoma.

Tuition and fees have been reduced considerably over last year and the terms are such that practically every high school graduate in the vicinity of Eastland who desires a college education should be able to attend.

Bulletin material and additional information will be gladly furnished by the college upon request.

And the paper goes on to say that the resolution was passed unanimously by the convention.

I wish we had space to print the resolution in full. However, if you're on Blanton's mailing list you'll probably get it in the Congressional Record.

If that resolution expresses the sentiment of the Democrats, the Republicans or anybody else in this district, then you can pick me for a sweet pea. It's a nice document. If such a play were made in bridge, you'd call it a finesse.

Regardless if it was passed by the convention or not. Regardless if there were nobody present at said convention except of whether or not present or not. I don't think it's such a resolution. I think it's a post-campaign resolution. It's post facto. . . . and lots of folks good laugh over it.

Four Marx Boys Now at the Lyric

"Horse Feathers," latest of the mad, merry comedies of the Four Marx Brothers, opens today at the Lyric Theatre.

Groucho, Chico, Harpo and Zeppo are again cast together in a picture that affords them opportunities for the same type of nonsense they presented in "Animal Crackers," "Monkey Business," and "The Cocoanuts," their three previous movie efforts.

An amusing plot holds the picture together. Groucho is a college president because that's the only way, it seems, he can get his son, Zeppo, out of college. Zeppo has been there twelve years.

With the cooperation of Chico, village bootlegger, and Harpo, village dogcatcher, he ultimately accomplishes his object.

Upon this frame is built many a comedy situation. Groucho talks at his usual rapid-fire rate; Chico puts in dialect; Harpo says nothing and chases every blonde in sight; and Zeppo makes love to the best-looking girls available.

S. J. Perelman, Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, well known humorists, wrote the book. Music and lyrics are by Kalmar and Ruby, and Norman McLeod, in charge of direction of "Monkey Business," directed the new picture.

SKINNED BEFORE CANNING. KETCHIKAN, Alaska. - Now even the salmon are getting skinned. An invention by W. F. Schlotman and his brother James, skins salmon preparatory to canning them. Little information on the machine has been given out by the brothers pending patents. Some 20,000 cans of salmon have been cased so far this season with the new machine, and the inventive brothers see great things in their brainchild.

CHAPTER XXXVI

ARE you going to marry me or aren't you?" asked young Dr. Allen beseechingly.

"The jury is still out," Lottie answered. They were standing at the rail in Bridgetown Harbor, looking across the stretch of water to the shore. The deck was deserted. Mona had gone to the Aquatic Club with an attractive passenger who had come aboard at Martinique.

"Going to the dance tonight?" pursued the doctor.

Lottie shrugged. The Miranda was to remain until midnight so that passengers and crew could attend the weekly hop at the Beach Club.

"Perhaps," Her eyes ignored the earnest young man at her elbow and sought little hobbling specks on the water which were growing larger.

"Diving boys!" she exclaimed. Though the Miranda had been met in the same way in every port Lottie never tired of watching them.

"There are girls too," said Dr. Allen.

"Girls? It's the first port where I've seen women diving!"

"There were girls in the boats, sure enough.

"Maybe they won't dive," suggested the doctor. "Maybe the lads just brought them along for scenery."

The girls at the moment were not diving. There were three of them, clad in bathing suits of scarlet, lavender, and green. Each was seated in a small boat with her own flock of boy divers.

"Do you dive?" called Lottie, holding forth an American quarter. The girl in blue looked up and folded her arms.

"Sure," she said scornfully, without moving. She said scornfully, without moving.

"Two shilling, mistress! Two shilling!" one of her escorts explained.

The doctor produced two shillings and flung them toward the girl, who arose and dived gracefully from the boat. She emerged in a moment holding the money aloft and striking out for her boat with swift, clean-cut strokes.

"She's a magnificent hand," said the doctor, "remarked the doctor.

"Want your money back?" Lottie's voice was ingeniously curious. "Look who's here!"

She pointed toward the shore where a tiny boat, urged forth by small shillings held in the hands of its occupant, was leaving the quay. The tiny figure in the periscope bark was another girl, her head haunting a magnificent handana of black and white. The girl was driving her boat rapidly toward the Miranda. She was a novice at handling the bark apparently, but there could be no doubt about her eagerness to reach the steamer.

Presently an agitated parade reached the jetty, headed by a tiny, half-naked, black boy. They selected a boatman, jumped in the boat he proffered and were after the girl. She turned her head, spied them and redoubled her efforts, splashing through the water frantically.

As she reached the flotilla of native boats it was clear that she was an alien. The natives refused to make way for her and, tossing aside her paddle, the girl rose, poised and left the water sharply. Abruptly she came to the surface again and swam toward the companion ladder. She extended a hand, caught the chain and pulled herself aboard, pushing aside the perplexed quartermaster and running up the ladder.

"Hey, come back! No girls allowed aboard!" he expostulated.

The girl paused to thrust a tongue at him and waved a browned arm toward Lottie. Just as she gained the deck the pursuers reached earshot and the girl ducked through the smoking room, disappearing down the stairs.

"More power to her!" laughed Lottie. "I wonder what's happened? Look—the old lady looks wild!"

THE boat had reached the ship now and the old lady in it did indeed "look wild." Probably she was not very old. She wore the native costume of Martinique and announced that she was nurse for Mademoiselle, who had stolen a boat from native boy and climbed aboard the boat.

"What's this, what's this?" asked the captain, appearing from the crew's quarters suddenly. "Why, Maria, what's up?"

Maria, her gold earrings jangling, was hastily climbing the companion ladder. Her long skirt was carefully held so that her beautifully trimmed underskirt would show.

"Mademoiselle, she come aboard!" the woman explained angrily. "She run away. I could not stop her!"

"Is Celeste aboard?" The captain broke into hearty laughter. "Her father and mother are aboard, you know. They are going to Demerara. What's wrong with that?"

It appeared there was a great deal wrong with it. Mademoiselle had left her home in Martinique for the purpose of spending a few months in Barbados to learn English. "And to forget the American, Monsieur. You recall the American?"

Captain Lang recalled him, apparently, for he nodded.

Mademoiselle had hoodwinked the household. They had hidden her clothes that she might not board the boat, so here she was in her bathing suit. The native boy had been rudely shoved out of his little shell and he had not liked that.

Lottie watched the girl guide his boat back to shore, richer by several shillings donated by the sympathetic Maria. "I wonder what will happen to the girl?" she asked the doctor amusedly. "I think I'll go find her."

"See you at tea?" asked Dr. Allen as she moved away from the rail.

"Very likely."

As she swung the cabin door open Lottie suddenly caught her breath. Celeste, still in her wet bathing suit was curled up in Lottie's rattan chair.

"You will not betray me?" she asked pleadingly.

"You'll take a chill in that suit," Lottie said, unheeding. "How did you get in here?"

The girl pointed toward the window.

Lottie nodded. "And they told us no one could do that!"

"The interloper nodded. "No one could—ordinarily. I climbed the rail easily, but natives could not. The police"—(she pronounced the word quaintly—"would keep them off. Pronto!"

"But you can't stay here, you know," Lottie said unseeingly. An idea occurred to her. "Here, you'll take a chill." Lottie had heard of tropic chills. She pointed to the bathroom.

"Go in there and strip that off. I'll lend you some clothing."

"Mademoiselle ees ver-y kind!" Celeste returned, shyness coming suddenly upon her. She rose and walked gracefully to the bath. Through the half-shut door she began an explanation. "My fan-e-ly," she told Lottie, "they breng me from France to Martinique—"

The girl stepped back in the cabin clad in Lottie's underthings. Lottie, motioning toward a comb and brush, rummaged in a suitcase for a frock.

"Has Mademoiselle ever been in love?" the girl repeated. "It es-ter-ri-fic! I have been in love twice. Once in Par-iss. Thoes time, with an American."

For all her amusement Lottie was touched. "Does he love you? Americans have a way of getting what they wish, you know. He may find a way to override your father's objections."

Delight shone in the eager little face before Lottie. The girl tossed aside her comb and moved toward her hostess. "You then-ek he we-ee-ll!"

Neither noticed that Mona, having returned from the Aquatic Club, stood in the doorway.

"I am sure of it, Celeste," said Lottie softly. Celeste apparently did not hear. Her eyes were fixed on something just over Lottie's shoulder.

"Why, what is that picture doing here?" she asked.

She rushed toward Mona's wardrobe trunk, on top of which a leather folder stood containing two portraits. One was of a blond young man. A darker man, older, looked gravely out of the other frame.

But Celeste was not looking at the darker man. The blond youth absorbed her attention.

"You have been here! You know he-ee-ll!" Celeste covered the portrait with kisses, crooning softly.

"Who is this girl?" asked Mona her face very pale.

Celeste, unmindful, clasped the portrait to her heart. "My Barry, My Barry!"

HERE-- AND THERE By ELVIE H. JACKSON

We often time wonder how there can be so much printed broadcast over the United States, that concerns everything in the world, from industries, monopolies, educational institutions, farms, railroads, law, health, morals, and manners, not to speak of several other features and affairs, we will not particularize, to even religion.

The government printing racket undoubtedly deprives local printing presses of cities and towns of a good deal of work and consequent income.

Approximately 300,000 pamphlets, folders and bound books are scattered over the country every day. In 1931, the government printing office issued almost 3,500,000,000 copies of printed matter, and is now doing still better.

In the following six months, the amount of type set, was 129,000,000 ems greater than in the same period of the previous year.

Just think of all this. Taxes have jumped, income has been lowered. What in the world are the printing presses, maintained by newspapers to do, in face of these conditions?

And just suppose the government owned all the public utilities. And put into exercise all their red tape in the choosing of clerks, laborers, workmen, managers, and everything that runs a large electric or a gas concern.

Cities and small towns would have as small chance of having their men employed in offices and factories, of electrical plants, and gas plants, as a flea would have a chance to live on an asbestos dog.

We may kick, and kick, about what the electric light plant is doing, or what it charges for its product, or we may snarl about the gas industry, and whine over the winter gas bills, but we are far better off than we would be if we kicked hopelessly to a government, for we can kick and be heard by these companies, privately owned.

A few years ago the small local plants were, many of them municipally owned. Service a few hours a day only was a common thing, and it was also common to have service shut down due to mechanical trouble, and consequently, manufacturing industries of any extent, could locate only in large towns, as smaller town service was too uncertain to be trusted.

Today small towns have fine electric service, that extends into states and serves thousands of communities. When disturbance arises due to storms, the service is remedied with wonderful promptness, and insurmountable obstacles overcome, and service given 24 hours of the day, and the light is as bright in a town of 500 as in a city of five million.

European countries, under government utility ownership, are far behind us in efficiency and use of electricity.

Lets keep politics out of business, and not listen to the wise-acre, who croaks government ownership of public utilities.

Herring.
Prayer by Mrs. C. E. Fehl closed the study period. During the social hour a program of piano music was presented by Miss Faye Crossley, and Mrs. Pickett.

The members presented Mrs. Claude Crossley a lovely gift shower, wrapped in pink and blue ribbons, and carried in a dainty basket, by little Jimmie King and Wilda Fehl. This pretty gift was the expression of the love and interest of the members.
Announcement was made that the class will meet next Monday, with Mrs. H. E. Everett, at her residence on Ammerman with Mrs. Bud Coplen as co-hostess.
