

County Conventions Are To Meet Tuesday

GRIPINGS By GUS This column is published as a daily feature and may not be construed as representing the editorial views of this paper.

Yesterday was Mother's Day. My column failed to give the day the mention it deserves.

Here's what Bobby wrote: It was many years ago. At the time we were attending the University of Texas.

Today is Mother's Day. It is significant. All of today we have watched grown men lingering over their mothers.

The mother of the town's vagabond does not want her son to go against society. The feeling she has is the same as that of the mother of the most successful man in the community.

It is another Mother's Day. We publicly announced today we are proud to state we have a living mother. And such a feeling should extend from day to day.

Testimony Starts Today In Suit Against 15 Major Companies

By United Press.
AUSTIN, May 9.—First testimony was to be taken here today in the suit against 15 major oil companies, the American Petroleum Institute and the Texas Petroleum Marketers' association attempted to create an oil monopoly in Texas.

R. C. Holmes of New York, president of the Texas Company, B. Ames, T. J. Donoghue, F. Manley, G. L. Noble, W. S. S. Rogers, E. M. Crane, J. P. Grust and H. W. Dodge, minor Texas company officials, also were summoned from New York and J. S. Beach from Houston, headquarters of the Texas Company.

They were to appear before George Shelley, Austin attorney, named by District Judge J. D. Moore to take preliminary testimony. So much of such testimony is desired will then be available both sides in trial of the suit which Allied asks $17,850,000 damages.

Resumption of the trial proper is set for May 23, before Judge Moore in 98th district court here.

Holmes, reputed million-dollar-a-year president of the Texas company, is named by Allied as one of a general committee of the top's family appointed at a series of meetings in New York in 1928 in which the youthful Texas official asserts a plan to control the oil marketing of the entire country was formulated.

In his petition before the court he alleges, Allied alleges Holmes named a special committee to assist in formulation of a tentative code of oil and that their report was filed with Holmes at the offices of the Texas Company in New York on July 18, 1928.

The Newfangles (Mon 'n' Pop)

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

An actual code, he says, was agreed upon in Chicago, Dec. 3, 1928, and adopted unanimously by the American Petroleum Institute here Dec. 5.

This code, he says, was presented to the Federal Trade Commission on Feb. 11, 1929, at St. Louis; that on July 25, 1929, the federal trade commission gave a "pretended approval," which, he says, was without authority of law. Holmes is named as being present at most of these steps.

With a national set-up of this sort, Allied here detailed alleged steps in Texas in its furtherance. He says there were meetings at Houston and Dallas in August and September, 1929.

Allied said a resolution was adopted setting out the national agreement would violate the Texas anti-trust law. He said the Texas concerns were therefore advised not to use the Federal Trade commission form of acceptance of the code, but to use in lieu thereof, "some form that states such acceptance or adoption is a matter of individual action." Such a form was suggested, he said, was only a "pretense," conceived in fraud, and the true agreement was arrived at in Dallas, Sept. 27, 1929, when he alleges the oil men met.

Carrying out the plan, Allied's committee was organized and L. H. Flynn made secretary.

At another meeting in Houston on Oct. 29, he said 95 per cent of the refiners and wholesalers of oil in Texas subscribed to the code to be effective Nov. 20, 1929.

Flynn, the attorney-general asserted, acted as "go-between" in carrying out the code and that complaints of violations were made to him.

The code, as set out in the big oil suit, numbered double the Ten Commandments. A twenty-first section was devoted to definitions.

Rule 17 is pointed out as the chief one in attempting an oil marketing monopoly. Under it, Allied said, each company posted sale prices.

"While the rule does not expressly in terms require any of the defendants to post or sell for the same prices, yet such was the true 'agreement,'" charges Allied. The phrasing was but a part of a plan to fix prices so worded to avoid written evidence, he said.

For the same purpose, he said, if defendants waited a day or so in reaching the same prices, it was for the purpose of making it appear the price was not the result of previous understanding.

Next in the attorney general's attack on the major oil companies is an alleged "relentless campaign" of acquiring independent filling stations and disposing of them as competitors, appointing the former independent operator and owner as an "agent and hiring" of the companies.

More than 90 per cent of the independents were actually eliminated, he charges.

An exhibit lists independents acquired by defendants companies, under leasing agency agreements requiring 100 per cent handling of the company products.

The Texas Company's allegedly acquired stations at Austin, El Paso, Mexia, Dallas, Waco, Henderson, Palestine, Terrell, Amarillo, Fort Worth, Cisco, Mineral Wells, San Angelo, Houston, Brenham, and other places.

Gulf acquisitions of independents are listed at Austin, Mexia, Waco, Terrell, Waxahachie, Dallas, Cisco, Eastland, Fort Worth, Ranger, Texarkana, Amarillo, Houston, Kilgore, Marshall and other places.

If the state should win the maximum penalties of $1,500 a day asked against each company, County Attorney Bryan Blalock of Travis county, would under a statute be entitled to 5 per cent of the judgment. Blalock studied law while working in a barbe shop, then ran for justice of the peace and county attorney. The full judgment would give him approximately $892,500. Out of his prospective share he has employed private counsel to assist the prosecution. These include the firm of Cofer & Cofer, Austin, Bernard Martin of Wichita Falls, former law partner of Attorney General Allied and George Mendell, Austin attorney. The attorney general, whose salary is $4,000 a year would get nothing.

the MAN HUNTERS

BY MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

SUSAN CAREY is in love with BOB DUNBAR, Illinois' son. DENISE ACKROYD, society girl, tries to break up the attachment and succeeds at a house party which she gives. ERNEST HEATH, Susan's employer, happens to be passing when Susan and Bob quarrel and takes her home. His wife threatens to sue for alienation of his affections but changes her mind when JACK WARING, Heath's assistant, procures an incriminating letter. RAY FLANNERY, stenographer in the next office, catches Susan her distress to marry him for the sake of a secretary. Ben follows Susan and Heath and shoots at the latter, wounding him slightly. Then Ben turns the gun on himself.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV

WHEN Jack Waring took Denise Ackroyd away from the Gledings' party on New Year's eve he had formulated no exact plan. He was by nature a meddler and his quick, prying mind had seized on the little drama as something entertaining. He could see the triangle: Susan, the poor working girl; Denise, the spoiled child of fortune; and young Robert Dunbar, whom each hoped to win.

The visit to Tony's proved rather dull. There had been too much noise and the overheated place had made them both ill-tempered without quite knowing why. The man had learned little more of the story. He was determined, however, to know the rest. Driving back in the cold air he said lazily to the girl, "When shall I see you again?"

The pale, petulant face stared straight ahead. The childish, fretful voice answered sleepily. "Don't know. Never, probably, the way I feel now. That champagne Laura fed us must have been poison. I feel wretched."

"That," countered Jack Waring easily, "was the lobster you insisted on having at Tony's. And the ice cream."

"It was the champagne," Denise insisted solemnly. "That's my story and I'll stick to it."

"You're a little mule, aren't you?" asked the man, laughing.

Denise drew her wrap around her really. "We Ackroyds have wills of our own," she said so pompously that Waring could scarcely manage to maintain his gravity. More than ever now he was certain she had been reading Michael Arlen.

"And do you always get what you want?" He was very grave.

More than 1,000,000 citrus trees added to number of producing trees in valley this fall.—Pharr Clarion.

ORANGE—Agency headquarters for Southland Greyhound Buses being moved to New Holland hotel on Division and Fifth street.

STINNETT—Bids called for construction of grading and drainage structures on six miles of highway No. 117 from here north.

"Yes, we do." She eyed him suspiciously. "Why do you want to know?"

"Oh, I was just wondering." He steered the talk into other channels.

It was a week later that he met Bob Dunbar in the drawing room of the Ackroyds' apartment in town. High above the outer drive it was, with great windows overlooking the lake. Denise was entertaining. The room was filled with beautifully dressed girls and bored looking young men.

"You know Bobby, don't you?" Denise said.

"Yes, of course." The two men shook hands. Waring thought the boy looked thinner and older than when he had last seen him.

DENISE said, "I'm warning you! Don't climb into a corner and talk business, because I won't have it. You've got to circulate. We have too many females." She drifted on to another group, a slim, exotic figure in a black frock that molded every line of her figure.

"She looks lovely today, doesn't she?" Waring asked.

"Who? Oh, yes, Denise." The boy roused himself from some abstraction to reply.

Waring appraised him shrewdly. That he was not in love with this girl was plain to the dullest on-looker.

"It's my job to find out just how the land lies," Waring observed to himself. Skillfully he led the talk around to the office. The house at Half-Day was working out interestingly, wasn't it? He had some new plans sketched for the stables. He would like Bob to stop by the office some day and see them.

Keenly he watched the boy's eyes. Some new emotion darkened them for the instant.

Yes, Bob said. He'd do that. Waring was shrewdly silent.

"By the way," blurted Bob. "I don't suppose Miss Carey is still with you. She was married, wasn't she?"

Waring did not need to assume astonishment. "Married? No, of course not. What put that into your head?"

"I was given to understand," Bob said slowly. "Wait a minute—let me think this out. I was certainly told she was going to be married to that orchestra fellow and go to California."

Waring shrugged. "I've heard nothing about it," he said, "and I don't believe there's a word of truth in it since she's not the sort of girl to leave without giving notice. Who told you?" he pursued again.

"Honestly, I don't know," Bob said, but involuntarily his gaze strayed to the little group of which Denise was the center. She was being very gay this afternoon. She was in her element. A party-faced youth who had earlier advertised some vague connection with the theater was telling a story and Denise's shrill laughter was the noisiest of all.

"Let's clear out of this," Bob muttered. "We'll never be missed and I know a way we can slip out through the service entrance without being caught." Waring agreed, smiling to himself over the success of his first shot.

They swung along Michigan avenue side by side. The winter wind seemed good after the scented, hot-house atmosphere they had just left. Bob squared his shoulders and Waring, glancing sidewise at the fine profile, applauded Susan's taste.

"Do you mind if I stop in tomorrow morning to look at those things?" Bob asked him at parting.

"About 11?"

"Not at all. That will be splendid," Waring told him heartily. As he went back to the hotel where he lived he felt a glow of conscious righteousness.

"I was a Boy Scout before," he reflected. "Now it looks as though I am going to be a blooming Cupid."

BUT Bob Dunbar did not come to the office the next day. He telephoned to say that the doctor had diagnosed his sore throat as quinsy, and he would not be allowed to go out for several days at least. Did Waring have Miss Carey's home address? Waring said that he did and supplied it. The young man seemed grateful.

Waring did not mention the fact that Susan was no longer at the office. He had learned it himself only that morning. Heath had explained rather stiffly that Miss Carey's aunt was ill and she would not return for some time, if at all.

"The old man's keeping something back," Waring said to himself. After he had given Susan's address to Dunbar he felt better. The boy would go to see her and everything would be made right.

"I've spiced that young lady's guns all right," he muttered, thinking of Denise. He looked with distaste at the girl who had come from the agency to fill Susan's place. She was tall and thin with a pink nose and pale blue eyes which looked as if she might have been crying.

"I'll miss that kid," Waring told Pierson confidentially a few minutes later.

Bob Dunbar, at home, raged and tossed about like a caged lion. Of "Right this way, if you please, sir!"

Unless you happen to be an invited guest of the British Royal Family, the best way to "see" Windoor Castle is under the convoy of a uniformed guide. In a sing-song patter, he will tell you its history... point out things of interest whose full significance would escape the unattended tourist.

It also saves time and shoe-leather to use "guides" when you do your family marketing at home. These guides are the advertisements in this paper. They tell you where, when, and the equally important "how much."

By consulting the advertisements, you know in advance what the stores have to offer. If you are pressed for time, you can do your shopping by telephone, with the newspaper before you as a definite guide. Read the advertisements... the big ones and the little ones.

"Step this way," the advertisements say, saving time and lost motion.

IMPORTANT

When you ask for a product by name, as a result of advertising, do not accept a substitute—substitutes are offered not as a service to you, but for other reasons.

IMPROVED— THANKS TO CRAZY CRYSTALS

"We want to let you know how much CRAZY CRYSTALS have done for us. My husband has been sick for one year and a half with rheumatism, and his father for six months with the same. I was the only one able to work. I was beginning with pains in my knees, then we heard over the radio about CRAZY CRYSTALS, so we got one box. They helped me a lot. I feel better than I have for a long time. My husband feels better than he did when he took baths and medicine. His father is 70 years old, but feels better than he has for three or four winters. We are going to get another box tomorrow.

Testing New Automobiles On Latest Tour By Magnolia Co.

DALLAS.—To determine by actual test the performance of its fuels and lubricants in the new passenger cars for 1932, the Magnolia Petroleum company has embarked upon what is probably the most extensive motor vehicle test tour ever undertaken in the Southwest.

"Ever since the first automobile was brought to the southwest early in the present century, Magnolia has worked in close harmony with the automotive industry and kept pace with every advance in automotive design by manufacturing fuels and lubricants which are refined and blended with an exactness and economy," Mr. Marman said.

The itinerary of the test tour includes the following cities and intermediate points in the order named: Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco, Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Houston, Beaumont, Lake Charles, Shreveport, Texarkana, Little Rock, Fort Smith, Muskogee, Tulsa, Guthrie, Oklahoma City, Clinton, Amarillo, Tucuman, Albuquerque, Socorro, Las Cruces, El Paso, Pecos, Midland, Big Spring, Sweetwater, Abilene, Albany, Breckenridge, Graham, Olney, Archer City, Wichita Falls, Bowie, Gainesville, Denison, Sherman, McKinney and Dallas.

Refrigerator Party Good Indoor Sport

Not mentioned by the sporting editors, never listed in the sports curricula of the colleges, and yet one of our major indoor sports, national in scope and popularity, is the time-honored game of pantry-pecking or "Ice-Box Hide and Seek!"

The sport is favored by the whole family, at any hour of the twenty-four, but it reaches its zenith along about mid-evening when the filling effects of dinner have worn off and thoughts of molar-polishers begin to fill the head of your veteran Rummager.

Sometimes this predatory pastime begins just after a party or the theatre; sometimes whole squads of friends and family will descend upon you in quest of a repast. And pity the poor homemaker who searches her pantry in vain for "the makings!" (Mother Hubbard just wasn't in it!) It's no good at all, shouting about digestion and not filling one's stomach at bedtime; such admonitions mean less than nothing to an old Rummage Player.

Since husbands and sons are the ardent fans of this indoor sport, some simple sandwich fillings which they may prepare themselves are suggested here. A hot dish—such as Fimiento Scramble—is in order for that very late supper for guests, and, for the feminine self-searchers, a new kind of toast. Everybody likes that incredibly delicious Hot Mushroom Sandwich—the youngest generation will be happy with "Lily White's Lunch."

Porto Ricco On one slice of white bread, put mayonnaise. On a second slice put a slice of canned pineapple (drained) and on the pineapple lay strips of pimiento. Press slices of bread together. (In making a quantity of sandwiches, remember that one No. 2 can pineapple and one 7-ounce can pimientos will make 16 sandwiches.)

Fimiento Scramble

- 5 eggs
1/2 cup milk
1/2 tsp. salt
1 2-oz. jar pimientos
1/2 tsp. pepper
2 tbsps. butter
Beat eggs slightly with fork; add salt, pepper and milk. Heat pan, put in butter and when melted turn in the mixture. As the eggs begin to cook add the chopped pimientos. Cook until of creamy consistency, stirring constantly and scraping from the pan.

Orange Coconut Toast

Toast bread on both sides, butter and spread with the Orange Coconut Spread. Then return to toaster to melt mixture and brown coconut. For 12 rectangles of toast, mix the following amount of spread: 2 tablespoons orange juice, rind of 1/4 orange, 1/2 cup sugar and 1/2 cup shredded coconut.

Toasted Mushroom Delights

- 1 loaf white bread
1/2 lb. fresh mushrooms
1 3/4-oz. can pimientos
1/2 lb. butter
1 small slice onion
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
3 tsp. salt
Cayenne
Wash mushrooms drain the liquid from the can of pimientos. Chop mushrooms, pimientos and onion. Melt butter in a small saucepan; add the chopped mixture; cook over a low flame until mushrooms are tender. Stir occasionally. Sprinkle flour over the surface of the mushrooms and stir until the mixture thickens. Season to taste with salt and cayenne. Cool. Trim crusts from bread and cut into thin slices. Cover half the slices with the mushroom filling. Put together in pairs and toast. Cut sandwiches into inch wide strips and serve piping hot with a beverage. 3 doz. sandwiches.

Lily White's Party Lunch

The tiniest members of the family who must go off to "Lily White's Party" as bed is often called, will be happy and keep healthy with this snack: Place sliced pasteurized dates and a few bits of candied ginger in an individual glass dish. Pour milk over the dates, chill until cold and serve with a sweet cracker.

NEW OATS ANNOUNCED

AMES, Ia.—A new variety of oats practically immune to stem rust, highly resistant to crown rust, resists lodging and withstands late planting, has been announced by the agricultural section of Iowa State College. The new seed will be developed this summer for distribution to farmers in 1933.
