BEGIN HERE TODAY

AN CAREY, 19, pretty and smart, lives with her Aunt in Chicago and takes a course at a downtown business school. There she meets BOB DUNBAR, heir to a fortune. She secures a position as secretary to ERNEST HEATH, architect. JACK WARRING, Heath's assistant, tries to start a flirtation with her. MRS. HEATH annoys Susan. BEN LAMPMAN, a young musician, takes Susan to a studio but she does not care for it. Dunbar takes her to lunch and tells her he is going abroad. Susan must depart on a visit and BOSE MITTON stays with Susan. Lately, the girl goes for a drive with Warring and RAY FLANNERY, employed in the next office. Warring kisses her and she resolves never to go with him again. Ben Lampman asks Susan to marry him and will not accept her refusal as final. Warring apologizes for his childish behavior. In a newspaper gossip column, Susan reads that Bob Dunbar is to be married. She works overtime at the office one night and Heath for the first time realizes her youth and beauty.

"It is, Miss," he agreed. He was tooling the car carefully through a narrow lane, avoiding the sharp branches that reached out and might have scratched the glossy surface. Susan leaned back against the cushions and sighed. However could Mr. Heath leave this paradise each morning and come into town to the soot and smoke and noise that made Chicago's loop? Men were strange. If she lived in such a place she knew she would never, never leave it. There was a gleam of white through an ambush of pine trees and Simon made a magnificent sweep into a circular drive. The house, completely hidden from the road, sprang into view. It was a long, low affair of whitewashed brick with a roof of black slate. The blinds were blue. There was about it an air of cool, disarming simplicity. Susan, her heart beating rapidly, alighted. Simon drove slowly away to some retreat of his own. Thus abandoned, there was nothing for Susan to do but to sound the knocker. This she did. The maid who admitted her was in pale green. She had a rosy, impressive face and cockney accent.

She had to abandon this line of thought with alacrity when her employer entered the room. He looked ill. Susan felt a twinge of maternal concern. They sat down after a business-like greeting, Susan at the oaken table and the man in the big chair. She had taken off her hat and the jacket of her serge suit. Susan forgot herself and her surroundings as she worked. The man coughed once or twice, harshly and deeply, and she looked up.

CHAPTER XIX

WHEN SUSAN alighted from the train at the suburban station she looked about for Mr. Heath's man, Simon. His smiling, black face gave her a heartening sense of being at home in all this intimidating splendor. A battery of smart motors were drawn up in a circle and the high, shrill voices of young girls and matrons wearing perfect sport clothes pierced the Friday morning calm.

"No wonder," thought Susan, "this particular section of the Lake Michigan shore is called the 'Gold Coast.' Every one seemed fabulously rich. There was an air of luxury about the houses which they passed. Simon driving slowly and carefully down a great avenue lined with beech trees at the end of which could be seen the shining blue of the lake. Susan was disappointed when Simon turned off this road and followed a country-fied-looking by-path. She had hoped the Heath home would be on the very fringe of the lake. That would have been perfect. But presently she forgot her disappointment in the beauty of the road they were traversing. It might have been the very thick of the north woods. White birches leaned out like ghostly figures, birds sang gaily and the young pine trees left a carpet of needles where the grass would not grow. She gasped for sheer pleasure.

Heath frowned. "I want to get this off my mind."

When at last they had finished the girl slipped her book and papers back into the dispatch case and said shyly, "It's so beautiful here I wonder you ever leave."

Heath's eyes lighted. "You like it?" She had touched on his one hobby. "I wonder if you have time to see the garden?" he said eagerly. "Of course it's not at its best now but there are still some roses and of course the zinnias—"

SUSAN murmured faintly that she thought she should catch the 11:10 train. Simon had said something about bringing the car around for her then. The familiar mask slipped down once more over Ernest Heath's face.

Of course, he thought, this girl wasn't interested in his garden. Neither was Ruth. She hated talk of delphinium and cosmos and tulips. Ruth thought it was stuffy living there. She would have preferred a villa in the south of France. He rose.

"I'm sorry you haven't time to see it," he said formally. "Some other day, perhaps." He was amazed at the light that glowed in the girl's lambent eyes.

"Oh, I should love it," she said eagerly. "I've always loved flowers so much but we have such a tiny back yard and it's too shady for anything to grow except a few violets in the spring. Nothing," she finished softly, "could be more wonderful than to have a home like this and to be able to stay in it."

He stared at her. "You really feel that?" he said incredulously. Susan nodded.

"I envy you," she said with a simplicity which had the ring of truth.

Simon came to the door of the library and announced the car was ready to take Miss Carey to the station. The sick man was suddenly galvanized into life.

"Tell Hannah to cut some flowers for Miss Carey directly," he ordered.

Soviet Calls Youth in Hunt For Treasure

By United Press.

By EUGENE LYONS.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

MOSCOW.—Soviet youth has been summoned officially to explore Russia for treasures of natural resources as part of its contribution towards the second five-year plan.

Explaining that everywhere in the union are sources of coal, iron, gold and other valuable products yet undiscovered, the communist youth organization has called upon its members to undertake serious scouting expeditions.

The undertaking has received official sanction. The head of the state planning commission, Valerian Kuibishev, emphasized that the discovery of new deposits, fuel supplies and raw material bases, was a necessary part of the whole planning system.

The commissar of education, Andrew Bubnov, promised to draw the whole school system into the search, making the practical task part of the study of economics and natural science.

The exploration by millions of young people, under the leadership of communist youth organizations, will be in two directions. First, every effort will be made to locate supplies for local industries and thus help solve the transportation problem. Second, tourist groups will be encouraged to strike out for unexplored regions not only for the sport of it but in search of natural resources.

To underline the importance of the drive, the official organ of the communists youth is reporting prominently discoveries of new resources by its readers.

Recent announcements include the findings of oil on the banks of the Aguri river in the Caucasus;

OUT OUR WAY

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT, United Press Staff Correspondent. PARIS.—Several weeks ago it was Patou who said, "If I were to summarize in a few words the spirit of this new collection (this spring and summer clothes) I would say that it is the triumph of the diagonal line. Practically nothing is straight. The constant use of the bias cut gives an entirely new play to the material, and the employment of very intricate rices makes possible a completely new ensemble of line."

We might add too, that the effect of balance is no longer achieved by symmetrical movements, but by the employment of different levels counter-balancing one another. Patou, incidentally, is one of Empire waistline advocates. He says "just short of Empire" but he puts them so close we refuse to see any difference. Of course you know that blue and white form the foundation of nearly all his 1932 color schemes. The three blues: "Blue-night blue," "Patou's new blue," and "flax blue." These may be used separately or all three together, touching one or the other of them with something white.

Opera Singer To Visit Her Home

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—A 21-year-old Pittsburgh girl, youngest member of the Italian-Milan Opera company and now its star, will visit her home here for the first time in six years in June.

She is Miss Dory Marnell, known on the stage as Dory Marnelli, daughter of a Pittsburgh music store owner. The father, T. V. Marnell, has followed the rise of his daughter in European music circles by press notices and reports from the Metropolitan Opera company.

Miss Marnell, who was a soloist in a Pittsburgh church when 13, sings the leading roles for the Italian-Milan company. Critics especially praised her for her work in "The Barber of Seville." She is a native of Fayette county, Pennsylvania.

The bridegroom, George Stoddart, 32, stands 34 inches in his stocking feet. His bride, Evelyn Crane, four years younger, is four inches taller. SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY, NEA Service Writer. THE modern version of a sandwich is a far cry from the original "two slices of bread with a thin layer of filling between."

For the most alluring of sandwiches uses but one slice of bread and the filling is anything but thin. This "open face" sandwich can be varied almost indefinitely. It can be made and garnished so picturesquely that it looks more like a confection than a sandwich. Cream cheese softened with heavy cream makes an effective border piped around the edge. Stuffed olives, sweet pickled cucumber rings, a bright tart jelly, pimento, fried hard-cooked egg yolk, and well seasoned sandwich mixture, make large shrimp in a border of sauce—all these and many other materials can be used for the center of the cheese border.

Graham, rye, white, whole wheat or Boston brown bread can be used for the foundation. The bread should be sliced thin and cut in rounds not more than two inches in diameter. Small diamonds and hearts can also be cut and it adds much to the attractiveness of the finished tray of sandwiches if the shapes are varied. The ways to decorate these sandwiches are innumerable.

Cream Cheese and Watermelon Kind Sandwiches. Cut rounds of date bread, making them about three inches in diameter. Spread thickly with cream cheese and sprinkle the cheese with finely minced parsley. Put a sweet pickled watermelon ring in center. Put a snip of maraschino cherry in the center of the pickle ring.

Ribbon sandwiches are another attractive novelty. These are made with two kinds of bread cut in thick slices, lengthwise of the loaf, and put together with a smooth filling. For "checkerboard" cut again, making strips. Butter bread lightly and put together with different fillings. Wrap tightly in waxed paper and put in a cold place for an hour.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Stewed dried apricots, crisp broiled bacon, rice omelet, bran muffins, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON: Spilt pea soup, toasted muffins, cottage cheese and chives salad, shredded fresh pineapple, cookies, milk, tea.

DINNER: Veal pot roast, mashed potatoes, scalloped tomatoes, head lettuce with chiffonade dressing, rhubarb and raisin pie, milk, coffee.

or longer. Then slice about 2-3 inch thick. The fillings must be quite smooth and not so moist as to soak into the bread. A seasoned butter is often used and is very satisfactory when several varieties of assorted sandwiches are served.

Roll sandwiches are another interesting possibility. The bread must be fresh for these and cut very thin and even. Both graham and white breads are used for these, too. Remove crusts and slice bread, lengthwise of the loaf. Spread each slice with creamed butter and roll up closely. Spread one end of each graham sandwich evenly with butter and roll in grated pistachio nuts. Spread the white sandwich rolls with butter and roll in grated yellow cheese. Of course any dry materials that will cling to the butter can be used, but the yellow cheese and green nuts are suggested on account of their color.

This type of sandwich naturally takes time to make, but it is most beguiling and gives a delightful party air to any function.

Improved Way of Extracting Fruit Juice.

Women who have struggled years at jelly-making time the question of "to jell or not to jell" will be interested to know a new way in which, besides juice and more pectin, or gelling substance, may be used. This consists of nothing more than first cooking the fruit in a pressure cooker instead of a saucepan. A cup of water in the bottom of the cooker makes steam, the rack within is then placed in the cooker on top of it are stacked inset pans that come with the cooker, filled with the usual amount of water. Small fruits are cooked minutes at five pounds pressure and large fruits at 10 pounds for 15 minutes. Return to zero of its own before the petcock is slowed to let out the steam. The fruit is then through a canton flannel. From this point on, procedure is usual with jelly. The results will be an increase in both pectin and acid in juice extracted, better proved flavor and much translucence.
