One section of the state's revenues has profited hugely by the decline in prices. It is precisely the factor that would have suffered most had the tax levy involved been upon the same basis as others.
Instead of gasoline tax revenues falling off as a result of strenuous conditions, they actually were more than $1-000,000 greater in 1931, than anticipated.
The reason was that gasoline prices dropped so low that people could afford to and did use more gasoline than usual.
Highway Commissioner Cone Johnson is authority for the statement that gasoline revenues were more than a million dollars above the estimates.

Now if the gasoline tax had been on the same basis as oil and gas production taxes, the highway department and the schools would have suffered seriously. These are on a valuation basis, rather than a quantity basis.
When gasoline dropped to 11 cents generally, and nine and 10 cents in some places, the highway fund still got three cents out of each gallon, and the schools one cent.
That was as much as they got out of 22-cent gasoline. But the low prices encouraged greater use of gasoline.
The state gets 2 per cent production tax on oil. At the present 72-cent barrel price, that means 11.44 cents per barrel. The state gets 2 per cent on natural gas. At a basis of two and one-half cents per 1,000 cubic feet the state gets a twentieth of a cent.

However unpopular with the dealers and merchants, and with the consumers, there is going to be a strenuous effort made at the next session of the legislature to extend the so-called luxury tax on cigarettes to cosmetics, luxury and semi-luxury commodities, including articles such as wearing apparel selling above fixed levels. A 50-cent neck-tie, as an example, might be exempt from taxes, but where a person insisted on buying a $2.50 tie, he would be required as part of that price to pay a sales tax of 25 or 50 cents.

It is said by people in public office, who have discussed taxes between debates on political races, that the trend will be very strong toward these indirect taxes on the theory that they will be comparatively painless. The man who will buy a $2.50 tie will make no serious complaint if 25 cents tax is added on it," an official commented.

HEALTHY CHILDREN
How to Provide Proper Food and Care at a Minimum Cost

UNDERNOURISHMENT BRINGS DISEASE, WARNS DR.
FISHBEN WHO TELLS PROPER FOODS

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of American Medical Association (Written Especially for NEA Service and This Paper) The safeguarding of the nutrition of children is fundamental to the future of the nation, especially in this era of depression and unemployment.

During the World War when hunger blockades threatened foreign nations, children developed all sorts of disease conditions due to the lack of proper food.
Today the United States is not faced with any actual shortage of food, but with the fact that unemployment and the resulting poverty means that many children will not be able to get the food that they require for proper growth and development.
Undernourishment is inevitably associated with disease. The rates for tuberculosis rise rapidly when the amount and the quality of food is insufficient. Pellagra is primarily a food deficiency disease.

Children who are undernourished easily develop respiratory diseases and the acute infections of childhood. Moreover, they are especially threatened with deficiencies of development that are shown in rickets and in caries of the teeth.
Most people will feel that the proper way of handling the emergency is to begin at once the feeding of vast numbers of children from soup kitchens or bread lines such as are provided for the unemployed in our large cities.
However, the President's Organization on Unemployment Relief has realized the danger to our social structure that lies in such an attempt at feeding and has recommended, instead, that children of needy families be provided with proper food in their homes. Feeding in many cities newspapers are carrying on campaigns to provide school lunches for children, particularly in the poorer districts. It is important that the school lunch be supplied not only to feed the child but also to educate it as to what are necessary and valuable food substances.
When food is to be supplied, particularly to needy children, it should be given to them in their homes as well as at school, so that the rest of the family may also be fed. It is realized that the feeding of school children in groups leads to neglect of the pre-school child and to neglect of the mother during the prenatal and nursing period. No doubt, the first six months of life constitute one of the most important periods for adequate feeding.
For very child, every day, at least one pint of milk, two teaspoons of cod liver oil (particularly if he is less than two years old), one vegetable or fruit, and a quantity of bread, cereals and other emergency foods should be provided.

600 Million In Old Large Bills
Still Outstanding

What has become of the $611-467,579 of old-series currency, the large-sized bills—which, according to recent Treasury reports is still outstanding?
A clue to the whereabouts of a large part of this money has been discovered by the American Economists committee for Women's activities. A good deal of it is very likely hoarded in old stockings, behind mantle clocks and in safe deposit boxes, by housewives and others.
Evidence of this hoarding has come to the committee since its recent announcement of the "It's Up To the Women" platform, urging America's 29,000,000 women, through their control of most household expenditures, to take leadership in encouraging business and employment.
"Recent sales events sponsored by merchants of this city have brought into circulation quite a few of the old style large size currency, indicating that there is money in the country," the chamber of commerce of Keokuk, Iowa, informed the committee.
Reports from other cities confirmed this impression.
"An interesting instance came to my attention recently," according to Elizabeth W. Wilson, economist, of Cambridge, Mass. "In a moderate-sized New England city the merchants united in putting on a real bargain day. In that one day about 75,000 sales were made, aggregating over three-quarters of a million dollars.

Casinghead Gasoline

most of this gas, as it comes from the well, is unfit for pipe line use, and it is usually accompanied by oil, sand and salt water.
The Lone Star Gasoline company, in performance of its duties, gave employment to about 135 men monthly, and had a monthly pay roll of about $18,000, or a total of $226,800 paid out for labor in 1931. During the past year, the Lone Star Gasoline company paid out a total of $281,532.85 for gas purchased and royalty paid on gasoline produced. This figure was unusually low in 1931 due to the low price of gasoline; 2.5 cents was the approximate average selling price for the year, and practically all gasoline royalties are based on the selling price of gasoline during the month.
The taxes on gasoline company properties in Eastland county last year amounted to $31,000, in Stephens county $10,000. Material and supplies in the amount of $22,540 was purchased locally. The company operated about 55 automobiles and trucks in the Ranger district last year. The tax paid for license, in this county, on these trucks and cars amounted to $1-832.

Natural gasoline production, in this country for 1931 is expected to show a sharp decline under 1930. Preliminary figures for 1931 indicate a decline in production of such proportions as to set back the industry's output to the rate recorded in 1928. The total estimated production of casinghead gasoline, for the last year is one billion 800 million gallons, a decrease of about 434 million gallons from the production of 1929, the industry's largest year in point of production. The slump last year was due mostly to economic conditions, and to some extent to stabilization of natural Gasoline specifications. Due to increased efficiency in refining operations, the refiners are now able to manufacture from refinery vapors, a product very similar to our natural gasoline, and due to foreign competition, the refiners' export trade has been materially reduced.
Of particular significance is the fact that while production of natural gasoline was materially reduced in 1931, stocks of that product persistently remained above 1930. This reflects the degree with which consumption declined in 1931, and shows that economic necessity dictated greater economy in the industry's operating facilities.

In Sheriff's Race

Virge Foster, sheriff of Eastland county, who today announced his candidacy for re-election.

Virge Foster Is After Re-Election As County Sheriff

Virge Foster, present sheriff of Eastland county, has authorized this paper to announce his candidacy for re-election, subject to the action of the democratic primaries.

Foster is asking the voters to retain him in the office because his record shows that he has served the county well and faithfully as an enforcement officer during his incumbency as sheriff and he feels that he is ably qualified to continue.

The records show that Foster has been one of the most active sheriffs the county has ever had. In the number of arrests made for liquor law violations, Foster's records rates well even among the records of those back in the boom days when there was a greater floating population and a correspondingly greater number of liquor law violators.

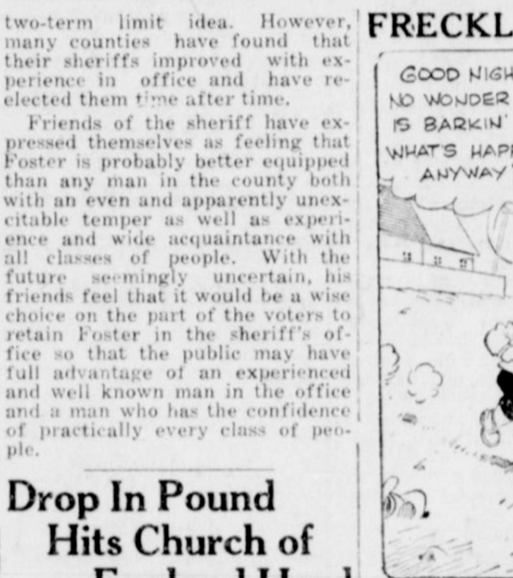

The department under his administration has been one in which harmony has prevailed and in which the individuals have co-operated to the fullest extent both with each other and with the sheriff. And as a unit it has co-operated with the officials of the cities in the county, the various constables and with the federal officers.

Of course, some criticism may be expected by adherents to the two-term limit idea. However, many counties have found that their sheriffs improved with experience in office and have re-elected them time after time.

Friends of the sheriff have expressed themselves as feeling that Foster is probably better equipped than any man in the county both with an even and apparently unexcitable temper as well as experience and wide acquaintance with all classes of people.

With the future seemingly uncertain, his friends feel that it would be a wise choice on the part of the voters to retain Foster in the sheriff's office so that the public may have full advantage of an experienced and well known man in the office and a man who has the confidence of practically every class of people.

THREE KINDS OF LOVE

By KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves, their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandparents, known as "Rosalie" and "Grand."

Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl DeArmout, vaudeville actor, and meets him secretly. He tries to persuade her to become his stage partner.

Ann thought, "Cissy shouldn't have. All families have little fuses sometimes, and the only thing to do is forget all about them. Cissy will come home and be sorry, and by this time tomorrow everything will be as it has always been. Run along, now, if you've eaten your breakfast, and look over your notebooks. Your history examination is a thousand times more important than this affair."

Mary-Frances went as far as the door. "You'll remember that, won't you, Ann? If anything should happen, or anything, I mean. And you'll love me, too?"

THE PITY, THE TERROR, OF A MAN CURSED WITH A DUAL SOUL!

MAGICIAN'S TRICK Never Fails To Gain Admisson

By BATES RANEY. United Press Staff Correspondent. NEW YORK.—Need a job? Try John Mulholland's technique. He always gets an audience. The plan is this:

You approach the hard-boiled office boy who bars your entrance to the big boss's office. Reaching into the air you produce a glass of water, drink the contents, make the glass disappear again.

While the boy is recovering from his astonishment you walk in. It's simple for a magician like Mulholland, one of the cleverest sleight-of-hand artists of the day in American magic, as exemplified by his post as vice president of the American Society of Magicians. Once he was a book agent.

He recalls that once when he got by a startled office boy with the glass of water trick he ran into a pretty difficult proposition at the boss's desk.

"I had been trying to get an appointment with that man for a long time," he related. "I managed to get into his office and he looked up and growled: 'What do you want?' So I pulled a fast one on him. Said I: 'I wrote down what I wanted the last time I was in here. You'll find it in your left hand desk drawer.'"

By sleight of hand, he saw to it that a note did repose in the drawer. Mulholland grinned as he recalled how many books he sold there and then.

He likes to mystify people, to give pleasant entertainment. One of his favorite stunts is to walk into a bank and shove a blank check in the teller's window.

"One teller looked at me sort of funny," he relates. "So I said, 'Oh, I forgot to endorse it, didn't I?' But the check is blank," he stammered. "You must be mistaken," I said. "Look at it again." And I waved my hand over it. He looked again and saw that the check was properly made out and in-worsed. He looked up my balance very carefully before he cashed it, however."

Mulholland's subway trick is a wow. He picks a busy target, passes through them, apparently reached back and regains his nickle. The alert guard comes rushing up feeling that his company is being encroached.

"Oh, well," says Mulholland, winking at the crowd that has gathered by that time. "We won't argue about it. Take this half dollar."

The guard takes the half dollar. It is too light for a coin that size, however. He opens his hand, looks at it again. Somehow or other the half dollar in his hand has changed into a metal disc stamped with the name John Mulholland, Magician, and bears on the reverse side a rabbit peeping from a silk hat with two paw balls on the table beside. That is his trademark.

The ethics of his profession stand high in Mulholland's regard. He believes that magic should be used only for pleasant entertainment. He once conducted a single-handed campaign against fortune tellers. They are all fakes, he contends. Any magician could be one if he wished to lower his ethical standards.

He knows magicians all over the world and sometimes when they get together on their day off they sit up until late at night doing tricks for each other.

Boy Preacher Will Tour in the West. By United Press. NORMAN, Ok.—Sixteen-year-old Dwight Harvey Hopkins, "Oklahoma's Boy Preacher," has announced plans for an Oklahoma-to-Oregon preaching tour this summer.

The tour will cover ten states and during the three months he hopes to deliver sermons on his four choice subjects which are: "Hell Fire and Brimstone," "Give Prohibition a Chance," "Modern Views on the Sin of Lying" and "Is Life Worth Living."

Dwight is the son of the Rev. Frank Hopkins, conference evangelist of the Methodist Episcopal church, South. He started preaching when only 13 years old.
