The census data will be compiled along with property renditions for taxes. The information will be confidential, and not used as a basis of tax levies. Commissioner McDonald pointed out there will be two questionnaires laid before farmers and land owners. One is the production and acreage census for use of the state and federal departments of agriculture.

W. Ayer & Son's Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals for 1932.

On a dining car near Chicago, Simpson ordered two lamb chops for his lunch. His bill was 55 cents—or 10 cents more than Sheep Raiser Estes got for all his seven sheep.

The Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pod) By Cowan

THREE KINDS OF LOVE by KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN

BEGIN HERE TODAY Ann and Cecily Fenwick have for years supported themselves, their younger sister, Mary-Frances, and their grandparents, known as "Rosalie" and "Grand." Because of this financial responsibility, Ann, who is 28, is unable to marry Phil Ervord, young lawyer to whom she has been engaged for eight years. Cecily, 22, loves Barry McKee, an engineer, but when he proposes she refuses to name their wedding date for the same reason. Mary-Frances, 15, and still in school, strikes up an acquaintance with Earl De Armonth, vaudeville actor, and meets him secretly. He tries to persuade her to become his stage partner. Ann and Phil quarrel when she hears Letty King, who works in Phil's office building, address him with endearments. De Armonth continues to urge Mary-Frances to join his act and she promises to give him her answer next evening. Cecily is disturbed when she learns Barry has left town without telling her about it. Ann tries to forget Phil by going around with Kenneth Smith, rich and very attentive. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV Mr. G. O. Carmichael, president and sole owner of the Home-Maid Bakery Products company (Carmichael's Big Cream Loaf, Carmichael's Cookies for Kiddies, Carmichael's Cakes for Choice Occasions), stood on his front porch and frowned across his well-mown lawn over to his bugless pink roses and sighed worriedly. Gray haired, healthy, clean-shaven, excellently tailored, in appearance he resembled a banker—or thought that he did. His ambition for 25 years since he bought his first small shop and stopped doing baking for the other fellow, had been to look like a banker. That, then, must have been so much to the good on this early Monday morning. Also, conscience clear, he had slept well, had arisen, breakfasted satisfactorily, kissed his wife whom he loved devotedly, and had gone now—as far as the porch, at least—to a business that was thriving robustly at a time when many businesses were failing. Neither surfaces nor depths seemed to provide reason for Mr. Carmichael's depression. Peace should have been dropping slow. But, had someone come inquiring as to the absence of the nine bean rows and the hive for the honey-bee, he would have been told that Mr. Carmichael had a disagreeable duty to perform. Duties were Mr. Carmichael's fetishes. Kindly, well-meaning, earnestly mistaken about many things, Mr. Carmichael did not need to see his duty to do it. He scented duties with a whiff or two; he heard them whispering in the wind and caught them on the wing. No duty, no matter to whom it belonged, was safe anywhere near Mr. Carmichael. Mary-Frances Fenwick was coming down the walk on her way to school. Mr. Carmichael, affecting a strolling gait, met her by the pink roses in his parking. "Good morning, my dear," he said. "Good morning, Mr. Carmichael." "Nice morning, isn't it? On your way to school, I suppose?" "Yes, Mr. Carmichael." "School soon out now, isn't it?" "Yes, sir. We're having our finals this week. It is algebra today. I am dreadfully worried about it. It's so hard." "Speaking of worries," said Mr. Carmichael, "I've been quite worried myself, here of late. Very queer thing. For some time now I've noticed a young couple over in your yard—right near the corner. They meet there frequently. I wonder if your grandfather would like to have that sort of thing going on in his yard?" "What sort of thing?" said Mary-Frances. "Love-making. I have no doubt, innocent love-making," modestly insisted Mr. Carmichael. "but—night after night. No. I am certain that your grandfather would not like it." "I don't much think he'd care," Mary-Frances comforted. "I'm not so sure of that, young lady. I'm not so sure of that. Here is a peculiar thing. The girl is your size and build. In fact, if I didn't know what a sensible little lady you were, I'd be positive that she was you. But I know you too well to think that you'd be sparkling out in the yard, night after night, when you should be in the house studying your algebra. That is the way I know this girl isn't you. You understand, I'm sure she isn't. In fact, I'm so sure of it that, unless I see the couple there again, I've decided not to mention it to your grandfather at all. Of course, if I should ever see them there again, even once more—and I feel it is my duty to watch out for you, I'm bound to inform your grandfather, and no if's nor and's about it." Mary-Frances' cheeks dimmed the roses' color. She said, "I'll have to hurry now, I guess. I always go by for my friend, Ermintrude Hill. Goodbye, Mr. Carmichael," and walked away so fast that she heard Mr. Carmichael say, "A word to the wise," only once, though he said it three times before he said, "Well, that's off my mind," and smiled his satisfaction, and went to take his car from the garage. It was a pity, a great pity. But for Mr. Carmichael and his duty, there is a slim chance, at least, that Mary-Frances might not have flunked flat in her algebra examination; and there is a stout certainty that she never would have written to Earl De Armonth.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS By Blosser

NEW METHOD TO DIAGNOSE CANCER FOUND

BERLIN.—A new method of diagnosing cancer, which is expected, will be of great assistance in checking the disease in its early stages, is claimed by Dr. J. H. Fuchs, blood expert. The Fuchs' method makes it possible to detect the presence of a pernicious swelling, or tumor, in the patient's body, through analysis of a small quantity of the blood. It is also possible to determine whether a condition of infection exists, or whether the tumor alone is present, and whether it is cancer or only the result of the infectious condition. Thus, it is claimed that one of the most difficult problems of cancer, the diagnoses in its early stages, and especially with intestinal cancer, is near solution. The Fuchs' Method. The Fuchs' method, which is the result of years of experimentation, lies in the discovery that the blood of a person suffering from cancer, remains unchanged under this analysis, while that of a healthy person is partially destroyed. The blood is divisible into three parts: cells, serum, and fiber. Dr. Fuchs found that the blood fiber of a cancer sufferer maintained its form when mixed again with its own blood serum. On the other hand it slowly disintegrated when mixed with the blood serum of a health person, or even of one suffering from a disease other than cancer. This disintegration process can be measured exactly by the Fuchs' method, through analysis of the nitrate which is released in the process. Years of Research. The last step required years of research before it could be brought to the point where measurements minute enough for practical diagnosis could be made by a process simple enough to be useful in an ordinary laboratory. Dr. Fuchs made tests with more than 2,800 cases, comparing his finding with clinical diagnosis. The results were completely successful in more than 90 per cent of the cases. Results were inexact only with cancer of the larynx and oesophagus. These form a special field in cancer, but are somewhat easier of treatment. Explorers Wins in Fight with Octopus SAN FRANCISCO.—Victor Berge, the explorer, known as the conqueror of the octopus, has told the story of his first exploit here. He was visiting here to buy equipment for another expedition to the South Sea Islands, where he has defied the horrors of the Pacific's depths. Narrating the story of his encounter with his first octopus, Berge told of groping, under sea, along a submarine cliff. "Suddenly something touched me on the arm," he said. "I was able to luff off two of the tentacles trying to pinion my arms. But two tentacles are not enough to score against an octopus." "The 18-foot arms, with their double rows of suction pads, were tight around my legs. They dashed me against the rocks, bruised my head against the helmet I wore, knocked the breath from my body. "The octopus seemed to sense my every move in advance," he said. "Every time I would lurch with my unconscious when they got me to the surface. "Where the strength of the man failed against the monster, the sea, lurching the boat, wrenched him loose." Berge has been back in America four months.

PASSAGE TO PARIS Patou launches a color called Rose Opaline. Agnes creates a little string beret, and Vionnet startles Paris with her diaphanous evening gowns worn over incredibly brief maillots. Bruyere makes a coat with a scarf, and Schiaparelli sponsors dinner pajamas. Those things happen within the closely guarded portals of the great French houses. Only one woman in a million will see them as the mannequins pass by. But two weeks later—three weeks at most—every American woman who reads a newspaper may know as much about the Paris Openings as the fortunate few. Great department stores, tiny specialty shops, alert manufacturers, offer through their advertising what practically amounts to a restaging of these semi-annual presentations. Every successful model will be shown. Every significant trend will be recounted—and America will wear its Basque berets and its evening pajamas as nonchalantly as Cannes or Juan les Pins. Two generations ago—or even one—this could not have been. And advertising has been a tremendous force in making it possible. Advertising has become the common carrier of fashion. There's a passage to Paris in the advertisements almost any day you look.

INSTITUTIONAL REPORTS SHOW SLUMP BURDEN

CHICAGO.—The increased burden that depressing unemployment has put upon public institutions here is shown by reports of 1931 expenditures.

The Cook County Bureau of Public Welfare, according to Director Joseph L. Moss, spent $2,550,000 for relief in the form of milk, food rations, shoes and coal for 45,000 families.

Warden Michael Zimmer reports that the Cook County hospital had an increase in both applications and admittances. Decreased incomes, through unemployment and lowered wages, accounted for much of this.

Inability to pay the 18,000 employees in the public schools was the keynote of the report of the Board of Education, but the enrollment of 508,408 pupils in September, revealing a shortage of 67,000 seats, was another unfortunate situation.

Cattlemen Will Meet January 27

SAN ANTONIO.—With nationally famous speakers on the program, cattlemen from over the country will meet here Jan. 27 for the three-day session of the American National Livestock association convention.

As a prelude to the convention, congressmen will be held Jan. 27. The executive and resolutions committees will continue their meetings Jan. 27, the day the convention opens.

Governor Ross Sterling of Texas will address the cattlemen on the opening day of the convention. The president's annual address will be given by President Henry G. Rice, of Phoenix, Ariz.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF W. T. C. OF C. VALUED AT OVER $23,000,000

STAMFORD, Texas, Jan. 16.—The accomplishments of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce during the past two years have been valued at $23,224,782.

That valuation is placed on its work by the chamber in its January issue of the magazine, "West Texas Today." The liabilities—the cost of putting over its program of accomplishments—are $60,000.

The estimated assets total $17,375,782; the deferred assets are estimated as $5,700,000, and the intangible assets are $9,000.

The magazine said that the chamber fathered and was the agency contacted by the United States department of agriculture in production and food loans, enabling the farming of 1,500,000 acres of Texas land not otherwise possible.

Another accomplishment claimed was its sponsoring and championing the cause of conservation of the oil and gas resources, which resulted in the present conservation law.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer

AMONG nourishing, inexpensive desserts, perfectly made cornstarch pudding holds close to first place. Delicate in texture and flavor, it is suitable for children and invalids and is, please the most fastidious grow-up.

There are certain definite rules to guide one in making cornstarch pudding. It is not a matter of making custards or any other particular type of dessert. Thorough cooking and just the right proportion of cornstarch to milk are the secrets of a delicious pudding.

Eggs can be added to most cornstarch puddings and contribute a pleasing delicacy as well as food value. If they are used, remember never to add the egg to the hot cornstarch mixture. The heat will cook the tiny particles of egg almost immediately and a speckled mixture will result.

Double boiler. When tiny bubbles appear around the edge of the milk it is hot enough. Mix cornstarch and 2 tablespoons sugar with remaining cold milk.

Outlook Good For Mohair A Survey Shows

Development of new uses for mohair, the strong position of the fabric in the automotive and furniture fields, and its increasing acceptance in women's fashions are among the principal factors supporting an optimistic outlook for 1932, according to W. H. Marland, president of Sanford Mills, Sanford, Me.

Production has been curtailed over the previous years largely due to the falling off in lines on which mohair is dependent, however, the position of mohair is better in the automotive field this year than it has been for a number of seasons.

Notable among the new uses for mohair are its adaptation as upholstery for school seats, for bridge table tops, for "man-made" fur fabrics used in the making of coats.

In the automotive field, its increasing use in women's dress goods of new patterns and designs. Research recently made has developed interesting and important points showing mohair's ability to absorb sound in office and other interiors and its aid to correct and comfortable posture, particularly in automobiles.
