RESTRICTIONS IN RELIEF PAID UNDER BOND ISSUE

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 2.—Rep. A. B. Clegg of Plainview has advocated that the legislature in issue relief bonds in September to pay for strict restrictions as to amount to be paid relief administrators. He had launched his heavily loaded plane down the concrete runway and attained a terrific speed when it began swerving under its cargo of 1,027 gallons of gasoline. Twice it left the runway before he regained control. The plane missed the administration building, crashed against a steel fence and burst into flames. Watchers saw the big plane side-swipe the fence. The plane struck the fence again, turned over and was enveloped in flames. For an instant watchers saw the plane staggering around the runway. He crumpled 25 feet away. The gasoline tanks burst into flames and blotted all from view. His latest flight was to be for the honor of Italy and Mussolini, who forced his retirement from the Italian air service after his successful flight over four continents.

Eastland County Has Always Had a Fair

(AN EDITORIAL)

Naturally there are many things that might divert attention from the problems that mean more to the individual interests of a community such as NRA . . . Repeal . . . Beer and what not. But above all home rule seems to have carried and that means that each and every county must forge ahead at every opportunity and those who have the most foresight and the most brains if you please to make a prosperous community certainly will reap the benefit in the long run. The Eastland county fair is a resume of what has been done and what is possible to do . . . and as the problem is up to us here in Eastland county to do most of the solving of our own problems it is only natural that everybody living in Eastland county should have the most interest in seeing that the fair is a profitable experience.

Everybody knows that the Eastland county fair in the past has been financed solely from the revenue received from the advertisers in the catalogue. Many excuses have been heard and listened to this year as to why no advertisement would be taken in the catalogue and the result is that the fair officials find themselves about $150.00 behind the necessary amount to finance the fair. It must be remembered that the surplus of the money from the catalogue is applied to premiums for winners in all angles of exhibits that are displayed during the fair. This means that if you have backed into a hole and refused to do your part that the very person that you expect to do business with in the future and encourage along the line of getting better results from his or her ingenuity in devising better means of production will be given to understand that you don't care whether they do something worth while or not.

This editorial is for the purpose of bringing to the attention of every business man or woman in Eastland county the importance of contributing some amount to this cause whether in advertising or not. Any business man that fails to see the point in this instance can well take stock of himself and ask the question: "Am I really and truly loyal to my county?"

Hurricane Moving From Cuba Toward Texas Coast Bureau Warning Indicates

KIDNAPER IS SENTENCED TO HANG OCT. 16

By United Press

Southern set the date of execution, the first imposed for kidnapping in this country, after denying a motion for a new trial for the abductor of the daughter of H. P. LEGAL BEER MAY NOT STOP TOURIST TRAVEL TO VALLEY

BROWNSVILLE, Sept. 2.—Texas border counties voted for beer and repeal, then turned to debating what effect the election will have on one of its most important sources of revenue, the tourist business. Visitors in uncounted thousands have for years journeyed to the Rio Grande, and across, lured by the attraction of legal liquor on "the other side." Mexico has begun building highways to encourage the tourists to travel on to the interior and its magnificent cities. The Lower Valley at least, and probably the entire border country, after its first uneasiness, has decided that legal beer in Texas will be put little of a damper on tourist travel to the action; that the travel in future will be drawn a little more on the merits of the country, and its scenic and historical attractions; and that a vast volume of money will stay on the Texas side that heretofore has flowed into Mexico. Mexico will for several years yet have hard liquor while Texas gets along on 3.2 beer. At the very least, it will take two years, and at only a semi-liberal estimate, it will be four years before Texas could change its constitution to legalize all liquor again. But the Valley country, both in Texas, and the charm and mellow historic values of Old Mexico will continue to attract visitors from all parts of the United States. Winter climate can be equalled only by a little part of Florida. Brownsville is the most southerly city in the United States. Four or five miles below the city the Rio Grande makes a bend from its southeastern direction to northeastern, and there leaves the point of land farthest south in the United States. Streets and highways are palm-lined. Oranges grow in people's yards. The citrus fruit industry is the pride of the Lower Valley. Climate and the mild winters, where frost is a great rarity, will attract people and these visitors are of the financial class that never has had to go without drinking liquor when they wanted it. Beverages have not been the controlling factor in building the immense tourist travel to the Rio Grande, neither at Juarez nor Pledras Negras nor Nuevo Laredo nor Reynosa nor Matamoros. And always, out of those who come to visit and enjoy the climate of the Valley country, and generally of much of the border country, there are some who stay to live, to engage in business and the farming industries. Altogether, it looks like the reopening of the beer business in Texas will very little check tourist travel to the Valley; that the holding of more tourist money in Texas will be felt by border business on the Texas side; and that the same attractions that started tourists this way, to visit both Texas and Mexico will endure practically unchanged. The winter migration to the Valley was well established before any sort of prohibition came to Texas. If business and financial conditions are improved with the return of the legal beer industry in Texas, it will help the section in that there will be more who can afford to taste the delights of the climate and to journey into the land of orange blossoms because of the scenery and climate.

RULES FOR RIGHT LIVING: He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?—Micah 6: 8.

SENATOR SHEPPARD STILL HOPEFUL

Senator Morris Sheppard has lost one of the greatest battles of his career, and he lost the battle in his own state, when Texas voted for repeal of the 18th amendment.

Yet, Senator Sheppard is not cast down. He draws comfort from the size of the anti-repeal vote in the state. He thinks the fight made by the dry forces in Texas "and the relatively large vote they polled in the face of such tremendous odds ought to give fresh hope and enthusiasm to prohibitionists everywhere."

THE SIZE OF TEXAS That the map of Texas is marked with lines of air passenger, express and mail service has a meaning that, to not so many as were affected by the railroads, is even more significant than the opening of railroads.

Take Austin-Brownsville, served by regular air lines, or Dallas-El Paso. The time of going from Austin to Brownsville is cut down to three hours. In terms of train or auto travel, that puts Brownsville and Austin as close together by air as Austin and San Antonio by normal motor travel.

HOT OIL RACKET East Texas farmers and landowners, it has been claimed, have lost their royalty on about 4,000,000 barrels of oil a year in the past, through scheming and sharp practices and illegal activities of oil racketeers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

THE announcement of Marya's marriage plans came as a distinct shock to Eve. The girls had worked together for several years. Marya was blessed with a tranquil disposition that often served as oil on the troubled waters of office trials.

For a while Marya had been watching sales and making purchases for her home, for it was a tradition among Marya's people that a bride should go to her bridegroom with a complete equipment of linens, cooking utensils and silver. Marya's parents also purchased her dining room furniture as a wedding gift. An uncle invited her to choose a living room suite as his gift. Marya was to take to her new home the bedroom furnishings that had been hers since her 21st birthday. Thus the new home would be practically equipped.

Marya and Ray had spent many Sundays driving about the city, stopping now and then to look at houses in new allotments. Marya had always maintained that she wanted a little gray bungalow when she married but a red brick house completely captured her fancy. There was a beamed ceiling in the story-and-a-half living room. The dining room was elevated a trifle with a wrought iron banister beside its three steps. In one bedroom the walls were paneled with an English garden scene and here she planned to place her mahogany bed, using a light green spread and draperies. In the other bedroom gay murmurings trailed over the walls. This room was to have furniture enameled green.

Colorful floral wall paper adorned the breakfast room. The recreation room in the basement appealed to Ray. There was a nursery upstairs with cunning Mother Goose figures on the wall and light pink woodwork and beside it was another well-lighted room which would serve as Marya's studio.

It really seemed to be an ideal home. For Ray's parents it was the culmination of years of thrift to know that their son could purchase such a house. Ever since he had received his first earnings Ray's father and mother had coached him to prepare for a future home of his own. Hence, though only in the middle twenties, Ray and Marya were to start married life with no debts except the monthly payments arranged to complete the purchase of their home.

Marya and Ray had asked Eve and Dick to drive out to see the house before the final papers were signed. Dick declared it to be well built and, according to the prevailing market, a good buy. Eve thought the house was perfect and she came back to the apartment with a wistful longing for such a home of her own.

"Never mind, sweetheart!" Dick told her. "You'll probably get everything you want some day but you can't expect it all at once."

"Yes, and now I have my career," Eve answered, instantly optimistic. "Lots of women who spend their days with dustpans and ironing boards would be glad to exchange them for a chance at a job like mine. Besides they say everything comes to him who waits."

"That's right," Dick agreed. "If he keeps busy while he's waiting!"

And so Eve helped Marya shop during their noon hours. Arlene never accompanied them on these shopping trips.

"Honestly," Arlene confided to Eve, "I can't work up much excitement over household downdresses. I'll probably wait until I'm 100 yards the other side of the altar and then go on a buying spree! The advantage of that will be that I'll have the very last word in floor-waxers and washlines, I suppose!"

The week before Easter Marya met Ray daily for luncheon. Eve and Arlene attended Lenten services each noon. On Good Friday they met Mr. Bixby coming from the church and Eve's heart warmed toward the white-haired old man as he bowed to them with dignity.

"The old lamb!" said Arlene. "To think I usually tremble in my boots when he enters the office!"

Saturday Marya spent her last day at the store. She had worked industriously to prepare advance drawings so that the advertising office could run smoothly for a week in case they found no one to take her place immediately.

Marya's eyes were misty when she finally cleared her desk and packed her personal belongings. Several girls from other departments came in to bid her goodby and Barnes called her into his private office for a brief session. Then it was closing time and Marya made a last survey of the familiar room. "Oh, Eve!" she cried, "I'm going to miss you dreadfully! What shall I do without this office?" Eve put firm arms about Marya and led her to the locker room.

AFTER lunch Sunday, Eve and Dick joined the Easter parade on the avenue. The sun shone brightly and here and there before a pretentious home yellow and lavender crocuses raised their heads from the green grass. They saw Mona Allen wearing a new black coat, lavishly trimmed with black fox. Framing her face was the hat

No Indication Is Given As to When Grants to be Made

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Sept. 2.—The first original public works loan, either in Texas or in the nation, yet is to be made; and along with much hoping at the Texas relief headquarters there was the admission that "we don't know when the first loan will be made in Texas."

The only grants of public works money have been in a few cases where applications had been completed and filed with the R. F. C., and were taken over when the public works deal was shifted to the new organization.

R. A. Thompson, Texas engineer for public works projects, has organized his work at Fort Worth. The Texas advisory committee to Clifford Jones, regional public works administrator, has held a meeting this week. Beyond that, state relief headquarters was without information as to the status of the unemployment relief public works applications.

All the hundreds of applications so far filed through the state relief headquarters were given a backset, and those that had been filed otherwise apparently were set back still more.

Engineer Thompson has distributed a circular from the national public works administration office of Secretary Ikes, showing the data on applications filed up to now is far from all that will be required. Applicants must greatly amplify the project statements and applications and supporting engineering data. It was not known here that a city or district official or attorney would have to go to Fort Worth to revise the application papers.

The state relief commission had forwarded to Thompson several hundred project applications. Many others waited here, and are being revised. State Relief Director Lawrence Westbrook has sent to all cities and other public applicants, copies of the government regulations calling for more data in the applications.

Engineer Thompson, known to be a conservative, likely was to have all the Texas proposals in such shape that when they should receive his own approval they then will be virtually certain of favorable action the rest of the way.

The Texas advisory committee to the regional administrator will not review the engineering aspects or feasibility of projects, but will pass on the way in which the projects fit into a statewide program.

Jack Flynn Asks Labor to Organize Under NRA Act

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, Sept. 2.—Jack Flynn, Texas labor commissioner, has addressed a Labor Day message to the members of the movement can consider past tradition and separate themselves from immediate problems sufficiently to permit a discriminating review that will distinguish the permanent and constructive from the unimportant, in proportion to the progress the labor movement makes, such a review becomes increasingly necessary.

"My advice to labor is to organize. The national recovery act sustains the right for every worker, both men and women, to organize and bargain collectively."
