Senate Passes the Smith Cotton Relief Measure; Now Goes to the House

EXPECT BILL TO BOOST PRICE FOR FARMERS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—The senate today passed and sent to the house the Smith cotton relief program, only a few minutes after action had apparently been blocked by the expiration time allotted to debate.

There was only scattered opposition to the measure, which would give the cotton farmer better prices in return for a 30 per cent reduction in the size of the crop this year.

The bill would create a cotton board to purchase all federal cotton holdings, including cotton given to the Red Cross.

Private owned cotton would be purchased from any planter who undertook to reduce his acreage by 30 per cent.

The board would be authorized to sell to any producer the equivalent of 30 per cent of his normal crop on agreement that this year's production would be reduced by that percentage.

The sale would be by option at prevailing market prices, in the expectation the price would rise on agreement to reduce acreage, enabling the farmer to sell his option at a profit.

New regulations issued by Secretary of Agriculture Hyde governing crop production loans, require farmers who obtain such loans to reduce by 30 per cent their acreage planted in cash crops.

DEATH COMES AFTER A LONG, LOSING FIGHT

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—James J. Corbett, 'Gentleman Jim' of the prize ring and the stage, died at his home in Bayside, Long Island, today.

Was Renowned As Actor As Well As Fighter In 'Gay Nineties.'

CONQUEROR OF JOHN L. SULLIVAN, the toughest fighter of his time, it was Jim Corbett's spectacular personality that did more than any other human act to make boxing 'respectable' in an age when the ring was scorned by society and outlawed by nearly every state in the union.

Corbett was 67 years old. His death, due to a disorder which induced heart disease, was not unexpected, for he had been in critical condition since Jan. 30.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—James J. Corbett's father, a livery stable keeper, had intended his boy for the priesthood 'or some genteel business like banking.'

Corbett was destined to become a champion who could pound the mighty John L. Sullivan to the floor, but he also was to introduce a new chapter in the history of prize fighting. His refinement and his efforts 'set an example' for American youths made him a unique and towering figure in the history of a sport which previously had been in disrepute in America.

The boy began boxing when he was 12 years old—in school yards from which he was twice expelled; in liverystables; in firehouses along the famous Barbary coast of San Francisco where his stamina and headwork even then attracted the delighted comments of the loafers and toughs who watched him.

In the early eighties, while he was obediently trying to become 'a genteel banker,' Corbett joined the Olympic club and took his first boxing lesson. In four years he had advanced to be first middleweight and then heavyweight amateur champion of the club.

It was Jack Dempsey (the non-pareil) who gave Corbett the thought that he 'could lick any man in the world.' A practice bout with Dempsey—30 minutes without an intermission or rest—showed the youth, who then weighed 160 pounds, that he could stay with the cleverest boxer of his day.

The entire west, wilder than it is today, although the fighters had to cross state lines, fight in barns and sometimes on boats in order to escape the law, rose in admiration when Corbett settled an ancient grudge against Joe Chynski, in a fight on a barge in the middle of San Francisco bay.

Chynski wore skin-tight gloves, 'having lost his own pair.' Corbett wore five-ounce gloves, and fought with a broken thumb through 28 rounds, finally to knock out his opponent with the left-hook he had perfected.

Later came his historic fight with Peter Jackson. A few words, Corbett's own, furnish a fitting description of the match.

'In the 50th round I loosed a left-hand hook as Jackson was letting the right go for my head... that is the only incident of the 10 periods from the fiftieth to the sixtieth that I regard as important.' And in the 61st round, the referee called the bout 'no contest,' three seconds before Jackson collapsed from sheer exhaustion.

Shortly after this fight, 'Jawn' L. Sullivan, touring the country in his play, 'Honest Hearts and Willing Hands,' met Corbett in an exhibition bout on a San Francisco wharf.

FARM ELECTRIC POWER SUBJECT TO TAX

Farm electric power has been held subject to tax by the internal revenue bureau of the government. That is, electrical energy furnished in general operation of farming is subject to the 3 cent tax on electricity.

A dairy which obtains milk and converts it into use for retail purposes is held to be engaged in a business commercial in character. Electrical energy used in such operations will be subject to tax.

POOR POLICY

Unwisdom of the state's spending much money and effort in building fish hatcheries and organizing game propagation and protection, only to abandon the work and the plant is obvious.

Under a broad game protective program, the commission has enlisted the support of landowners in pleasing many thousands of acres of land in closed game refuges.

The game department's work all has been paid for from its fees. And those who pay the bill want the service continued. They are unwilling to see the investment destroyed, and the work of years torn down.

RUNNING CIRCLES

State government seems to go around the same old circle in endless repetition. Only a few years ago Dan Moody, as governor, was urging civil service to determine that only well-qualified people might hold state jobs.

How a legislative committee is saying many employes in departments of state officers are selected without much regard to fitness for their jobs. The committee is recommending as "modern" even a shorter ballot than Moody advocated.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

THAT you should not have to be asked to boost your city. You should do it without the asking.

You should boost morning, noon and night, always remembering that your city deserves boosting.

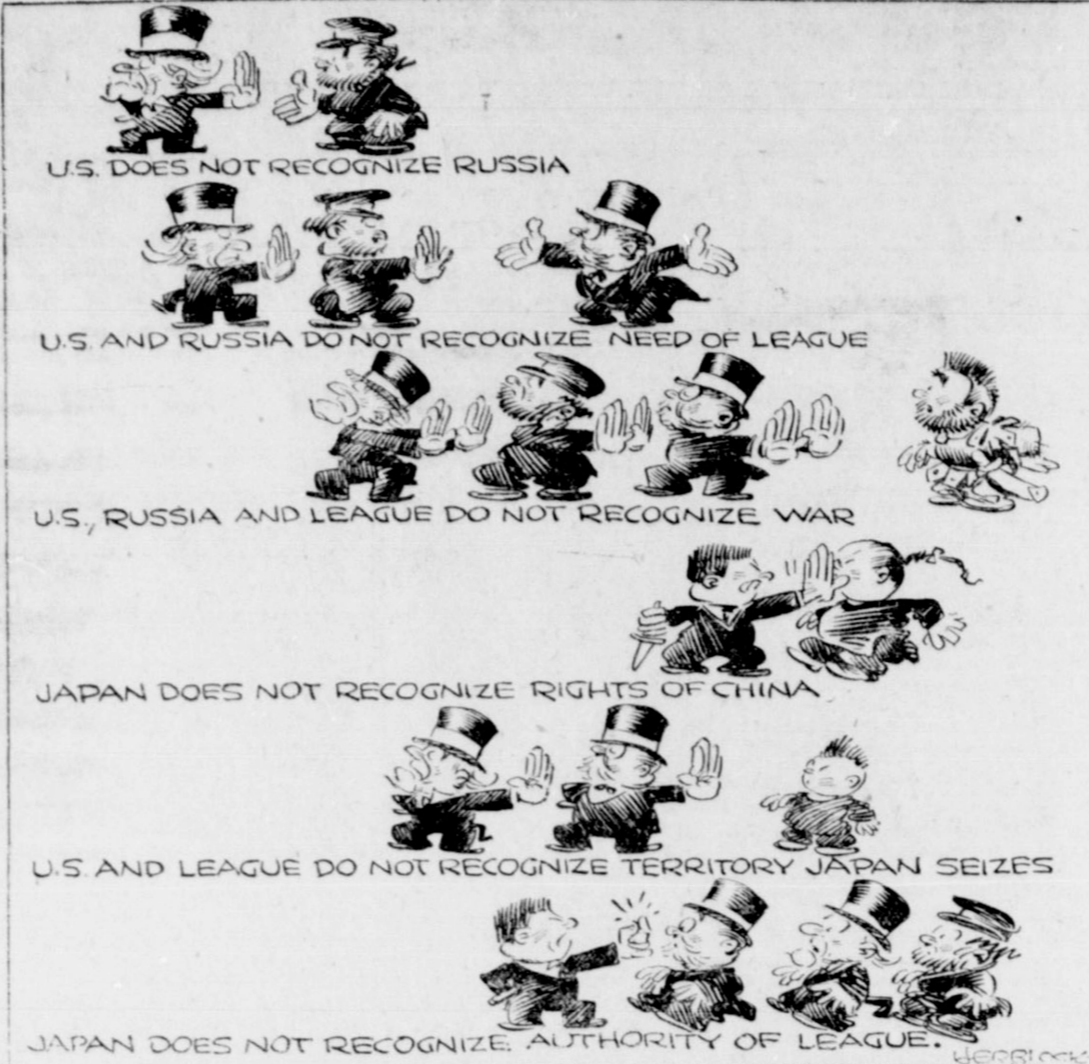

There is good in every city. Help to develop the good. You should always remember there are two sides to every question. You might be on the wrong side; if so, don't hesitate—get on the right side!

Don't postpone work for your city. Do your share in developing the opportunities before you.

The citizens of your city are sort of related. As a unit they are responsible for what work is done and what is left undone.

The mark of a good citizen is his willingness to do that which will be a help to the home city without regard as to whether or not it is personally agreeable to him. However, the knowledge that he is helping the home city should make it agreeable.

DERRICK SHADOWS

The repeal wrangle is beginning all over again. Play Pollyanna and be glad we had a few weeks rest from the subject, relying on the kidnapers and suicides and murderers for news.

No use getting upset over it, no use losing any sleep over anything. Tomorrow positive conditions will be negative. If you're disappointed in someone just quiet down, tomorrow he'll be disappointed in you.

Everything runs in waves these days: crime waves, flu waves, air waves, and permanent waves. Any one of the four mentioned gives the victim a most unnecessary useless thrill.

We visited a flourishing cactus ranch recently oohing and ahing over the little plants as though we hadn't them all our lives. You know a change of atmosphere and background brings out the good points of a thing.

People, if they wish, can live. You don't have to preside at a directors' meeting or boss a road gang to eat. The fellow who rescued a trampled mass of stickers from behind a rock and set a price on the plant had an eye for business.

Do you know that the high school and junior college library has received a collection of interesting and educational books? After all, what do you know about your local schools? This new shipment is not a stack of fairy tales and lullabies.

Now that the shooting is over for the time being and the big risk taken, Roosevelt is to be surrounded by a heavy guard and urged to refrain from unnecessary public appearances.

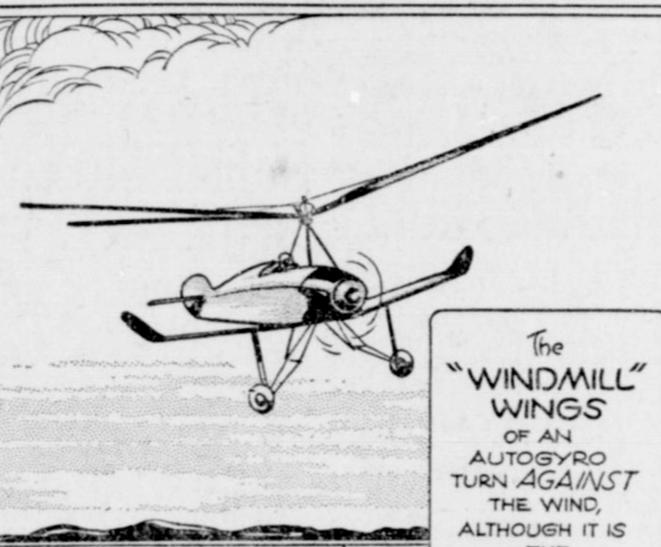

But since we're going to discuss the affair, and everybody is, I admire the little woman who held her breath and knocked the wild assassin's last bullet wild. Not many of us would have the courage to jog a murderer's elbow, president-elect or no.

They warn us a new flu epidemic is breaking out. Whereupon, we all plunge our feet in boiling water, drink gallons of soda water, eat dozens of lemons, and otherwise prepare ourselves to take it. Most of us are still moping sadly around after the last attack.

Men Who Build Our Community

MRS. ALICE D. TRUE, Ranger

It is almost impossible to write a series about men who build a community without mentioning some of the women who have also helped. Mrs. Alice D. True comes under that head.

Mrs. True came to Ranger in August, 1918, to work for an oil well supply house, and did this kind of office work, with two companies, for four years, gaining some valuable experience, both in office work and in coming in contact with business men.

Ten years ago she succeeded Karl Jones, becoming secretary of the Ranger Retail Merchants association, a position she has held since that time.

In addition to attending state conventions, she has attended two national conventions, one in Los Angeles, and the other in Washington, D. C.

In speaking of her work, she says that, even if it were not necessary to make a living, she would like to continue in the same kind of a job she now holds, because it has acquired a hold on her that she cannot escape.

One of her first experiences, after becoming secretary, was with a man who came to the office with the intention of "beating up" the secretary.

In speaking of the instance Mrs. True says that she learned then that it did not pay to become angry and that by being calm and thinking things over rationally one could usually see that the anger only caused trouble.

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Congress will not give Mr. Roosevelt full dictatorial powers, but its delegation of legislative functions will combine with other factors to give him far more power than any other president has had in time of peace.

Even if he is only permitted to abolish federal bureaus and cut expenses up to a stipulated percentage, the power of the executive will be taking its longest jump in a history of gradual, constant expansion.

Now Congress has come to the point where it actually admits there are certain fields in which it can't do the business entrusted to it by the Constitution.

A PRESIDENT who is permitted to abolish government activities and jobs to his heart's content, subject only to a reputation by a party representation in Congress of which he probably will be in full control, becomes

THE dried vegetables, peas, beans and lentils, are the best food bargains the home-maker can buy. Rich in calories and mineral salts, but poor in vitamins C and G, many savory dishes can be made from these vegetables.

Because these vegetables are rich in protein we often hear them called meat substitutes, but with the realization that a great difference exists in the nutritive value of proteins from different sources, legumes are not considered an adequate substitute for meat until they are served with such protein foods as milk and eggs.

The legumes have a high starch value and consequently potatoes should not be served in the same meal with them.

- Bean Purée: Children, old people and persons whose food must be easily assimilated, can eat this dish. Two cups dried lima beans, 1 slice onion, 4 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/4 teaspoon pepper. Soak beans over night in water to cover. Add enough water to more than cover and simmer until tender, about four hours. After beans have cooked one hour add onion and salt. When beans are very tender and there is not more than one cup of liquid over the beans, rub through a sieve or potato ricer, carefully rejecting all skins. Add butter and pepper and make very hot, beating over the fire. Pile in a hot serving dish and sprinkle with minced parsley.
- Split Pea Soup: One cup dried split peas, cups cold water, 1 small onion, small carrot, 1/2 turnip, cube fat salt pork, 1 teaspoon butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon pepper, 2 tablespoons milk. Soak peas over night in water. Drain and put into cold water and pot. Simmer two hours and add onion, carrot and turnip all cut in small pieces. Simmer two hours longer and strain through a sieve. Melt butter in flour, salt and pepper and add milk, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and add pea purée. If soup is thick add more milk. Heat thoroughly and serve very hot.

The Breckenridge company has been in operation seven years, which time it has paid out more than $1,500,000 in claims to beneficiaries of policyholders. Students Quit Exam Room

BRACUSE.—Manufacture and use of "cribbing machines" to prevent university students seeking aid in passing examinations has been charged here in an investigation of cheating among undergraduates.

Many students of the college of Applied Science have been found in examination rooms, declaring to the examiners that they refused to take the test. A rigid investigation of the faculty, who discovered in colleges not under the system cheating in examinations was apparently the cause. The cheating was done by means of "cribbing machines," which consisted of strips of onion paper rolled at either end on sticks. The entire course was printed on the paper and students, by skillful manipulation in palm of their hands, were able to find the answer to any question asked.

The five College of Applied Science students who walked out of the exam room were commended by the university administration.

Texas Is Leader of Moratorium Plans in State

DALHART, Tex.—A native Texan who became foreman of his father's ranch when he was 14 years old is leader of the farm moratorium movement in North-West Texas.

He is 40-year-old R. J. McGowan of Texline, a stalwart appearing man with iron-gray hair and a quick, youthful step. McGowan uses reading glasses only when the type is unusually small or the light poor and his appearance belies his age.

His purpose is fathering the moratorium movement in this section of Texas, he said, is two-fold—that of establishing agricultural in a prominent place in the American economic structure and to prevent disorder.

"I am one of them," he said proudly relating his experiences on Texas and Oklahoma farms. His father's ranch in Wise county came under his supervision in 1884 when McGowan was 14 years old and when the senior McGowan became partially blind. With few exceptions, the remaining years of his life have been on the farm or in farming communities.

"And I am proud of it," McGowan continued. "Right now I am trying with every ounce of my strength to gain for the farmer and for agriculture the place it rightfully deserves in the American economic structure."

More seriously, he added: "My real purpose is fostering the moratorium movement in to prevent revolution and bloodshed. I want now to go to the core of the trouble-restitution."

McGowan believes that restorative action ridding the farmer of economic worries is necessary today. He quotes from the Bible citing passages wherein Nehemiah, commending the lenders to leave their lands and homes, and vineyards, and olive groves and the hundredth part of money spent for corn, wine and oil.

"If the 5 per cent who control the wealth could see fit to make restitution, restoring to the people their lands and homes, all people would have plenty," McGowan said.

Shepherdess Favors Her Hills to City

EUREKA SPRINGS, Ark.—"Dot" Crews, shepherdess of northwest Arkansas, has "forever renounced" the city for the haunts of her native hills, and has accepted an active partnership with her father, Tom Crews, successful farmer and stockman, residing near here.

Miss Crews several years ago took a business course and decided to quit rural life. But after a month, in which she served as a stenographer in a business office, she became convinced the country offered greater possibilities.

When she received a letter from her father proposing that if she would come home and take care of his flock of sheep, he would give her half of the twin lambs in the future, and two thoroughbred heifers and a pig, she came quickly. That was three years ago. She is a good business manager and keeps books for herself and father. "Dot" believes the farmers of the mountainous section are making a big mistake by not raising more sheep and goats.

Lumberman Saved Self With His Ax

ASTORIA, Ore.—Rumors wandered in from Nehalem, Ore., to the effect that Leonard Wallulis, champion ax man of the northwest had shaved himself with a double-bitted ax. Local tonsorialists disbelieved the feat.

So, Wallulis, strange and Paul-Emyant-like though it may seem, came here, and before a host of barbers, proceeded to navigate a five-pound ax over his face, cutting out a handsome growth of beard en route.

His wife proudly avowed the "oversize-razor" maintained that "skin you love to touch" appearance.

Adventurer Started On Wheat Race

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—Sea fever has taken a 22-year-old Milwaukee adventurer on his second voyage in the famous Australia to England wheat race aboard a windjammer.

The youth, Charles Reilly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Uihlein, so-called prominent Milwaukeeans, signed articles aboard the Finnish bark Viking for the third time. After a summer at home, he rejoined the crew of the Viking, a 4,000-ton square rigger, at Copenhagen, Denmark, and sailed for Adelaide, Australia. This year 19 windjammers are entered in the race.

Last year Reilly spent 128 days at sea aboard the Viking on a voyage from Sydney to Queenstown. The windjammer did not sight land all the way, he reported. During the wheat race last year, Reilly reported, the Viking was blown 6,000 miles off her course and was forced to heave to for two weeks while a storm raged, in the "roaring forties."

Cripple Ended Freight Train Trip

FORT WORTH.—The freight train trip of George Adams, 19-year-old cripple of Ardmore, Ok., ended here when he and his wheelchair were carried to the office of Juvenile officers.

He explained he was enroute to Lubbock, Tex., to secure work as a radio entertainer playing the harmonica. Police dissuaded him. He was returned to Ardmore with two companions to lift the wheelchair and its burden on and off trains.

Tree-in-the-Rock Protected By State

CHEYENNE, Wyo.—Wyoming's famous "Tree-in-the-Rock" is as cherished and protected today as it was in pioneer times when it guided the plodding caravans to the new west.

For 80 years at least it has stood a lone sentinel near Sherman Hill surrounded only by sage brush and prairie grass. It has seen the passing of the Indian. At one time it was considered sacred by two tribes of nomads, the Cheyennes and a branch of the Sioux and was protected by them.

The stage lines of pioneer days passed by it and frequently the passengers would request the coach driver to stop so they could view the only break in the monotony of the sage-brush sea.

It saw the coming of the first "Iron Horse." Although it was miles from the nearest station, the lone tree was a regular stop for the trains on the Union Pacific railroad.

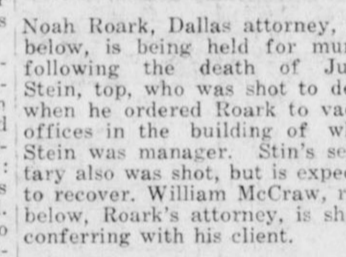

At the puffing locomotive of the early days train approached the tree its speed slackened; The engine stopped directly opposite the tree and the fireman would jump from the cab and throw a bucket of water on the tree.

A story circulates among the "old timers" that the surveyors of the original line of the Union Pacific were ordered to slightly deflect to avoid destruction of the tree and the rock in which it grows.

When the tracks of the railroad were rerouted in 1899, passing several miles south of the tree instead in the landmark failed to slacken.

Now the original roadbed of the railroad is a transcontinental highway.

In order to protect the tree from tourists' vandalism which threatened to destroy it, an iron fence has been erected around the tree and stone.

William McCraw, attorney for Noah Roark, Dallas attorney, left below, is being held for murder following the death of Justin Stein, top, who was shot to death when he ordered Roark to vacate offices in the building of which Stein was manager. Stein's secretary also was shot, but is expected to recover. William McCraw, right below, Roark's attorney, is shown conferring with his client.

V-8 Proves People Now Know Engine Details

Fact that the great majority of car owners, both men and women, are mechanical-minded, was conclusively demonstrated last week when the new Ford V-8, 112-inch wheelbase, was first placed on display in the showroom of Leveille-Maher Motor company, Ford dealer on Main street.

The new V-8 car is the fastest and most powerful car since Henry Ford's Model T. It is exceptionally flexible in its operation, giving a sustained speed of 80 miles an hour on the open road.

The secret of its power and speed lies in the improved V-8 and its new cylinder head. Because aluminum dissipates more rapidly, the all-aluminum cylinder-head permits high compression pressure results in increased power and smoothness, and acceleration and fuel economy.

The cylinder heads have chambers of improved design and are fitted with new 18-horsepower spark plugs with high resistance qualities. The high conductivity of the head material obviates the tendency to detonation or knocking, and reduces deposits.

The 90-degree crankshaft is counterbalanced and the piston connecting rod assemblies are designed to produce an exceptionally smooth operation. The engine is fitted with downward motor, air intake silencer and high type fuel pump.

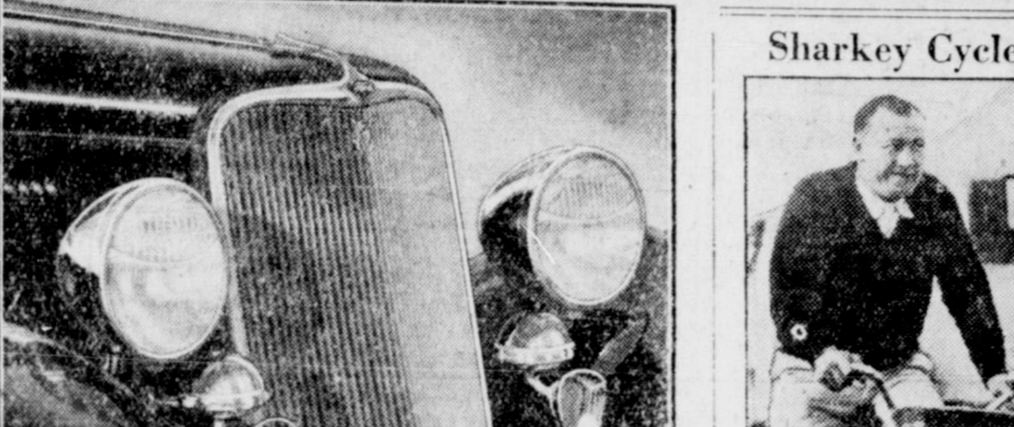

The high achievement of Ford's new V-8 is due to the fact that the two cylinder blocks are cast in a single piece, the cylinder blocks being set at an angle of 90 degrees. This provides an exceptionally high power plant. Basically the engine is similar in design to the Ford V-8 engine introduced in 1932.

The engine reaches its power at 2800 r.p.m. This point is unusually high in the speed range of the car. The car is capable of negotiating grades at high speed. The new frame is also one of the features of the car. It consists of four channel members, which form the chassis, being continued inside and out to the ends of the main rails, thus providing a structure of great rigidity. Where the wheels are brought together, they are joined by a semi-circular member on which the rear of the power plant rests in a rubber mounting.

Another feature of the new car, although not visible to the eye, is the new three-quarter rear axle, with its straddle pinion drive. The pinion is mounted in a double taper roller bearing at the front and a roller bearing at the rear. This design permits permanent alignment of the pinion with the ring gear under all driving conditions and results in an extremely quiet axle operation.

The wheels are 17 inches in diameter and of the Ford welded spoke type. Tires are of 5.50 section. The frame is cushioned by transverse cantilever springs. The shock absorbers which are automatically thermostatically controlled for every condition in weather or road surface.

HOOKY AND SLIDES Henry L. Farrell

The Last Laugh THE setting would be perfect for one of those last laugh episodes—and an ironic and mocking laugh at that—at the expense of Bill Tilden, if it were not for Mr. Tilden himself.

When the U. S. L. T. A. finally announced the other day that, after all these years, its august self would sanction an open tennis championship, in which amateurs would meet the pros, as in golf, it appeared that the laugh was on Big Bill. For only the other day in Chicago, Tilden mournfully declared himself out of the picture.

Bill Tilden was 40 years old Feb. 10. It seems a pretty good age at which to retire from such a back-breaking sport as tennis. Tilden has seen all there is to see, has won everything there is to win in tennis.

Quit Now? BUT when the amateurs and pros gathered at the Germantown Cricket Club in Philadelphia in summer, don't be too sure that Bill will not be there. His sudden appearance would be altogether in keeping with his life, a career of surprises.

Big Bill might say to himself: "Why, those lads are still mad at me. They wait until I have announced my retirement and then they decide to have an open championship. Maybe he's let's see now who really will have the last laugh. I feel great. I'll play, I'll fool them."

Did that mean anything to Bill Tilden, many times the champion, and the man who has done more than the U. S. L. T. A. to build up the game in the United States throughout the last decade? It did not. Big Bill usually sat and wrote whatever he pleased, and they had to like it, because Tilden for ever so many years was all there was in tennis—and don't be too sure when the date for that open rolls around that he isn't in there yet, taking his cut.

Hated and Applauded TILDEN has been as great a champion at his own game as Dempsey at fighting, Jones at golf, Grainger at football—yes, even Babe Ruth at baseball. There were times in his career when the public hated him for snobby showmanship that seemed to be carried too far. But there were more frequent occasions when the world applauded him for his defiance of the very peculiar by-laws of the U. S. L. T. A.

He quit the Davis Cup team cold in 1924 when the committee questioned his status as an amateur because of his writings. One year he rowed with the august U. S. L. T. A. reached such proportions that the ambassador to France had to step in to insure the presence of Tilden in the Paris finals.

If his galleries did not sympathize with him, he insulted them, too. For that reason he has had not so much of hero worship as Ruth or Dempsey. But Tilden never needed it.

He loafed on the courts in important matches whenever he felt like it, playing just as little as he could until the issue became important. When he had to turn on the steam he did—and won. He may be ready and willing to turn on the steam again at Germantown—and if he does—well, 40 is not so many years after all.

Sharkey Cycles

The heavyweight champion of the world, Jack Sharkey, is having the time of his life on a vacation in Bermuda. Above you see the champ as he pedaled his trusty bicycle around his Coral Beach cottage in the sunny south. He is expected to return soon and commence training for a title fight sometime this summer.

Jim Corbett Loses His Last Fight

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett, who did more to elevate the standards of the prize ring than any other fighter, who died at his home at Bayside, Long Island, Saturday, after an illness of more than two weeks.

"Gentleman Jim" Corbett Loses Fight

and, having set himself an ideal, tried to live up to it. He was a new type of champion. In 1894, Corbett appeared as an actor in "Gentleman Jim," at the Drury Lane theatre, in London.

Corbett "bicycled" during the early rounds of that fight—the forerunner of Gene Tunney's great act with Dempsey in Chicago, years later. Yet, in the third round Corbett had succeeded, with five fives, in breaking the bigger man's nose.

In the 21st round, with Sullivan badly worried, Corbett followed home a left hook with a smacking hard right to the jaw, and an ex-world's champion rolled on the floor. The betting had been five to one against Corbett.

That night, while his friends were celebrating with champagne, Corbett drank milk, and a new legend was established. "He drinks milk because he wants to set an example to boys," the amazed sporting world learned.

For five years Corbett reigned as undisputed champion, and continued to build up the "Gentleman Jim" reputation that was his wholesome pride, he dressed well—like the banker he might have become. He strove for an appearance of culture and refinement.

They say "the sun shines on all men with impartial light," but don't expect it to the fellow who lives on the south side of the street while he's shoveling snow off his sidewalk.

HERE--- AND THERE

By ELVIE H. JACKSON

The wisdom of the Almighty never have been more than when he ordained six that thou labor and one day... Americans rush along so seldom, and think so... when Sunday comes we too tired to think, and only the one day of days, which within our souls is really truly ours in which to loaf, not any fear of that All-Seeing, who would not accuse us of duty, or honesty of... if we follow his mandate observe this one time set aside this purpose for the entire... when the wonder comes of that Leveller, that command of all peoples, And Christ a great and the greatest leveler of conditions of any man that lived... discrimination as to whom seventh day shall apply. No thought if in or can be afforded, if it should not be afforded, No just the straight command to king and peasant, "This Shalt Thou Rest."... the cleavage of the six work and the one rest day is no distinct than that separation right and wrong... are either right about a or we are wrong about a or we can never take the of having six days of doing, that can be balanced by one day of right doing... is strange too that harmony asked out in seven full notes; the week works out in seven. We have been told by poets that the system changes every seven years. However that be, the Sabbath day is upon and as Ellen Gates once sang: "May! Do not tell me that God will not hear me; He is high over all; I know just as well that he always is near me and never forgets me at all."... never forgets, not through whole days, nor the seventh, is His and ours.

SPOTLIGHT

Sheila Shayne, dancer, refuses to marry Dick Stanley, son of wealthy parents, who is in New York trying to learn to write plays. Sheila's idea of marriage is a cozy little home far from Broadway. Although she has spent most of her life on the stage she would be glad to leave the theater.

Sheila joins a road show company and in a small midwestern city she meets Jerry Wyman. Jerry is attentive and Sheila falls in love with him. Soon his affection seems to cool and he writes infrequently.

Sheila returns to New York and a few months later joins another road company, this time as featured principal. The show plays in Jerry's home town but Sheila sees him only once. After that she has no word from him. The tour comes to an end. Then Sheila learns that Jerry has married a girl in his home town.

She tries unsuccessfully to get a part in another play. When her money is almost gone she is hired as a model at Henri's fashionable shop. There she sees Dorothy Trevor, Dick Stanley's cousin. Dorothy invites her to lunch but Henri tells Sheila the models are not allowed to have social engagements with customers. When Sheila leaves the shop that night she finds Dorothy and Dick waiting for her. Since there seems no way to refuse without rudeness she drives away with them. They go to Dick's apartment for dinner.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIII

Dick and Sheila followed Dorothy to the curb and saw her into her car. Dorothy knew Dick wanted to talk to Sheila alone and did not press her invitation that they should come with her. After a few moments' banter Dorothy said good-night and the huge limousine disappeared silently around the corner.

Sheila watched almost wistfully. Was it fair that she and Eve and Tillie and dozens of others had to toil for every cent they owned when some girls had so much and did nothing to deserve it? Not that Sheila begrudged Dorothy Trevor her fortune. No, she did she ordinarily bewail her own fate. Tonight, however, Sheila was tired. It seemed unfair that this other girl should have everything in the world to make for happiness while Sheila herself must toil and save and sacrifice. No, it didn't seem fair.

Standing beside Dick in the quiet street, Sheila said none of these things. It was he who finally broke the silence.

"Would you like a taxi," he asked, "or shall we take the bus?" Not that Sheila hesitated. "I don't think it will be crowded at this hour. Wonderful car," Dorothy has don't you think so?" "It's marvelous," Sheila agreed. "Foreign isn't it? I've never seen one like it."

Dick told her the car bore a French trade name and was extremely expensive. The whole family thinks it's shocking the way that kid spends money," he went on. "But after all it's hers. I guess she has the right to do as she pleases with it."

They started walking slowly toward Fifth Avenue. The street was almost deserted except for a few pedestrians. Now and then a taxicab rolled past and in the distance a lumbering bus was disappearing.

"Does Dorothy have lots of money?" Sheila asked. "I know she's considered one of Henri's best customers."

Dick nodded. "Oh, yes, she has money, all right. More than she can spend. It's all in her own name, too. Her father was Warren Trevor. Maybe you've heard of him. Built up an enormous fortune on Wall street and died while he was still comparatively young. He left the entire fortune to Dorothy."

"She doesn't seem a bit of a snob, mused Sheila.

"Oh, she's not," Dick spoke loyally. His cousin, for all their playful quarreling during the evening, occupied a warm spot in his heart. "She isn't in the least bit snobbish. Why should she be? She's always had money and doesn't think anything about it. Dorothy's a little thoroughbred."

"Well, I like her," Sheila agreed. "She's different from anyone I've ever met and I like the way she does things. She's pretty, too. Money hasn't spoiled her."

They boarded a bus and presently were skirting the north boundary of Central Park. The little pond on which sailors continue their aquatic propensities back at them. Here and there a tiny rowboat rocked on the rippling water.

They reached Riverside Drive, the great bus lumbering on and roaring as it went. Jersey lay girdled with lights across the stretch of the Hudson.

"I like your river better than this one," Sheila said impulsively. The silence had grown tense. Dick seemed to be on the verge of some sort of declaration and Sheila was afraid to hear it.

"My river? Thank you. I like it better, too."

The bus clattered into upper Broadway. Cruising taxis, a straggling couple or two were the only signs of life here. The bus dipped into the hollow of 157th street, rose again with the Heights and halted with a jerk in the 170's. Sheila rose and clambered down the steps, followed by Dick.

They walked down the street toward the apartment building where the Sampers made their home.

"What are you planning to do this fall?" Dick asked carelessly. "Will you go on the road again?"

Now they were on the doorstep of the building. "I don't know," Sheila hesitated. "I may. The job at Henri's is temporary, of course. Trevor got it for me, by the way, in case you didn't guess it. It's seasonal work, though, and Henri won't need me very long. I hope I get a part in a show soon."

"Do you still dislike the idea of playing on Broadway?" asked Dick without meeting the girl's eyes.

Sheila glanced away hastily. "I don't know. Beggers can't be choosers, I mean," she went on quickly, "that show business is like everything else. It's in a bad way now. Everybody has to take what they can get and I'll have to do the same."

"There's always Mandrake," Dick suggested thoughtfully.

"I doubt if he'd give me anything now."

Sheila's voice was lifeless and Dick did not pursue the subject further. He had not seen Mandrake for weeks. Perhaps it was true that the producer's interest in Sheila had waned. She had declined to appear on Broadway in a part other talented dancers would have clamored for. Mandrake might have decided to waste no further thought on her, considering her too temperamental. Still there was a chance that something could be done. Dick decided privately to call on Mandrake casually some day soon and find out. It could do no harm and it might help Sheila.

"If Mandrake had a god part I think he'd give it to Frances Barton," the girl added.

"But she's not such a wonderful dancer."

"She's very good, Dick, as a matter of fact. And she's built up asked sympathetically.

"No. Go to sleep like a good child!"

But Sheila herself did not sleep for a long while. She snapped out the light and then lay still and wide awake. She was thinking of Dick, no longer the attentive, pleading sweetheart but a pal, a friend. He had talked to her exactly as he might have to any of a dozen girls. Asked about her work and showed friendly interest. Now that Dick was apparently out of reach he seemed much more attractive.

Was it possible that she could be falling in love with him? With Dick? Was it possible that she had been mistaken in her devotion to Jerry?

All that Sheila was sure of was that she was very tired and miserably unhappy.

She arrived at Henri's promptly next morning. The day moved much as the one before it except that it was easier because she knew what to expect. True to her word, Dorothy Trevor arrived in the afternoon and ordered several frocks. She must have said something to Henri about Sheila because he drew Sheila aside just before the end of the day and said quietly, "This once I shall close my eyes to the fact that last night I saw you drive away with Miss Trevor. Oh, yes, I saw you! See that you don't do it again, however!"

For less than the price of ONE EGG

You can cook an entire meal with Natural Gas

With the exception of water and condiments, natural gas is probably the cheapest item that enters into the preparation of any meal. Statistics, based on average consumptions, show that it costs the average Ranger family only ONE-THIRD OF A PENNY per person per meal to cook the natural gas way. At 15 cents per dozen, the cost of ONE EGG will more than cover the fuel expense for cooking an entire meal for a family of three.

No other fuel is as convenient and economical as natural gas for cooking. Use it freely but don't waste it.

WASHINGTON.—The National Association of Broadcasters is in for more trouble. It faces a suit which the Columbia and Brunswick Phonograph companies are said to be preparing to defend their property rights in records which they sell.

Report of the impending suit has thrown the broadcasters into consternation. They charge the Music Publishers' Protective association with having inspired the makers of the records to place the "Not Licensed for Broadcasting" on their products.

The next director of the budget will be Walker D. Hines of Chicago, wartime director general of railroads when they were under federal control. That is the report here.

Jack Garner's oft-repeated assertion that contributors to the Republican war chest were favored recipients of tax refunds during Andy Mellon's Hamiltonian administration of the Treasury Department is being recalled. It seems that a tax refund of $45,000 and an abatement of $5,870.

000 to the estate of Secretary Miess' father has set some of the boys down here thinking. Ogden as the executor claimed, after lapse of more than a year, that he had overestimated the value of the estate, and his department found that he was way off schedule.

Interviewed by trans-Atlantic telephone from London, Henry Ford was quoted in an English paper as saying that certain competitors and bankers were responsible for the strike which tied up operations in his plants. This seemed to coincide with the representations of a labor leader that Wall Street has a financial stranglehold through interlocking directorates on certain American industries.

Tom Miller, wheelhorse of the Harding administration, who was promoted from the job of alien property custodian to a berth at Atlanta Penitentiary, has been pardoned and restored to full citizenship by President Hoover.

Now Mr. Roosevelt knows how it feels to have a bunch of Senators treading on his tail. Ambassador Lindsay's visit at Warm Springs was all that was needed to set off the fireworks.

The slash in the Prohibition appropriation bill remains despite objection to continued use of records for broadcasting is made in behalf of artists as well as the companies.

The vote on roll call was 174 to 105—110 Democrats, 63 Republicans and one Farmer-Labor voting against snooping and 62 Democrats and 103 Republicans voting to retain paid informers. It looks now as if Prohibition is to be used again as a political football by the Republicans after the Democratic kickoff on March 4.

"The advertiser doesn't mind paying a fair price for talent, but he wants the talent to receive it and objects to having it split up six different ways to support a lot of radio hangers-on who do nothing to earn the money. If the boosting of salaries doesn't cease, the advertisers will lose faith in those who control the broadcasting business."
