OIL OUTPUT OF THE NATION SHOWS GROWTH

TULSA, Okla., May 2.—The largest increase in crude oil production in the history of the petroleum industry was marked up last week when flood gates of the huge East Texas field were thrown open, the Oil and Gas Journal reported today.

Total national production was up 510,557 barrels to 2,515,320 barrels daily.

An increase of 498,020 barrels daily in the East Texas field accounted for most of the national increase. Daily production in other Texas pools changed little. West Texas produced 157,862, North Central Texas 75,247, and the Texas Panhandle 48,335.

Bankers Invited To WTCC Meet At Big Spring

BIG SPRING, May 2.—West Texas bankers are being sent special invitations to attend the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention here May 11, 12 and 13.

The three banks of Big Spring—the West Texas National, the First National, and the State National, are each extending a special invitation by letter to all the bankers in West Texas urging them to come to Big Spring to the convention.

Bankers will be especially interested in the address of J. E. Woods, president of the Teague National bank, who will address the convention on Saturday morning on the subject, "The Postal Savings Menace." Woods' address before the Texas Bankers association on the same subject recently attracted state-wide attention and comment. The West Texas Chamber of Commerce is on record favoring the restriction of postal savings deposits and has asked Woods to deliver practically the same address at Big Spring.

B. Reagan, president of the West Texas National bank; R. L. Price, active vice president of the First National, and T. S. Currie, active vice president of the State National extended the invitations to the bankers. In addition to calling attention to the Wood speech, they outlined the purposes of the two group conference programs and urged bankers to attend them—that on public works and emergency relief and the other on public expenditure.

TEST VOTING IS INDICATION OF ITS DEFEAT

Governor Offers To Share Her Appointive Powers If Measure Passes.

AUSTIN, May 2.—Fate of the house bill to create a new oil governing body today rested in a committee of the whole of the senate, which began a hearing on the bill this afternoon.

Test votes in the senate indicated sufficient strength to kill it despite the support given in a message by the governor.

The bill provides for an elective oil and gas supervisory body and the immediate ousting of the Railroad Commission from that function. It would give the governor power to appoint a temporary body to serve until the next general election.

The governor offered to share that appointive power with the speaker of the house and the lieutenant governor.

Opponents of the bill, however, appeared certain the measure would be killed.

The governor also asked that the Railroad Commission reduce the 7505,000 barrel daily East Texas allowable and declared the commission's order was responsible for 10 cents a barrel oil.

The commission answered "with all due respect to her excellency, the Governor of Texas, we are constrained to suggest that she has evidently been grossly misinformed and apparently by the same group who, in the past, concealed the true facts from this commission and attempted to put over federal control at the recent oil conference in Washington."

Wets Lose Two Votes In House

AUSTIN, May 2.—Wets lost two votes in the Texas house of representatives here today.

A second effort by Representative Weaver Moore of Houston to get the house to submit repeal of state constitutional prohibition, failed to win the necessary 100 votes.

A proposal to change the date of the state's referendum of repeal of national prohibition from November, 1934, to Aug. 26, 1933, was defeated 69 to 55. Two-thirds majority is required.

Texas House To Hear Arguments In Roeser Case

AUSTIN, May 2.—The Texas house will hear arguments tonight on its right to try three prominent Texas oil men on charges of contempt as the result of a fight between Charles F. Roeser of Fort Worth and Representative Gordon Burns of Huntsville.

All have pleaded not guilty. Speaker Coke Stevenson will rule on the question of whether the house has the power to try the case. If he rules the house has the power, testimony is to begin Wednesday night.

R. F. C. FUNDS MUST BE SUPPLEMENTED BY THE STATE

A news story from Austin indicates that there may be some delay in getting the Texas apportionment of the R. F. C. funds for May and June. And there is a possibility that the funds might be held up altogether.

The R. F. C. does not demand such a bond issue and, so far as we know, does not even suggest it, but that organization does demand that the state supplement the funds provided by the national government.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS AT OUR DOOR

Eastland "did itself proud" with the Trades Day Monday. The largest crowd seen here in many months witnessed the wire walking stunt, the various performances at the rodeo and the other events provided for on the program.

The promoters of this gala day are elated over the result of their efforts. The business leaders of Eastland should begin now to plan for this event on the next first Monday.

DARLING FOOL

by MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

MONNIE OPDARE, 20 and beautiful, helps to support her young brother and sister by working in a drugstore. Monnie is in love with DAN CARHIGAN, rich and handsome, but he seems to neglect her for SANDRA LAWRENCE, a member of his own set.

HETTY, Sandra's maid, suspects her of "stealing" JIMMY, the chauffeur. CHARLES EUSTACE, new in town, is kind to Monnie and Kay, her younger sister. Kay makes a "pick-up" acquaintance with CHESTER BIGELOW, traveling man, who flatters her, telling her she ought to be in New York.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

CHARLES said "Hot!" and smiled. He wore no hat and the pallor of his skin was a thing Monnie noted subconsciously. Unlike Dan, who wore his sunburn with a swagger, Eustace never tanned but bore always, in spite of hatless horseback riding and mornings at golf, a kind of tropic indolence which suited him well. He wore, just now, the most elegant of careless white flannels and a blue coat.

"You look awfully cool," he said to the girl sitting on the low step, in the shadow of the honey-suckle vine.

Monnie scarcely stirred. She felt the smile with which she answered him to be a prodigious effort. There seemed to be no life in her at all these days. Tonight after a cold supper and after a shower she had slipped into one of her oldest party frocks—a blue lace of two seasons ago, unsuitable she felt for anything but the warmest night in Belvedere. She had not expected visitors but here, on her very doorstep, was the most elegant young man in town! She said with an effort, "Thanks. I don't feel at all cool."

She glanced up at him in the half dark, one flushed cheek resting on a slim, long-fingered hand, her breath coming and going quickly beneath the folds of soft lace. The bodice was cut rather low and the creamy skin of her neck and bosom glimmered above it. Her eyes, shadowed with weariness and heat, looked big and dark under their fringe of heavy lashes.

She asked him to sit down. He made a gesture toward the gate in the shadows outside the car and said slowly, "I'd thought perhaps you'd come for a drive—out where it's cool."

"Mother and Mark have gone to a strawberry festival," Monnie said with apparent irrelevance. "And Kay—Kay's over at Rissy's. I wonder if I ought—"

"We'll be back in an hour," Charles said. "Why not?"

She debated this. She had refused to go to the festival. She had said she was too tired but the real reason was her desire to avoid people. Prying people who would ask questions. About Dan. About everything.

With this man it was different. She could be easy with him. He was—well, a friend! She felt that. Splendid in his way, of course, but not, Monnie thought, the type to stir her pulses.

As he held out his hand to assist her, she gave him her own. A child's clasp, Charles Eustace felt, half piqued and half amused.

Believe I will, Monnie murmured softly. "If you'll excuse this—this ridiculous costume."

He gave her a mocking bow, practiced eyes taking in every detail of her appearance. The lace had been apparently cut to show every exquisite line of the girl's figure.

"It's a lovely dress," he told her. Monnie widened her eyes at his tone. There was something not quite cordial about it. Did he think she was fishing for compliments?

She reddened to the roots of her hair and in that instant Charles Eustace regretted his discourtesy. Used as he was to the finished wiles of more sophisticated women, he had carelessly bulked this young girl for the crowd.

"I'm sorry," he said awkwardly. "I really mean it. It is a lovely dress—"

"Of course, it is old," Monnie faltered, hurt by she knew not what. "It's a party dress, too, and unsuitable—but I was so hot—I had nothing else so cool—I didn't expect anyone—"

She hated herself for it, but suddenly she was in tears.

"Do forgive me, I'm an idiot—but I seem to be all tired out and we were so busy today at the store—"

A big clean handkerchief was pressed into her hands. She straightened herself, mopping at the persistent tears, trying to smile again. But it had not been just that. Both she and the man knew that his tone was the lash which had cut her deeply. Charles Eustace said, slowly, "Monnie, you do know I'm your friend, don't you?"

She stared at him. "I hope so. Of course!"

He flicked at the bushes beside him with a willow switch he had picked up.

"It's only—only that I get into one of my bad moods now and again and say things I don't mean. I did mean your frock was lovely. But some devil of sarcasm put that edge on my voice. I don't know why. Or yes, I do, I'm used to the sort of woman who invites comment on her attire. I thought, for an instant, that was what you were doing. I ask your pardon—"

"But even if I had," Monnie began, puzzled. "It's no crime, surely, to want compliments!"

He laughed on an uncomfortable note.

"Of course not, Monnie, you don't know anything about me. I've been through some bad times. Some day perhaps I'll bore you by telling you about them."

"It wouldn't bore me in the least," the girl told him demurely. Her tears had dried now. The little flare up had only served to heighten her color.

"Wait just a minute. I'll get a scarf for my hair," she said, going back into the darkened house. She paused to scribble a line for her mother and in that instant the telephone rang stridently. Her instant thought, as always, waking and sleeping, was "Don't! She put one hand to her breast with an unconsciously dramatic gesture and called out to the man in the shadows, "I'll answer that. Hope you don't mind waiting."

LIFTING the receiver, she was conscious of an almost unbearable feeling of tension. But

It was not Dan's deep voice that came to her over the wire.

"Oh, Miss Anstice. Yes. How are you?"

She put cordiality into her tone. Miss Anstice was an old family friend.

Charles Eustace, lounging against the pillar outside, heard a note of alarm in the quick, terse words that followed.

"What? Yes—yes. Please tell me. Outside Miller's garage just five minutes ago? There must be some mistake. She's at Rissy's! Thank you. I know you won't. Yes, I'll do something about it—at once—good-by—"

All the color now drained from her cheeks, she returned to Charles Eustace.

"Something terrible—I don't know what to do!"

He put out a brown, lean hand, touching hers. "Tell me, I'll help you."

Eyes big and dark and unseeing, she stared at him.

"It's Kay. She's gone—with some man. Miss Anstice happened to see them. She's not a gossip. She's a real friend. They had bags, she said. The man was asking the best way to Waynesboro."

"Good Lord!" Charles said. "Jump in. I know that road well. We can catch up with them."

Binding the scarf she had picked up from the hall table about her head with stumbling fingers, Monnie obeyed. The scents and sound of a June night received them, as the motor purred and the powerful little car plunged down Denny street. Everywhere—everywhere were little groups on porch and lawn. Lights in little houses. Laughter. The music of a radio. Monnie thought, blindly, "Little Kay, Little Kay. I've got to save her."

"Miss Anstice didn't happen to mention what sort of car it was, did she?" inquired Charles, expertly swerving to avoid a boy on a bicycle.

"No, she—she—" Monnie's teeth were chattering now, as if with cold. "I'm so frightened," she interpolated. "What if I never can face Mother?"

The calm voice of the man in the driver's seat came to her. "We'll find her," he said. "Don't you worry!"

AHEAD, miles ahead, on the country road, Bigelow grinned down at the girl beside him.

"Cooler now, baby? That sure is a hot burg you live in."

Kay said, "Yes, lots cooler." She cast an apprehensive glance back over her shoulder. "Sure nobody saw me when you stopped for gas?"

He had a big, booming laugh—empty, meaningless. He employed it now.

"Baby, don't think about that old burg any more. You've shaken the dust from your shoes. You're slated for big times."

He slipped an arm around her shoulders. Kay shrank from it. "Hidin' you better watch the road!"

The laugh boomed again. "Don't like one-armed drivers, do you, baby?"

Kay grimaced to herself in the darkness. She'd been a fool to come, she told herself, but she was no quitter. She'd burned her boats. She'd have to keep on going.

WASHINGTON.—Granting of a permanent injunction by Federal Judge James D. Elliott in Sioux Falls, S. D., to the Associated Press against the unauthorized broadcasting of its news dispatches by Station KSOO has thrown the National Association of Broadcasters into a panic. Why N A B should have expected any other decision, it is difficult to understand. Judge Elliott's course was guided by precedents clearly establishing the right of a news association to the exclusive use for 24 hours of news which it has gathered at great cooperative expense from all parts of the world.

"Broadcasting," a radio trade paper whose editor, Martin Codel, is the chief journalistic spokesman for the radio industry, thinks that organization by the radio stations is in the offing. "If radio enters seriously into the news-gathering field," he says, "its transmission speed of 186,000 miles per second—the speed of light—could not possibly be equaled by any other service. In other words radio would bring news from the microphone to the listeners' ears far faster than any press service could carry from the printing press to the readers' eyes."

Mr. Codel seems to forget that radio licenses are issued by the government to the owners of broadcasting stations; that these licenses have no vested rights in such licenses, and that the "keen competition" which the radio is expected to give the legitimate news-gathering service will not be aided by the government at the expense of newspaper publishers. The public, moreover, will have something to say; for if radio news broadcasting in future is no more occult than it was at the time of the recent earthquake in California, when the broadcasters ran amuck and gave voice to the wildest rumors, the dependability of its reports will always be questioned.

Talk by the broadcasters of establishing their own news-gathering agency to compete with the old, reliable, long-established news associations is not taken seriously here. It is regarded as a characteristic threat indulged in by the broadcasters whenever they cannot have their own way. Only last week they hurled a similar threat at the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers by organizing "The Radio Program Foundation," and announcing that they were applying for corporate papers and publishing contracts for the purposes of the National Association of Broadcasters' "Radio Program Foundation," according to the announcement, is "to make available to broadcasters the copyrighted works of independent composers and publishers who are practically barred from the air by present A B C A P contracts."

The "Foundation," which is a brain-child of Oswald F. Schuette, who was fighting the radio monopoly until the broadcasters hired him, sets forth in its incorporation petition that another of its aims is "to encourage and promote the use of radio broadcasting for educational purposes." This professed aim is rather amusing, in view of the fact that commercial stations have been gradually pushing educational stations of colleges and universities off the air, and have been fighting the National Educational Association's demand that 15 per cent of the air channels be set aside for educational and cultural programs. But the Radio Program Foundation doesn't stop there. It proposes to "sponsor and acquire deserving productions of composers and authors, to acquire copyrights therein," etc.,—and all for the purpose, as anyone can see, of fighting composers and authors who have been insisting that they be paid a fair sum for the use of their copyrighted material.

Survey Ordered In Effort to Save Hay

VICTORVILLE, Calif.—In an effort to save the 6,000 acres of alfalfa in the Victorville region from possible infection by weevil, County Commissioner John P. McCoy has ordered a complete survey.

The destructive weevil exists in some counties of Nevada, Utah, Colorado and Oregon. Several California counties bordering Nevada are reported to be suffering from the weevil, although San Bernardino county has escaped so far, despite the fact it has a considerable frontage on the Nevada state line.

No means has been found for exterminating the weevil, but although it may be controlled to some extent by arsenical sprays,

Tokio Police Get Radio Patrol Cars

TOKIO.—Five radio police cars will be put into service by the metropolitan police bureau here, beginning this summer.

It is declared that the tests so far conducted by the technicians for the transmission and the reception of radio signals on medium wave lengths, have been very successful.

Communications between the key station and the police radio cars, will be in code. The wave length will be higher than the ordinary broadcast wave of Japanese stations so that reception by those not connected with the police authorities will be difficult.

PARIS STYLES

By MARY KNIGHT
United Press Staff Correspondent
PARIS.—What about that talk of low to lower mid-circumferences? Well, we can tell you something about it after the Schiaparelli manner of manipulation.
Beneath each arm there starts a narrow fold of material that is crossed in front, widens and ends at the back, after passing through two loops at the end of the decolletage, tying in a gather of folds that remains one of the Japanese.

Lady Patricia Moore, only daughter of Kathleen Lady Drogheda, decided she needed an evening dress and, after deliberation, decided on one with that "Premiere Emoire" inspiration. It was made of Shanghai red silk canvas with a high cowl-shaped neckline in front and a deep U-shaped decolletage at the back. The waistline is of the type mentioned above and the skirt is slim, but not clinging, and widens considerably, being almost full at the hem, through the heaviness of the material that falls in long, graceful lines.

First fighting breaks out in a big way between Washington and New York baseball teams. Oh, well, it proved impossible to have any fighting in the ring; might as well have a little on the diamond.

Late Train Gained World New Dish

By United Press
SAINT GERMAIN EN LAYE. This suburb of Paris, once the hot spot of kings, will celebrate the centenary of "pommes souffles" in 1937.

This centenary coincides with that of France's first railroad, which still joins Paris with St. Germain. Indeed, the first train in 1827 was late, and because of this tardiness, that delicious gastronomic creation—"pommes souffles"—was given to the world.
Parliament did not authorize Louis-Philippe, the "citizen-king," to ride on this first railroad train in France, for fear of accidents, and so he proceeded to Saint Germain by coach. He was there to welcome the train, with its royal and distinguished passengers, also to attend the banquet prepared by Colinet, the great chef, given in the Pavillon Henri IV.

Louis-Philippe, it seems, was a great lover of what is known as French fried potatoes, and Colinet had prepared them with care. But, alas! the train was late, and Colinet feared that his potatoes would dry up and become hard. So, he took them off the fire, while awaiting the arrival of the king.
When his majesty was announced, Colinet put the potatoes back into butter upon the fire, and presto! a miracle was performed. The crust dilated and expanded and then turned golden. Entirely by accident, Colinet had become the inventor of "pommes de terre souffles" now served the world over.

THE cheapness of carrots puts within the reach of every family those food elements which are essential to growth, health and vigor. Strong muscles, red blood, sound teeth, firm flesh, straight bones, glossy hair and clear skin are the result when vitamins and minerals are present in the diet. And since carrots contribute vitamins and minerals so generously, we've been told to eat carrots "for beauty."

Next to onions, carrots are the most efficient blood-purifiers. They rank next to spinach in iron content. Two reasons for clear complexion and sparkling eyes! Vitamin A is found in carrots. This puts carrots in the list of foods with cod liver oil, butter fat, egg yolk and the leaves of green vegetables.

Best Eaten Raw
To gain the most benefit from the vegetable as a beautifier, it should be eaten raw. Then there is no loss of vitamins B and C. Both these vitamins are somewhat affected by cooking and there is apt to be loss of minerals. At this time of year carrots are at their best, tender and sweet, so use them "au naturel" in every way possible.

Carrot straws add a pleasant contrast of color to a tray of relishes. Grated raw carrot is good in any vegetable salad and some trail salads. Rings of carrots filled with highly seasoned cream cheese make attractive and inexpensive appetizers.
There is very little loss of food

TROOPS RULE IOWA FARM WAR FRONT AFTER JUDGE IS BEATEN

Rioting Iowa farmers, fighting foreclosures, are pictured here in one of the acts of violence that resulted in martial law for two counties. After halting a foreclosure sale at Primghar, the farmers forced the sheriff's deputies and an attorney to kiss the American flag on the lawn of the courthouse. The same mob is suspected in the abduction and mistreating of Judge C. C. Bradley at Le Mars.

Italy Is Winning A Long Fight Malaria F

By United Press
ROME.—Deaths from malaria were reduced from 2,389 in 1932 to 2,000 in 1933, a recent report has announced.
During the 10 years of fascist regime the death rate disease has decreased 33%. The malarial fight is though nearing the end, though authorities are inclined to be cautious in estimating the victory. It appears, however, that malaria will be beaten returning.
A bill has been of chamber for the "co-ordinating unification of the laws and regulations in force in Italy campaign against malaria, expected that when the law this law have had time to and when the numerous information schemes have been that malaria will be beaten than a memory.
A system of inspection of chamber officials has been for some time now in districts, whereby the houses and workers are examined if they are provided with regulation netting at windows chimneys to prevent the trace of the anopheles toes.
