A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE FATHERLESS: A father of the fatherless, and a judge of the widows, is God in His holy habitation. —Psalm 68: 5.

REFORESTATION PRO AND CON

President Roosevelt's reforestation project is being viewed with a degree of disapproval from two sources. Organized labor, on the one hand complains at the low wage of a dollar a day. The objection is that it cuts below the minimum of the organization schedule and would have a tendency to make their rates harder to maintain.

Another feature of the project is that the recruiting is proving much slower than the administration anticipated. The first 25,000 for these civilian reforestation camps was assigned to several of the larger cities, but nowhere was there a stampede to get into the service.

Nevertheless, there is a ray of encouragement coming from the camps that have been established long enough to ascertain results. The young men have shown marked increase in weight, improvement in health and appearance, and more than corresponding improvement of morale.

HIGH POINTS OF HOME MORTGAGE LAW

Texas lawmakers enacted and sent to the governor a bill to give relief to "financially disabled property owners in danger of being dispossessed through mortgage foreclosure proceedings."

These are the outstanding provisions: District courts would be empowered under the bill to postpone executions of mortgage foreclosures on affidavits of property owners that "sale of the property at this time would not bring its fair market value."

Moreover property owners would be required to plead that the property would sell for less than its reasonable value; that no fraud was involved in the transaction; that foreclosures would result in unjust financial injury and that the property as not being mismanaged or wasted.

BANK OF ENGLAND PILING UP GOLD RESERVES

John Bull always blunders through. John always plays the game for his own country. John slipped off the gold standard. Before the gold slipping he changed from a free trader to a protective tariff ultra.

In looking over some old pictures shown me by James E. Barrett, managing director of the Oklahoma Biltmore Hotel, it seems that in the days of long ago men wore an entire set of face moss which required being primed back at least once a week.

DARLING FOOL

... by MABEL McELLIOTT. BEGIN HERE TODAY. MONNIE O'DARE who loves DAN CARDHAN, rich and handsome, discovers her friend, SANDRA LAWRENCE, is trying to win him from her. CHARLES EUSTACE, a newcomer in town, pays a good deal of attention to Monnie and helps her when her brother, BILL, gets into difficulties. Bill plans to marry ANGIE GILLEN, who works in a candy shop, as soon as she gets her divorce. BETTY, housemaid at the Lawrence home, dislikes her mistress, suspecting her of "vamping" the handsome chauffeur, JAMES. Monnie starts out with Charles to find KAY, her younger sister, who has gone away with CHESTER BIDDLE, traveling salesman. Kay, frightened, wants to turn back from the adventure before it is too late. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIV. THE wind whipped little ripples of bronze hair into Monnie's eyes. It was as if they were flying along in the summer night. "What a wild goose chase," she said, as if to herself. Waynesboro—Miss Anstice had said that Kay was on the way to Waynesboro but wasn't it quite possible that the man had thrown that question out at the filling station merely as a decoy? Wasn't it just as reasonable that Kay was, at this moment, speeding westward instead of taking the easterly road Charles Eustace's car was traveling? Poor Kay, foolish little Kay! She ought to have known what was going on—ought to have watched her more closely. She had been, Monnie reproached herself, too utterly absorbed in her own affairs to see where Kay, in her impatience and discontent, was drifting. "It's my fault!" she broke out, rather incoherently, to the silent man beside her. "That's nonsense." His dark profile was grim in the faint light of the instrument board. "And anyhow, nothing's happened yet. We'll have her safe and sound in an hour or two." Eustace spoke with a confidence he was far from feeling. Monnie sat tense, every nerve tingling with the excitement of the chase. High Falls—a scattering of lights—and then the open road again. White arrows pointing the way at the crossroad—turn here for Waynesboro—that was all right—they had taken the right turn. Charles slowed each time they passed a car and Monnie stared eagerly, expectantly, into the faces of the occupants. The vehicles were fewer now and farther between. The main road forked at the Waynesboro turn. This was a virtual detour, rutty and narrow. It was madness—madness—the girl told herself, to thrust about in this way. What they should have done—at once—was to have given Kay's description to the local police. They had a system of radio alarm that was wonderful, she had heard. But no—no—that would mean that Kay's adventure would be broadcast to the waiting world! "I couldn't do that to her," Monnie groaned inwardly. They plunged through Newton Center, a hamlet of some half dozen scattered houses. Charles lit a cigarette without taking his eyes from the road. Monnie, straining her gaze ahead, was conscious of a sudden spurt of energy in the motor. "That car ahead," Charles told her. "I've had its tail light ever since the Falls. It's turning into a lane. Suppose we stop and take a look." "It's probably some farmer's dooryard," Monnie said despairingly. THE winking red light disappeared for an instant, reappeared again. Charles was rearing his engine now, its powerful roar muffled so that the sounds of insects of whirring crickets and croaking tree frogs could be heard. Monnie realized the car they were trailing had stopped. Before she could speak the man beside her had put on the brakes, was sliding out of the seat. "You stay here," he said in a reassuring whisper. "I'll do the talking." Monnie was trembling with nervousness now. She had to grit her teeth together to keep them from chattering. She watched Charles' tall figure striding purposefully away from her. In the car ahead she could just see the outline of two heads. A woman's, she saw. "She wanted, to call out to Charles to come back—to hurry. They must be on their way. It was folly to waste even a few minutes trailing some surly farmer who would, like as not, resent with blows their interest in him. In the blurry mist the headlights made she could see Charles dragging himself casually over the fender of the car. She could not hear what he said but presently he came back, looking rather disgusted. "Some idiot of a drunken yokel," he said disgustedly. "His wife's asleep. I couldn't get anything out of her. What luck! My horse was a rotten one." Monnie was sick with disappointment. She hadn't really expected anything of this chance clew. They were searching for a needle in a haystack, she reminded herself. She must keep up her courage. "Tell you what we'll do," Charles said in a hearty tone. "We'll push on for Waynesboro and inquire at the hotel there. If they're stopping any place tonight it will be there. It's the only decent place for miles around—" "They wouldn't—Kay wouldn't—" Monnie stammered. "Kay's going to be all right! Don't you worry about that," the quiet voice told her. The young man beside her started his engine, which purred one. "Monnie was sick with disappointment. She hadn't really expected anything of this chance clew. The young man beside her started his engine, which purred one. "Nasty place!" THE engine killed, sickeningly. Monnie felt her palms wet and her cheeks hot. This was awful—awful—they were losing precious time. In the split second of silence after the roar of the motor a girl's clear voice came to them. "I want to go back—oh, I do!" Monnie was out upon that muddy road before she knew what she

(Continued from page one) Propaganda, the foreign office reports the creation of a supreme council for propaganda for France, to draft a definite program. This supreme council would be composed of certain professors of various French faculties, parliamentarians from the Chamber and Senate committees on foreign affairs and finances and propaganda experts from various French government departments. Their chief would become a member of the cabinet as under-secretary for propaganda attached to the ministry of foreign affairs. Propaganda Affairs The report states the various measures taken by the present Minister of foreign affairs, Joseph Paul-Boncour, to bring about an intelligent reorganization of the propaganda service. Stressing urgency of the need of propaganda meeting the anti-French sentiment in the United States, the report says: "As concerns America, a thorough inquiry was made among French personalities recently returned from America. American personalities and a great many American journalists resident here. "These conversations permitted us to draw up a general plan to serve as a basis for an effort to be started in the near future, both by the development of the press services at the Quai d'Orsay and by the collaboration of an American news agency associated with the Havas Agency." Special Funds In explaining the credits of 33,000,000 francs, "special funds for French information abroad," contained in chapter 40 of the Foreign Affairs budget this report pictures the efforts of the French government to organize the distribution of French news by a government agency to newspapers of foreign countries. The report states that during 1931 and 1932, the government program was completed so far as it concerns the gathering of world news in Paris, its preparation here and eventual diffusion to South America, North Africa and the Far East. "It is to be hoped that during 1933, thanks to new means of diffusion, French news can benefit, chiefly in Europe, for a wider and more useful distribution. It will be able to attain the public opinion of the United States and in a general fashion, all the nations of North America, without passing through the foreign news correspondents. News Agency Aids "The section of the press of the Quai d'Orsay organizes and directs, in collaboration with one of our principal news agencies, this French news to foreign countries, but specially to America. The technical department assures the financial and financial control of this service. "The government intends taking a fatherly interest in the affairs of French language newspapers around the world which need help to keep going in these days of economic stress. The report states: "Newspapers like the Courier de la Plata, published in Buenos Aires; the Courier du Mexico, of Mexico City; the Etoile du Sud, of Sao Paulo, deserve to find in the Quai d'Orsay, in the reorganized press service, a regular, far-reaching and benevolent correspondent. Accomplishments Described Chapter 40 of the budget enumerates the accomplishments of Paul Boncour in reorganizing the wave of anti-French sentiment that spread through America: "ONE—Reinforcement of the service of press at the Ministry (Foreign Affairs) and providing of documents in English; "TWO—Speeding up of reading of Heart press to allow prompt replies to its attacks; "THREE—Diffusion by wireless of a series of test wireless broadcasts Sunday nights through Rugby station until French Radio-Colonial is completed; these conferences destined for the United States must be in English; "FOUR—Multiplication of invitations to American university students to study in France; "FIVE—Creation of a service for writing magazine articles for Anglo-Saxon publication; "SIX—Inauguration of work on a French House in Rockefeller Center; "SEVEN—Diffusion of a pamphlet on war-debts by M. de Maudhuy; "EIGHT—Conclusion of an accord between the Associated Press and Havas Agency; "NINE—Creation of information office in New York Consulate; "TEN—For Europe, delivery of French newspapers by airplane; "ELEVEN—Creation of photographic service for Central Europe." Homing Pigeon Is Back After 3 Years ATLANTA, Ga.—William Stoddard, prominent Atlanta dry cleaner, has reported the return of a homing pigeon that he had turned loose three years ago. Stoddard sent some pigeons to Gainesville, Fla., 300 miles from Atlanta, recently and clocked them in their return flight. When they arrived there was one extra. Stoddard thought the pigeon was a stranger, but it had a Stoddard band on its leg. The pigeon even went to the very nest it had left three years before. Stoddard believes the pigeon was caught and held in another loft. It was this and bedraggled when it arrived here. CLAIMS RECORD MT. Brownwood Breakfast Delightful Affair

Eastland guests who attended the Twentieth Century club ten o'clock breakfast in Brownwood Tuesday at the Brownwood Hotel, were Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, Mrs. W. A. Whitley and Mrs. D. J. Jobe.
Mrs. S. E. Chandler, retiring president of the hostess club, presided. The program was in her honor, and known as president's day breakfast.

The incoming president was presented. Miss Carrie Reeves, outgoing president of Sixth District, T. F. W. C., and Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, incoming president and the retiring and incoming presidents of the Twentieth Century club were the speakers.

The theme of Mrs. Perkins' address offered the contrast between early club life and that of today. There were one hundred women in attendance.

Bridge Olympic

The National Bridge Association Olympic of world wide scope on Monday night, with pairs of sixteen especially arranged hands used, was played in Eastland Monday night, under direction of the captain for this division, Mrs. James H. Cheatham Sr., at four tables arranged at the Cheatham residence.

The hands were sent from New York via bridge headquarters and released by the Western Union prior to the game.

103,000 players over the world signed up ten days ago, for this Olympic. Mrs. Cheatham will receive the pairs on the hands on May 4, by wire. Pairs which have the greatest number of pairs, will be given national and sectional titles.

Eastland players Monday night were Sam Butler, W. T. Root of Ranger, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Turner; E. E. Freyschlag, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Storey, John M. Mouser, Julius B. Krause, J. L. Cottingham, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Cheatham, Mrs. W. E. Chaney, Mrs. Curtis Hertig, Mrs. Virgil T. Seaberry, and Mrs. J. M. Armstrong.

Cabinet Meeting Of Officers

Officers of the Home Makers class of the Baptist church Sunday school held their business conference Tuesday afternoon, meeting in the church classroom, with president of the class, Mrs. William Sharriffs, conducting session.

Mrs. W. T. Morgan, first vice president; Mrs. S. D. Phillips, captain of group one; Mrs. Tom Amis, captain of group 3, gave their reports.

Mmes. Amis and Phillips presented the monthly report of the Sunday school class attendance, and record of punctuality, lessons studied and Bible read.

Report included church attendance and offerings, which showed that the average was not so good, as on previous months, due to sickness in families where many children have been ill.

The next meeting was set for the first Tuesday in June.

Mothers Club Meeting

Mrs. E. W. Barnett of the Church of God, conducted the Mothers Meeting Saturday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. Opal Ford in Oiden.

The Mothers Club song, the Mothers Motto, and the Club Prayer were given the test, as each mother was to learn these three things. The prize offered for the best memorized song was awarded Mrs. Mary Edwards, and three members tied for the motto and prayer.

At close of the meeting the hostess served refreshments of ice cream and cake to Mrs. Artie Ford, Mrs. Mary Edwards, Mrs. Rosa Le Munn, Mrs. Koons, Mrs. Berna Williamson, Mrs. Essie Perry and Mrs. W. E. Barnett.

"COMING BACK"

Eastland Telegram.
Since the unprecedented depression struck this country three years ago, the question has been asked thousands of times, can this and that city "come back." That is, can we again know the prosperity that was once ours and mingle again in friendly sociability in recognition of the "Forgotten Man," as our great President characterizes the average citizen.

On Monday, May 1, old Eastland answered for herself in the affirmative with a Trades Day. There was not of course as much money spent as at like gatherings in the past, but this was offset by an unusual amount of special features and mingling together, emphasizing the fact that the right of free speech has not been taken away.

Since here will not permit proper mention of this First Monday, but in passing the writer will say that old Eastland has gone many towns one better in showing genuine hospitality to visitors in bidding them welcome. Even her ladies extended the "gold hand." So I say: "Peace be within thy gates, and prosperity within thy palaces."

Drive Is Planned Against Fascism

MOSCOW.—The creation in all countries of a "united front" of all working class elements against the advance of fascism and for the defense of labor's interests is being pushed vigorously by the Third, of Communist International, with world headquarters here.

This policy of joint action by communists and non-communist labor organizations, recently announced by the executive committee of the Third International, received scant notice in the general press of the world. It is certain all the same, to have a profound effect on the labor struggle everywhere.

If the social-democratic party of Germany and labor organizations elsewhere accept the communist invitation to form a united front, it will mean in effect an "armistice" in the bitter struggle between communists and socialists.

Already, according to despatches published here, many conservative labor elements in many countries are responding favorably to the communist international's proposal for co-operation.

When an Orphan Meets an Orphan

Mitzi Green as Annie and Buster Phelps as Mickey in "Little Orphan Annie" RKO-Radio Picture at the Lyric theatre

Cartoon Strip Makes Big Comedy Drama

Cartoon comedy strips have inspired several noteworthy motion pictures.

Bud Fisher's "Mutt and Jeff" were early screen favorites to reach the screen. "Ella Cinders" furnished Colleen Moore with one of her best characters. "Andy Gump," "Jiggs and Maggie," the Skipper of "The Tonerville Trolley," "Mickey Mouse" Walt of "Gasoline Alley," have all appeared in the movies either in short comedies or longer features.

One of the most successful as a screen actor was Percy Crosby's Skipper, brought to life by Jackie Cooper in the motion picture of the same name.

Now Skippy's girlhood prototype, "Little Orphan Annie," is on the screen, played by the most famous child actress of the times, Mitzi Green.

"Little Orphan Annie," as a RKO-Radio Picture, is now at the Lyric Theatre, featuring May Robson and Mitzi.

Critics have pronounced the picture one of the most moving
