BEER! BEER! BEER!
about all the big newspapers been featuring for the past months in streaming headlines the breweries listen to a promoter's long tale
Now is the time to advertise beer" and fall for it they are lunch of chumps. They've had enough free advertising to put over for the next decade.
What a contrast it would have if the big papers had given this free publicity to commodities that the farmer raises...
Suppose for instance that for two months in succession that they should have put on a free campaign with front page headline meagers urging the people to buy cotton, thereby increasing the demand and giving a stimulus to the advances.
Suppose they had devoted another several month's campaign... to the many products that most produces for palatable and healthful food.
Suppose they had devoted another campaign to the excellent corn products in manufactured cereals, etc.
Suppose they had given months of free publicity to the wonderful results obtained by the use of these products.
And there are hundreds of farm products that could have been publicized during the past three years that would have really meant something.
We are sorry to admit however it was up to the manufacturers of farm products to advertise and pay for whatever product they are making... otherwise... no publicity.
The farmer's sole dependence on the meager publicity he receives through appealing headlines longer should do something for the farmer, forgetting the fact that every time congress did something to help the farmer it was putting him because the only way congress could help was to pass measures to collect the necessary help and the very help sometimes in the long run had to pay a portion of the tax to get help.
It's jumping four bits from the pocket to the other and still losing the fourths.
God made the earth, the sea, the birds, the lakes, the birds and trees—in fact everything there is in this world. He created man and placed him to rule over the rest of His making as a straw man. God never intended for congress to be created to help any one that wants more than nature intended him to have. And there is no reason on earth for people needing help by congress as a result of the fault of congress in getting into a financial jam because the farms were over mortgaged.
Imagine overproduction in the things necessary for us to exist on, such as food, and clothing, becoming a making it to the happiness of man, making it necessary to ask congress or any other medium for help. It was just a case of failing to count our blessings first. We need sight of the blessings in our need to count money... which is all so obsolete in the middle of a desert with no water and no way with it.
Our campaign for wealth, rule, superiority made us lose sight of God's wisdom in creating the world on a basis to meet the needs of mankind. There was never any reason for want except by our own follies. Man is attempting to change the entire landscape of the earth according to his own ideas.
It has been fully demonstrated that man can go so far, then God steps in and sets us back in line.
It has been done before—since the age—here it is again. And the wicker we fall in line the better it will be. We've got to toe the mark whether we want to or not;
or we might as well begin right now.
Getting back to beer—it is so water in the necessities of life.
Fact, positively not even needed. Why the big hullabaloo about it? It proved to be a good vote for it. At one time we remember, to mention it, meant political death; so after all it's a political outlet swinging with the pendulum time out and the next time in, and that's about all there is to beer all that it amounts to.
We can't agree with the thirsty citizens of Texas who are so hasty in their zealous desire to have beer legalized before the proper steps have been taken to legalize it, that we should take the bull by the ears and defy the law statutes of Texas. The decent law abiding citizens of Texas won't stand for it.
If they persist, they will find it
Neither can we agree with relig-

MANY KILLED IN CYCLONES IN MID-WEST

By United Press
KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 23.—A death-dealing storm driven by winds too violent to be measured, left the crushed bodies of 16 victims, nearly 200 injured and scenes of desolation in Western Kansas and Nebraska today.
Residents computed their losses at more than $1,000,000. Scores were homeless.
The storm struck late Monday. Flying timbers, then hailstones as large as billiard balls, inflicted heavy livestock losses.
Power and communication lines were twisted into a hopeless tangle.
Three focal points of the storm were Tryon, Nebraska, and Liberal and Garden City, Kansas.

Putnam May Test Homestead Law

HOUSTON.—A dollar bill from each of 2,000 Texas homestead owners was asked for today to finance a supreme court test of the homestead tax exemption amendment ratified last November. The request was made by Frank Putnam in the following statement:
"Good lawyers tell me the amendment, exempting $3,000 of homestead assessed value from all taxation for state purposes, almost certainly covers county taxes, counties being constitutional subdivisions of the state. They say it may also be found to cover city and district taxes. They tell me the cost of a supreme court test will not exceed $2,000. I am asking 2,000 homestead owners to send me that $2,000, so that a test case may be started."
"I started the homestead exemption movement in the 1930 governor's race and have spent three years working for it, by my own expense. Applied to the state tax only, under the attorney general's opinion, the amendment this year is saving half a million homestead owning families close to $7,000,000. If found to cover county taxes, it will more than double that saving. If applied to city and district taxes, it will save homestead owners around $35,000,000 a year and will make Texas homesteads permanently safe from confiscation for taxes."
"I tried to get the 43rd legislature to submit a revised amendment, extending the $3,000 exemption to cover all taxes. Judge Chastain of Eastland wrote into a provision taking ample care of county, city and district bonded debt payments. It was beaten in the lower house May 14 by the most powerful lobby ever seen in Austin. The Ferguson, who owed their nomination last August to their professed desire for complete homestead tax exemption, didn't lift a finger to help get the revised amendment submitted. It will take a stiff fight and a statewide organization of homestead owners to get it submitted by the next legislature in 1935."
"Meanwhile, a court may prove the original amendment covers the whole ground. If enough dollars are paid the cost are sent me at P. O. Box 654, Houston, in the next 30 days, I will have a test case started. Otherwise money sent will be used to carry on the fight for a revised amendment in 1935."

Delinquent Tax Delay Is Urged

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 23.—A bill to extend city, town and school district tax paying without penalty until October 15 was offered in the Texas house today. Such taxes become delinquent June 1 under present law.
The bill leaves it optional with the local governing body if the tax payment time shall be extended.
"Millions of dollars that are due and have been due municipal governments and school districts for years will be paid if interest and penalties are excused," Rep. Harold Kayton said.

Graham Banker At Mercy of Court

By United Press
AMARILLO, Tex., May 23.—T. Otto Deats, 36, former assistant bank cashier of Graham, was freed today at the mercy of federal court. Presiding Judge James C. Wilson suspended imposition of sentence for Deats, who confessed to embezzlement of $1,350.
Many Graham citizens had requested leniency for Deats, pointing out that the embezzled money had been returned.

AN EDITORIAL

This is another and important plea for something to get started on a bank for Eastland. Whether it becomes boresome or not we are going to say it again. This time we have a suggestion to offer.
It is understood that several have been here from other sections looking the situation over. But each and every one expected the town to do something about it. Naturally, that's common sense and reason. But not knowing what it would do and being a little inconvenient to rush around and find out, nothing was done and things remain just as they were. No bank.
Our observation is that Eastland can get along beautifully with a $25,000 capitalized state bank. That of course is just an opinion. If others have higher opinions in money, then, let's have a $50,000 National bank.
The point we want to put before the entire business element of Eastland is: Let's get out now and get pledges for at least $12,500 for stock in a $25,000 bank, or pledges for at least $25,000 for a $50,000 bank. Then let's send out the word that Eastland has so much money to put in a bank provided that the one that comes in here and matches it meets with the approval of those who have subscribed for the stock.
That's the only business way to go at the thing, and the only way that we can expect action—action that will mean much to Eastland.
This is a matter for the Chamber of Commerce and no time should be lost. There is no use in working on the outside until we have gotten the inside lined up. Eastland needs a bank... and there is no use in believing, for one minute, that it can't have one. Now is the time to wake up. If this idea sounds foolish, then, somebody come on with a better one. We're open. But do something. Nobody is coming here and put up a bank and soak a lot of money just because we are sitting here without one. There are plenty of other places one can go and get the support of the community.

SENATE STOCK MARKET PROBERS SEEK INFORMATION FROM J. P. MORGAN FIRM

By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 23.—J. P. Morgan testified this afternoon that he had paid no income tax during the years 1930, 1931 and 1932.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—The senate inquiry into the affairs of the world famous banking house of J. P. Morgan and Company, revealed today the firm "took losses" of $21,071,862 in preparing an income tax return, although the losses were not actually sustained in the two day period in 1931, for which the deduction was claimed.
The inquiry veered to the subject of income taxes at the close of the morning session of the senate stock market investigating committee.
J. P. Morgan was the central figure in a crowded committee room which had attended a senate hearing since the Teapot Dome investigation.
Secret operations of the world-renowned banking firm were brought into the testimony. Morgan refused, at one point, to surrender the articles of partnership under which the firm carries on its business.
Previously Morgan had been permitted to present a voluntary statement in which he defended private banking and its connection with selling securities.

By LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 23.—J. P. Morgan has been summoned to appear today before the senate stock market investigating committee at the outset of inquiry into the financial power and methods of the world's greatest private banking house.
Other partners will succeed Morgan on the stand. After them will come Otto Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and Clarence Dillon of Dillon, Read—all underwriters of securities widely sold and much depreciated.
The Morgan inquiry will include Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia which is identically owned, and may extend to affiliated private banks in London and Paris.

Stock market investigators lashed at the National City bank and the National City company, driving Charles E. Mitchell and others to resignations and laying the foundation for indictments.
But commercial banks for the time being are immune from further investigation. The Chase National bank, whose security affiliate was at one time destined for investigation, never may be reached, although committee members seem undetermined. The Chase is a Rockefeller bank and the oil millionaires were credited with a smart move some weeks ago when Albert H. Wiggin, boom time skipper of Chase, relinquished his command to Winthrop W. Aldrich.

NEGRO YOUTH IS LYNCHED BY FARMERS

By United Press
CARTHAGE, Tex., May 23.—A 17-year old negro boy was killed by a mob of farmers one and a half miles south of here today, less than 15 minutes after he had attempted to assault Mrs. B. C. Coleman and had shot her brother in attempting to escape.
The posse, numbering more than 20 farmers, cornered the negro, W. C. Lovell, in a field along the Sabine River bottoms. He was shot before he could open fire on his pursuers.

State Studies One House Plan Of Lawmaking

By United Press
OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—Oklahoma may become a laboratory for the revolutionary proposal of a one-house legislature with Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska as sponsor.
Senator Norris told Fletcher Rile, Oklahoma supreme court chief justice, that he was interested in coming here to urge adoption of such a legislative plan in place of the body now existing.
Riley said Senator Norris described Oklahoma as the "ideal laboratory" for experimentation with a one-house legislature.
Representative Leslie Connor, Oklahoma City, introduced a resolution at the recent session to provide an election for creation of a 41-member one-house law-making body. The resolution died.
Riley discussed the proposal recently in Washington with Senator Norris, former State Senator W. C. Austin of Altus, Okla., and Representative Leon C. Phillips of Okemah, Okla.

Intangible Asset Taxes Are Urged

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 23.—Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson today suggested that a tax be levied on intangible assets as a means of "balancing the budget."
The governor's message to the legislature was short. It said: "I submit for your consideration the question of levying a tax upon intangible values upon all corporations, not now paying a gross receipts tax. Such a tax might go a long way toward balancing the budget."
Companies now paying gross receipt taxes and therefore exempt from the new tax, if the suggestion is followed, include, telephone, gas, water, light, power, car lines, natural gas and casinghead gas companies.

Golfers Preparing For Houston Tourney

By United Press
HOUSTON, May 23.—One hundred of the state's finest golfers were prepared today for a descent upon the Houston Country club and the 27th renewal of the Texas Golf association's tournament.
Willie Maguire, the club's veteran professional who will act as starter as he does at all major Texas tournaments, has pronounced the course fit for the four-day meet which starts tomorrow.
Leading the large and colorful field will be young Gus Moreland, Dallas' contribution to the Walker cup team, who will defend the title he won last year in the tournament played at Texasana.
The entry of W. H. Long, Austin player who was runner-up to Moreland at Texasana, had not been received by George V. Rotan, president of the association, but he was expected to be on hand.
As befits its position as the golf capital of the state, Dallas will send more entrants than any other Texas city. Headed by Moreland, they will include David (Spec) Goldman, Louis Nowlin, Reynolds Smith, Neil Smith and many others of equal calibre.
Del Rio will send its youthful Bud McKinney and San Antonio its Halbert Grumbles. Other entrants will be registered from Galveston, Port Arthur, Fort Worth, Beaumont, Waco, Amarillo and Texasana.

BILL HAD BEEN VETOED BEFORE BY GOVERNOR

Resolution To Send Allred To Washington Is Also Voted Down.

By United Press
AUSTIN, May 23.—The senate today refused to pass, over the governor's veto, a bill to allow Texas banks to voluntarily place their business under supervision of the State Banking Commissioner for liquidation, without closing their doors.
The vote was 18 ayes to 11 noes but a two-thirds vote is required to pass a bill over veto.
The bill would have allowed solvent banks wishing to liquidate to do so under the direction of the banking commissioner, keeping open their doors for the collection of notes, securities and other assets.

A resolution to send the attorney general to Washington to protest federal control of the oil industry, was defeated. The vote was 9 to 15.

A resolution which, if passed, will permit the Farmer Governor James E. Ferguson to hold office again in this state, was introduced in the house.
It seeks to amend the constitution so that a judgement of impeachment shall extend only to removal from office, and shall not disqualify the officer to hold an office to which he is later elected.
The proposed constitutional amendment would be submitted to vote on August 26 of this year.
The house also had before it a resolution for adjournment of the legislature on May 30, already passed by the senate.

SECRETARY WALLACE AND ACREAGE REDUCTION

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace has been christened the czar of the farm. Speaking of the annual dinner of the Boston grain and flour exchange the distinguished son of the Havtkeye state said: "The most difficult operation will be that of reducing farm acreage. Yet, as you survey the world situation and appreciate the prospective demand from abroad for our surpluses, I challenge you to discover any alternative course we might take."

He reminded his Boston audience that huge surpluses would not have bothered the United States so much before the World War because it was a debtor nation and it was possible to move on to the European market. Continuing, he said: "Today we are a creditor nation. Other nations want to sell to us, rather than buy from us; and there is no immediate prospect of a substantial foreign demand for our surplus farm products. We have hidden our heads in the sand for the past 12 years, refusing to face the facts. It was concealed from us by loaning vast sums of money abroad, five hundred million dollars to one billion dollars a year from 1921 to 1929. Now we have stopped loaning the money abroad, but we have still refused to face in any definite manner the implications of what it means to be a creditor nation."

This so-called farm czar is a very able and very level-headed American. He uttered a mighty truth which should not be permitted to go over the head of the American farmer. "The most difficult operation will be that of reducing farm acreage." This is true.

Increased cotton acreage appears to be on the way. Now should a bumper crop come again with a heavy carry-over what will happen to cotton price levels?

MEYER STEPS OUT AND BLACK STEPS IN

President Roosevelt has named one of the most important of all public servants since he became the chief magistrate, Eugene R. Black of Georgia is the governor of the federal reserve board. Eugene Meyer of New York has been retired to private life. Meyer resigned.

A Southern democrat and financier is his successor. Black is a 59-year-old lawyer who started a highly successful banking career only 10 years ago. Now he has stepped into one of the topmost positions in the financial world. It will be for him to play an important part in the financial world. It will be for him to play an important part in the administration of the new reflation legislation and in determining the policy of the federal reserve member banks, with their inevitable repercussions on general business conditions.

A reminder that under the reflation legislation, the Roosevelt administration is empowered, among other things, to purchase up to three billion dollars of government securities in the open market as a hope for stimulus to business. Operations would be directed by the reserve board. Furthermore, the board has power, "in theory at least," to control the amount of money available for business through raising or lowering the rediscount rate. That is the charge for borrowing money from the federal reserve bank. Appointment of the Georgian still leaves two vacancies. President Roosevelt will fill the vacancies.

The average American citizen is not the ignoramus some people think him. He is watching closely the further taxation and increase in the public debt, which is put over under the guise of improvement of this or that industry by a paternal government of whose assessments for services rendered he has a surfeit.

Faith in the home city should be in the heart of every citizen, and a spirit of loyalty to home industries must be shown by actions as well as words.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

I noted in a Wyoming newspaper recently that the Lions club of Thermopolis, Wyo., awarded a gold-plated Lions club pin to W. L. Fitzpatrick, vice president of the Mountain States Power company, for being the best liar at a contest held by the club.

All Mr. Fitzpatrick did to win the prize was to make a remark that he had known A. L. Martin, district manager of his company, for 20 years and it was his opinion that anything Mr. Martin said was the truth. The club immediately gave Mr. Fitzpatrick the prize.

Well, that sounds like a strong decision. It is a well known fact that utility men are truthful, and when Mr. Fitzpatrick the prize.

Well, that sounds like a strong decision. It is a well known fact that utility men are truthful, and when Mr. Fitzpatrick—who knows not the word 'lie'—made a usual truthful statement, he gets the prize for being a big liar.

Thermopolis is a fine little city. It's full of live citizens. It has an extra live newspaper. They have some medicinal hot springs there. It is possible the Lions were drinking some of that medicinal water and knew not what they were doing when they made that strong decision.

Fly and Mosquito Season Open Says Health Officer

AUSTIN.—Word has just been received by the state department of health that Mr. and Mrs. Fly, with their kindfoks, are planning to take up their summer residence in the state. They state that, although many had died since last summer, they would soon have large families...

Mosquitoes are responsible for the spread of malaria, dengue, and yellow fever. Malaria is spread by the bite of the Anopheles or malaria mosquito. Dengue fever and yellow fever are transmitted by the Aedes aegypti or tiger mosquito.

They breed in any standing water, therefore, you should drain, ditch or fill such places, spray oil on water each week, too, or stock the water with surface minnows as they will eat the wiggle-tails.

Wrestler's Ambition May Be Realized

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—The burning ambition of Everett Marshall, Colorado wrestler, who many claim is the outstanding heavyweight, is to lure Joe Savoldi into the ring. The ambition may be satisfied here.

After a Chicago match with Jigg London, claimant of the heavy-weight championship, it was claimed by Savoldi.

Marshall is confident he can throw Savoldi, the former Notre-Dame football player, and promoter Gabe Kaufman of Kansas City has arranged an extensive series of wrestling bouts during which he plans to bring every prominent contender to Kansas City.

To get Marshall's services, the Coloradoan has indicated, he must have to match him with Savoldi.

To prevent their increase all refuse should be disposed of at once, garbage kept in covered containers, privies made sanitary and houses screened. Bad Men Added To Texas Museum Opened Saturday

BANDERA, Tex.—Sam Bass and his gang of outlaws, dynamic personalities in a colorful period of Texas history, posthumously receive some of the credit for the Frontier Times Museum dedicated here Saturday.

For, ironically enough, there is a close connection between the bad men, whose watchword was "action and whose lives never were secure more than a few hours after the static collection of museum pieces, timeless in quality, published in this peaceful community 47 miles distant from the scene of civilization as exemplified by the railroad.

A little more than 10 years ago Marvin Hunter left his job in composing room of the San Antonio Express and came to Bandera to take over publication of a small country weekly. He brought with him little but vision and a scrapbook of authentic, first-hand account of events important in Texas history.

From his vision and the scrapbook he built "The Frontier Times," a magazine of national, and even international, circulation, published at Bandera.

Tales of winning the frontier from the Indians and the elements, geographical notes written by pioneers, and all the significant colorful ana of a state in the making, found their way from the scrapbook to the magazine, winning devoted readers in every walk of life.

Several books, supplementary to the magazine, were born in Hunter's brain and published in the Bandera print shop and hauled to the railroad for distribution.

As a consequence of his writings Hunter became a collector of objects redolent of Texas—rocks, fossils, man-made things. The museum pieces overran the little print shop. A museum building became a practical necessity; money to erect it must be had.

Here Outlaw Sam Bass, long in his grave since the battle of Round Rock in which he was killed, came to the rescue.

Among the books published under the imprint of the Frontier Times was "Authentic History of Sam Bass and His Gang." Hunter, in times when hardly anyone else was thinking of selling or building anything, decided to market enough copies of the book to pay for the museum building.

Friends of the magazine rallied around the book, bought copies of it, made today's dedication ceremonies, including an all-day barbecue, possible.

The museum building, which after today will be open free to the public each week day, is built of field stone in Mission style.

tel is a millstone which Elder Lyman Wight brought to Bandera in 1854 to grind meal for the Mormon colony which had settled here.

Beside it is an infinitely more antique cousin, a grinding stone used by Indians.

Among the museum pieces are hundreds of relics of an early day including rifles, pistols, muskets, spinning wheels, saddles, cooking utensils and farm tools, lariats, spurs, powder horns, bullet moulds and photographs of early Texans including rangers, desperadoes and other personalities of the frontier.

Strict Enforcement Of Rules Needed in the Texas House

By United Press
 AUSTIN—Stricter enforcement of its own rules is fast becoming a pressing necessity in the Texas house of representatives. Numerous rules, drawn for the purpose of expediting business and conducting proceedings in an orderly manner are daily broken, without protest.

No curb is placed upon what a member says. The constitution gives a member immunity for anything said on the floor in debate but that immunity only says that he may not be questioned "in any other place" for words spoken in debate. He could be reprimanded by the house itself.

The lie has been passed, motives of members supporting or opposing bills have been questioned and open inquiries about "trading out" have been voiced on the floor. Twice remarks have reached a stage that sent members at others with brandished fists.

Holding up one finger means an "aye" vote. Two fingers mean "no."

The rule that members vote from their seats is so universally disregarded that it is impossible to tell the result of a vote from the flashing of red and blue lights on the electric voting machine. Members absent from their seats call out: "Vote me aye" or "Vote me no." Those oral votes have to be added to the machine totals before the result is determined. So usual has this confusing form of voting become that signals are used for it.

The democratic dropping of formal address and reference to fellow members by their first names cordial enough at first, soon progressed to jocular adjectives, then more bitter ones.

Maintenance of order has become a sore problem for the presiding officer in the senate. Repeatedly speakers halt in the midst of an address to ask for order. The disorder is not hilarity, but small groups of senators gather about some other senators' desks and converse. The sergeant-at-arms has been kept busy in the waning days of the session.

Senators are supposed to be more sedate than house members, and senators take pride in that reputation. During warm days house members go without coats. Not so the senators.

The senate, however, has refused to put a curb on the length of debate. Some members, who openly expressed impatience at listening to the "long-winded members," tried to put a 10-minute rule into effect. Although the majority of the senate agreed with them they could not get a necessary two-thirds vote to put on the gag.

Keeping Tab on the World's Fluctuating Currencies

Fluctuations of the world's currencies keep the foreign exchange departments of banks in New York's financial district humming with activity these days. This scene in the bank of Manhattan Company is typical. In front of each man is a switchboard connecting brokers, departments and dealers in foreign exchange. A cable maintains almost constant communication with Europe's money centers and the whirling drum at the right employing a slide rule principle, calculates the price on foreign currencies with just a few manipulations.

Scores Hurt in Milk Strike Battles

This serious clash between Wisconsin's milk strikers and civilian-garbed national guardsmen, in which tear gas, clubs and rocks were freely used, resulted in a hurry call for military units of the state militia. This picture was taken near Shawano at the height of the battle, in which several were wounded and 200 taken prisoners. It shows guardsmen-deputies, wearing gas masks, advancing behind their barrage of tear bombs.

City Park Was Named For Constable

By United Press
 MEDFORD, Ore.—Roxy Ann Park, owned by the city, has been changed to "Prescott Memorial Park," in memory of Constable George J. Prescott, killed here on March 16.

Prescott allegedly was killed when he attempted to serve warrants on L. A. Banks, orchardist and newspaper editor.

AUSTIN—Sixty-four proposals to change the state constitution have been placed before the 43rd legislature.

If 10 of the 64 get to the people for a vote, it will be surprising. Strangely enough, few of the members proposing to change the constitution are satisfied merely to strike out provisions. Where they strike out they want to insert something else.

The constitution, dating back to Feb. 15, 1876, has been outgrown, say those proposing changes. Yet in their proposed amendments most of them seek to put in new provisions that are as likely to be outgrown in a few years.

A constitution is supposed to lay down basic principles, leaving the application of regulation within those principles to the legislature, yet, with amendments already adopted, it now occupies 118 ordinary book size pages in type little larger than the usual size in "best sellers."

As an example of how the "changers" want to go into detail when they make a change, the present proposal for four-year terms of office is a striking example.

It would be a very simple matter to abolish the provision limiting terms to two years. But the proposal the legislature is asked to pass on to the people for decision carries much more. It will not do away with biennial elections. If some of the four-year terms begin in 1936, others will begin in 1938.

For state officers it is proposed to elect the governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general at one election and the other state-wide officers two years later. County officials are also divided into separate election groups.

It is urged this prevents a general changing of administration. But it also does away with a very practical present check against the building up of a political machine. With all elected at the same time, each finds it desirable to keep hands off other races. A governor, lieutenant governor and attorney general elected in 1936, for instance, with four years to serve, would have no personal races in 1938. They would be free to turn their strength and influence to favored candidates for other state offices who were running then. With the great merging of departmental strength in favor of particular candidates would make it difficult for an outsider ever to break in.

It is true there is a one-term provision that a man may not run for senator when he is ending his one term as governor. The lieutenant governor may, and likely would, be a candidate for governor and the attorney general might also be seeking new political office.

Tacked onto the four-year term proposal is another provision that the existing constitutional salaries for most of the state officers shall be abolished and their compensation left to the legislature.

It is another way of raising the salaries. Frequent attempts to do so by direct submission of specific increased salaries to popular vote have again and again resulted in a verdict for the old pay fixed in the constitution of 1876.

ance rates to be increased and at the same time endanger the lives of people. The local agent may be properly termed as a part of the policy contract between the assured and the insurance company and he has a duty to perform to three interested parties: First, the assured; second, the insurance company, and third, the public. His negligence acts or his indifference can injure all three. The agent should exercise extreme diligence in writing insurance and refuse to insure a man's property in excess of its reasonable value. As a matter of fact we have a state law prohibiting such a practice.

No doubt, Ranger, like most other Texas cities and towns, has experienced too many incendiary fires in the past three years or more. Regardless, however, of the diligence and sincere efforts on the part of the good people and the good insurance agents in Ranger, there are going to be a few

Hand Seen in New Plea to Ban War

"Mystery" surrounding William C. Bullitt, special assistant to the Secretary of State and call the department's "mystery man," was lessened when he became one of President Roosevelt's closest advisers on his world message to halt war moves. Bullitt, shown here at his desk in a new posed photograph, has a wide acquaintance with European diplomats.

incendiary fires. It therefore becomes necessary that every fire of suspicious origin be carefully investigated and if determined to be incendiary origin, the arsonist should be treated as any other criminal and properly prosecuted.

It has been our experience that it is exceedingly difficult to get an indictment for arson. Attorneys find it extremely difficult to get a conviction of trial of an arson case. The facilities spring from the indifference on the part of the public they spring also from the fact that arson is probably the most heinous of all crimes to a man and his family. Completion of crime and its successful prosecution in most cases destroys evidence. This being true, against the arsonist must, to a certain degree, be based on circumstantial evidence and evidence and juries alike are entirely sentimental in their attitude toward a criminal prosecution can be only circumstantially established. Each individual should determine within himself that if of the serious aspects of crime of arson that he will bear upon its consideration same rational and logical that he would bring to his business affairs. The man jury in an arson case should longer be disposed to regard mere coincidences these fact circumstances which, in transactions, would be convincing proof.

If education is applied as prevention, you will see a decrease in the number of careless fires. In the future, and if the enforcement of the arson law is applied, you will see a decrease in the number of incendiary fires. In the future, the Ranger in the future, the Ranger of these being that the Ranger will enjoy a saving of the cost of insurance and protection of property, and most important of all a less possibility of loss of life.

We recommend and suggest the city officials of Ranger adopt an ordinance creating a prevention board, whose duty shall be to find ways and means to assist the city officials, peace officers, district attorney and marshal in a reduction of fire from all causes, and that board make a sweeping investigation of every fire immediately after the cause of same has been determined, and that appears that the same was of incendiary origin that the evidence and facts in the case be gathered and submitted to the grand jury for action.

IT WAS A "BARGAIN" WHEN SHE BOUGHT IT

Friends of the Family

LOOK at the packages on your pantry and bathroom shelves, and see what a multitude of brand names you recognize. Some of them have been familiar for years.

You may have made the acquaintance of others only a few weeks ago. But even these are not suspected strangers. You have bought them confidently because they were advertised. And it is the same with your sheets and towels, your shoes and clothes, your electric appliances, the car in your garage—nearly everything you use.

Advertised products have a standing that commands respect. They are not nameless, but vouched for by responsible firms. The fact that they are advertised is in itself an indication that their standards of quality are strictly maintained, that they represent honest value.

As science and discovery go on, newly developed products are constantly being advertised—ready to help you save money and improve your standard of living. Every advertisement of such a product you read in your daily paper is a letter of introduction to a new and possibly useful friend.

It will pay you to read the advertisements in this paper every day. By so doing you will meet many choice products—worthy to become friends of the family.

● These days, many a product that looked like a bargain at the store becomes only a disappointment at home.

It is easy to account for such mistakes in buying. Just as easy to avoid them, if you know why they are made.

When families have little money to spend, all manufacturers try to reduce the price of their merchandise. Those who have built a reputation for quality guard it jealously, lowering the prices of their products as far as they can without sacrificing any of the quality you always look for.

Other manufacturers go too far in their efforts to sell goods. To make a low price still lower, they sometimes reduce quality. Or bring out entirely new products of lower grade.

You may be told these products are "just as good" as the brands you know by experience, by their advertising, or the reputations of their makers. But all too frequently, they are urged upon you only because they pay maker and dealer a higher margin of profit.

Remember these facts when you shop, and you will look for genuine bargains among brands you recognize. Many of these brands now cost less than they have in years.

When you buy them you pay a low price, but an honest one that assures highest quality, complete satisfaction. ●

WASHINGTON—A new wrinkle in the spending of taxpayers' money has been worked out here by the office of education, which is the radio stations of the city to answer the criticism that there is too much advertising on the radio.

C. M. Coons, a member of the office of education, has been designated as "senior specialist in radio," and is now in charge of the radio stations all over the city for the purpose of discharging the office of education's responsibility in planning daily programs.

The office of education itself is the initiative in this matter, we are told, by sponsoring a series of programs and by clearing a house for the use of radio manuscripts and subjects of general public interest.

In his visitations, Mr. Coons has informed the radio stations that the broadcasters "are to be given new ideas on what to broadcast for the purpose of discharging the office of education's responsibility in planning daily programs."

Witness their fight with the Society of Authors, Publishers, and the music industry, which has demanded a "senior specialist in radio," who was appointed by the Hoover administration, "has followed the development of jazz programs, the crooning mystery dramas and other skits."

The holders of broadcasting licenses have never paid the federal government a nickel for the privilege of using the people's ether, and have profited handsomely from radio advertising; and just the office of education, which under the department of the interior should expend more federal money in order to give the listening public decent programs is not quite ing and take it out of the hands of organizations and individuals operating radio stations for self-interest, private gain.

Norwegian Goats Raised By Farmer

RICHLAND CENTER, Wis.—Chris O. Goplen, farmer, has realized his ambition to raise a herd of goats brought from his native Norway. He has raised and sold a large number from a stock he purchased in Norway in 1928.

Due to difficulties with the federal bureau of animal importation, Goplen was forced to remain with his goats in Quarantine for 30 days in New York before proceeding to his farm here. He believes that a small herd of goats would be an asset to the average sized farm.

Dan returns to Belvedere just after Monnie and Miss Cory depart. He is sure now that it is Monnie he loves and wants to marry. Dan goes to the O'Dare home. There, Monnie's sister, KAY, breaks the news to him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXI

DAN'S voice was flat and colorless. "She's gone! For—how long?"

Kay smiled. "Several months. Perhaps they'll be back by Christmas, perhaps not."

"I see." The man stood for an instant, hands plunged deep in his overcoat pockets. "I see," he repeated vaguely. "She didn't leave any message for me?"

"Monnie?" Kay's voice tinkled. "No, indeed." Into her eyes came a sparkle of malice. "She was wearing Charles Eustace's flowers when she left. Orchids." Kay made the word vastly significant.

Dan gave her a comprehending look; then, without another word, he lifted his hat and withdrew.

"There!" Kay congratulated herself. "Guess I gave him something to think about—the concealed thing!" She felt not the slightest compunction though she remembered Monnie's voice, saying clearly that morning, "If Dan calls give him my address."

Well, Kay wouldn't. Anyhow he hadn't asked for it. He'd looked as though Monnie's departure really was a blow. That seemed queer too when he'd been at Sandra Lawrence's beck and call for so long. Kay clicked her tongue against her teeth, reflecting that men were really the limit!

SHE set off for the "News" office quite gaily, feeling serene and capable and alert. It was good to have this thrilling new job, to have a place in the world. Kay wasn't at all nervous about doing Miss Anstice's work. It was simple, really, and she knew just how it should be done. You could, thought Kay coolly, do it with your eyes shut. Life was different for Kay this year. The old silliness and impatience had slipped from her like a cloak. She no longer thought longingly of New York, of going on the stage. She had noticed since she had been helping Miss Anstice that people were nicer to her. Even stiff people like Mrs. John Blair. Mrs. Blair had called up last week to remind Kay of the big bazaar at St. Thomas' and to hope she could drop in for lunch one of the days when the Ladies' Aid was serving.

Kay hummed a little tune, stepping along at what Charles called her "race-horse" gait. Belvedere wasn't such a bad place after all. It was really nice, especially on crisp October days such as this when the maples on Denby street seemed to have turned to pure gold and the air was clear and spicy. Kay didn't envy Monnie even, en route to New York and later England. She took a deep breath. This trip would be good for Monnie. She needed to be shaken out of herself. Monnie had been unhappy this past year. Kay set her lips, thinking of the Caridigans. Horrid woman, Dan's mother! It was she, of course, who had made the difficulty between Dan and Monnie. Well, Monnie would forget all about Dan. She would have a marvelous time and perhaps come home with a foreign prince in tow. Yes, she could tell. Monnie was beautiful enough to be a princess.

Kay was half way through a day dream in which she saw herself presiding over a reception to "my sister, the Countess de B—" when she reached the dingy office of the newspaper.

Mrs. Anstice, speeding eastward in the drawing room which Miss Anstice had insisted extravagantly upon reserving, felt herself living in a dream. The narrow glass reflected a glowing girl wrapped in brown fur, a small hat tilted over her right eyebrow.

MISS ANSTICE, 50 and bird-like, her neat gray curls escaping from a new blue velvet turban, smiled benevolently. "Well go first to the Splendobit, my dear," she said. "We'll be there by 6. Dinner in our room—or if you'd rather, down in the restaurant. Yes, I think that would be better. You'll like that."

"Oh, so much!"

"Well then, that's settled. I thought if you weren't too tired we might go to a play. There's Katherine Cornell in that new one—that's such a success," purred Miss Anstice, taking off her gloves and blowing gently into each finger to keep the shape, as she had seen her mother do.

"I'm never tired," declared the girl in the green coat, meaning it and looking as if the statement might be true.

"The boat sails at 12 tomorrow," murmured Miss Anstice, rehearsing her plans for the doze time. "I won't sleep a wink I'm afraid. It must seem silly to you, at my age, but the fact is I'm terribly excited, my dear."

"Oh, so am I!" cried Monnie. "It's the most wonderful thing that has ever happened to me. I still can't quite believe it."

"That's a very nice young man," Miss Anstice mused a moment later, touching her curls reflectively.

"Who? Oh, Charles?" Monnie O'Dare smiled without a trace of self-consciousness. "Yes, isn't he splendid?"

"Now in my day," said Miss Anstice, "he would have been considered quite a catch."

"Oh, but he is! All of that," protested Monnie innocently. "All the mothers on the Hill are angling for him. At least that's what I hear."

"I understand none of them have been very successful," murmured the older woman with an oblique glance.

"With Charles?" Monnie considered this. "Well, I don't know. Charles is sort of—well, distant. I don't," averred Monnie, "think he cares much about girls."

"Monnie O'Dare! I could shake you!"

"What for?" The girl turned a surprised look upon her companion. Miss Anstice primmed her lips, shrugging.

"Never heard of it," she heard such nonsense in my life!"

IT was only, Monnie reminded herself, 12 hours since they had left Belvedere. With her eyes fixed on the stage where the deep-voiced, tragic-eyed girl moved so gracefully Monnie's heart beat more swiftly. All day she had been perfectly happy, looking forward to the trip, the hotel and the excitement of the big boat. But now she was reminded of what a wrenching thing love could be. She wanted desperately to forget that, wanted to be gay, to laugh a little and play a lot.

"Isn't it beautiful, my dear?" That was Miss Anstice, wiping her eyes. "People don't love like that any more. They don't know real romance."

"I suppose they don't." Monnie knew she didn't mean that. Of course, she did! Of course, they did! Manners had changed and speech along with costumes. But the flaming feeling—that was the same.

Coming up the aisle of the theater later behind Miss Anstice the girl was conscious of eyes watching her. She lifted her own to encounter the bold stare of a tall man in full evening attire. He held his top hat at a most elegant angle and stood negligently on the fringe of a smart party. The women, Monnie observed, were beautifully dressed and talked in shrill, assured voices.

"How extremely rude!" Miss Anstice, taking her arm, was piloting her toward a taxi.

"I think it extraordinary the way people stare in the city," observed Miss Anstice. "That man! I didn't like the way he looked at you! Oh, that one's taken, my dear, and it's raining. I'm afraid we are in for a wait. The last time my father and I were here we had a most frightful time getting a taxi when it rained."

Car after car, opulent, luxurious, gleaming with chromium, deeply upholstered, slid up and was filled. Monnie noticed that the parakeet ladies in the strange man's party and the two rather negligible mates with them, had gone on without him. The crowd thinned. Miss Anstice, wrapping her plum-colored velvet about her, chirped nervously. "I don't know whatever we shall do, my dear. That's the worst of not having an escort. I always say a gentleman's so useful to have about—"

A deep voice said in Monnie's ear, "I quite agree. May I offer you ladies my car to your destination?"

Monnie whirled to find the tall man with the top hat before her. Before she had time, in her confusion, to say a word Miss Anstice took the situation in hand. "That's extremely kind," she said briskly. "We shall be delighted."

"Where to?"

The tall man flicked a hand in a gesture that was something like a Fascist salute and a greyhound under the porte cochere. Deftly he handed the two women in. The chauffeur touched his hat.

"The Splendobit," said Miss Anstice, leaning forward. "And thank you so much—" Her voice dropped.

The tall man was climbing it beside them.

BLAME CHICAGO GANGS IN MILK STRIKE BATTLES

Bayonets, tear gas bombs, clubs and side arms—these were the weapons the state of Wisconsin turned against farm pickets to break the milk strike. With an agreement reached to terminate the strike, state officials are investigating charges that Chicago gangsters fomented strife in an effort to get control of dairy plants. These pictures show the rout of pickets by civilian-garbed guardsmen at Durham Hill, near Milwaukee. The guardsmen are shown above in a charge reminiscent of "over the top" days. Below, the guardsmen are shown deploying behind a tear-gas bomb attack to rout pickets from their headquarters in a farm home. Another serious clash occurred at Shawano.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY
 NEA Service Writer

DURING vacation time, when children are at home all day, luncheon presents a new problem to many mothers.
 Children must have a hearty noon meal. Hours of active play in the fresh air exhaust energy and make nourishing food necessary. But, unless special meals are prepared for children, the noon meal is the light one and the evening meal is the hearty one eaten with the older members of the family.

It is essential that certain rules which govern the choice of a child's daily diet be recognized and followed. Every child should have in his diet every day one quart of milk. He should have at least three vegetables, one of which may be potatoes and one of the others raw or green.

Two Fruits Are Needed
 He should have two fruits, one preferably raw. He should have one serving of meat, fish or eggs. A whole grain cereal, three slices of bread or toast and four glasses of water complete the list of foods necessary to maintain a balanced diet and provide an adequate number of calories.

If a child does not want to drink his allotted quart of milk, it may be used over vegetables, in soups and in desserts.
 An easy way to plan a child's luncheon is to include in it those foods in his daily food requirement that are not served at breakfast or dinner when the family are together. Then, if he is given his broiled chop or meat cake at noon, he may have the dinner vegetable provided for the rest of the family.

For Nourishment's Sake
 Drinks made of milk and eggs are nourishing and easily digested. They are very quickly made and children generally like them. It's a good plan to serve a cup of hot bouillon or a hot vegetable dish when a cold milk and egg drink is served.
 Fruit juices also can be combined with eggs to make nourishing and inviting drinks. When these are used, a hot vegetable cream soup with sandwiches of lettuce or some other green vegetable rounds out the meal.

Tomorrow's Menu
BREAKFAST: Shredded fresh pineapple, cereal, cream, crisp broiled bacon, oven toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Green pea soup, croutons, grated carrot sandwiches, egg lemonade.
DINNER: Baked salmon trout, baked new cabbage with cheese sauce, lettuce and cucumber salad, tutti-frutti rice pudding, milk, coffee.

Very often the luncheon dessert can be counted as the "main dish" because a large amount of nourishment can be put into a pudding. This type of dessert is seldom wanted for dinner and adds variety if used for the noon meal.
 When the dinner is hearty a simple luncheon of raw vegetable sandwiches, one hot cooked vegetable, a glass of milk and a nourishing dessert proves most satisfactory for hot noons. A vegetable salad with bread and butter sandwiches can take the place of vegetable sandwiches.

Suppose only one person in 10, say, can wear her creations as originally created, for every such one there are a hundred others who can, and do, wear modifications and adaptations of her ideas. There is no question of her influence on the general trend of the mode. She may not be the most and vegetables of the fashion menu, but she is undeniably the
