SECY. ICKES AND THE BIG STICK

Harold L. Ickes, secretary of the interior and administrator of the NRA oil code, appeared before the American Petroleum institute convention in Chicago and promised the petroleum men in America that "cheating and chiseling would be stopped." He faced an audience of a thousand leaders of the industry. He declared most emphatically "the administration means business." He let it be known that the big stick in the codes bag is government licensing. He gave the warning that unless production is restricted to the figures permitted by his last order intended to exercise the drastic powers given him by the code. In an additional warning he placed these remarks in the record: "If necessary I would invoke these extraordinary powers on Nov. 1 next. Fair notice has been given that when it puts the limit on the crude oil to be produced the administration means business."

Wirt Franklin of Oklahoma and Texas, chairman of the code planning and coordinating committee addressed the A. P. I. convention. Speaking of the code, he said that under the plan "there was just one law for the great and small." He predicted that code government would end sharp practices and bring about renewed prosperity. In the grain belt it is said there are wheat bootleggers setting at defiance the processing tax on wheat. Secretary Ickes has convinced himself that there are cheaters and chisellers who are continuing the hot oil game in the producing states of America. Like the Lord's poor they appear to be in evidence all the time and not some of the time.

SUBSTANTIAL JUSTICE FOR AN OHIO NEGRO

Ohio is a very progressive state. Joseph Weaver is a negro. Cleveland is his home. He spent 22 months in the Ohio penitentiary "death row." Five times he faced electrocution. Five gubernatorial reprieves were granted. He had been convicted of the murder of a night watchman. Finally, the state supreme court of Ohio granted Weaver a new trial. He was given his liberty which was the complete vindication by a direct verdict of "not guilty." Now he has been awarded compensation of $12,000 by the county commissioners of Cuyahoga. This award was made possible through legislation enacted by the Ohio legislature at its spring session. Weaver had the compensation coming. Four governors believed him to be an innocent man. The highest court of Ohio gave him a new trial, and the judge of the trial court ordered a jury verdict of acquittal.

It must be hell to be locked in a death cell 22 months. It must be hell for an innocent man, regardless of color, to face five electrocutions in the electric chair, and in the very last analysis of a remarkable case to be given his life and liberty.

HIGHWAY DIVISION ENGINEERS ARE REMINDED

Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson has approved a bill authorizing division engineers of the highway department to receive bids on construction of lateral roads where the amount involved is less than $25,000 and requiring bonds for "protection of federal highway relief funds." All bids must be received and tabulated by the state highway commission under the present laws. "Tis well. Bonds should be required for protection of federal highway relief funds. In other words the taxpayers of America who pay the freight should be given ample protection. They are expected to do the worrying as well as the paying.

The home city should be known as a good city in which to live—and not a good city to leave.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

America's greatest asset is her citizens. Any actions which will get them productively busy and a market for their products will place the nation on the road to a bright future, but this cannot be done without assuring them a reasonable return for their labors. Neither coercion nor hot air or untried schemes is the solution which can lie only in a profitable exchange of commodities.

The gangrene which at present has made its appearance is due to the arrest of this necessary circulation, and a big part of the cause is due to the heavy taxation which is placing prices beyond the capacity of the majority of purchasers to pay.

To realize this item on the program, Congress will have to gauge its taxes in accordance with the requirements of its people. If this is done the fear of an economic breakdown will not only be averted, but it will bring industry to a more advanced stage and better business will be achieved of its own volition.

Forgotten Sweetheart

BEGIN HERE TODAY JOAN WARING, pretty Memphis girl, and BOB WESTON, son of a New York millionaire, meet in Memphis and fall in love. They become estranged through the scheming of BOB'S BROTHER, COLEBY, who is trying to win BOB. PAT, Joan's younger sister runs away to New York after an unhappy love affair. Joan follows and after a long hunt finds her. She becomes engaged to BENNEY, the son of the night club.

Later Pat becomes Barney's secretary and he discovers that it is Pat he loves instead of Joan. Joan sings at a private entertainment and discovers she is Bob's home. She wears a mask but Bob recognizes her voice. He traces her to the luxurious apartment she and Pat share with Barney's stepmother. Bob leads to the conclusion that Joan is living there as "Mrs. Blake." He brings her from him and rushes away. Joan tells Barney of her love for Bob and leaves that he loves Pat. Next day Barney and Pat are married and sail on a honeymoon. Joan leaves Bob goes on a cruise. Desperately unhappy, she returns to Memphis. In Havana Bob Weston sees Pat and Barney together.

CHAPTER XXXV

ONE thing marred Mrs. Waring's happiness during the days that followed Joan's return home. That was the way in which her daughter refused to be paraded before their friends.

Mrs. Waring would have liked to walk along Main street and about the stores, having people stare, thinking of Joan's success and glamorous adventures in New York.

The mother's triumphant manner was like a banner proclaiming, "This is my daughter. She has been singing at the most popular night club in New York!" She could not have been prouder if Joan had sung at the Metropolitan.

But Joan refused to be "shown off." She had come home wearing the same suit she had worn when she departed. There was an unimpressive array of frocks in the closet of her bedroom. The beautiful costumes she had worn when she sang had been packed in a heavier trunk to come later.

There was nothing whatever about Joan's appearance to suggest the brilliance and glitter of the life which had so recently enveloped her. She was content to sit at home, preferring to be there. She had drifted easily into the homely round of duties and seemed to find pleasure in such mild excitement as challenging Benny to a game of croquet, going to the library with him, attending a movie or discussing household plans with Mrs. Waring and Sara, her sister-in-law.

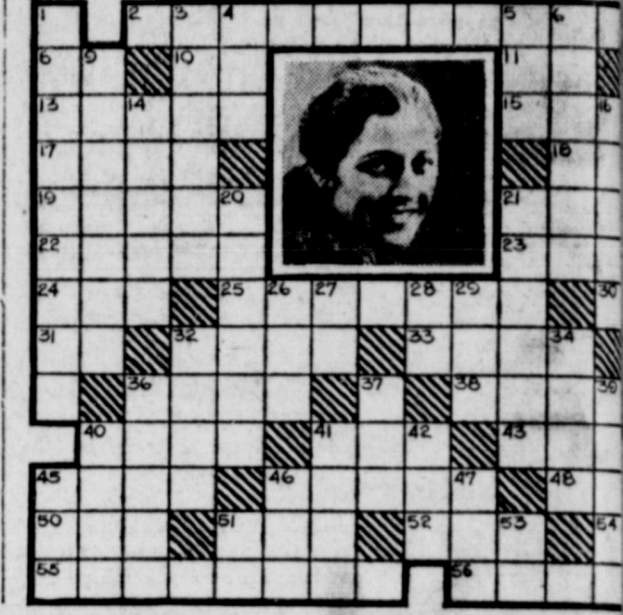

Happy as she was to have her daughter at home, Mrs. Waring unconsciously sighed for a little of the reflected glory she thought might rightfully have been hers.

Then, too, Joan flatly refused to capitalize her accomplishments. She had declared her intention of staying home "forever and ever." She had said this fervently, almost childishly. She would find some work here in Memphis, she declared, perhaps teaching a class of vocal students.

Answers to Today's Three Guesses

Benjamin Disraeli was a famous BRITISH STATESMAN and NOVELIST. Mount Everest is on the TIBET-NEPAL border. The greatest depth in the Atlantic is near PUERTO RICO.

Mother, I don't want pupils who are curious to see what I look like in a month no one will even remember that I've been away. Then I'll organize my class. This attitude was beyond Mrs. Waring's comprehension. Things were hard enough in this world without deliberately setting out to make them harder. But if Joan persisted in this course, Mrs. Waring found various thrills in reading Pat's first letter. It was filled with extravagant phrases. Pat sent a glowing account of the sea voyage, beginning with the first night on the ship when the captain had invited Pat and Barney to sit at his table. There were interesting people on the boat—a fabulously rich Indian prince; a gray-haired, distinguished foreign consul; a charming woman whose husband had developed the resources of some of the more remote islands; some attractive English people; and a movie star who thought she was traveling incognito.

Always and inevitably Pat's lavish adjectives led up to Barney, who was simply perfect. Pat wrote that she loved the ship, the deck sports at which they spent their mornings, the lazy afternoons on the cool, wind-swept decks, and the glamorous nights when she wore a tulle dress and was sure that all the other women aboard envied her as they saw her dancing with Barney. The enthusiasm of Pat colored every word of the incoherent but vivid account.

ONE morning Joan and Benny finished a game of tennis at Beauregard court and started home. "Let's stop for something cool to drink," said Benny, the victor. He was highly gratified over the outcome of the game because Joan had put up a good fight.

She agreed, always eager to fall in with his plans. Benny was himself these days. In the long months in New York had brought nothing but pain to Joan they had at least brought happiness to Pat and health to Benny.

Waiting for their drinks to be served, they watched automobiles arriving and pulling away from the curb. Joan recognized several of the young people.

A green roadster pulled into position and suddenly Joan found herself staring into the eyes of Carol Sheridan. Carol's gaze met Joan's coldly. Then suddenly she smiled. "How are you, Joan?" she asked.

"Very well, thank you." "Have you heard the news about Barbara? Isn't it marvelous?" Joan smiled. She could not have spoken just then if her life depended on it. The other girl, missing nothing of Joan's agitation, went on easily. "Perhaps you didn't know, but Bob Weston is giving a yachting party. They're in Havana now. Barbara's in the crowd, naturally, and she wrote her mother that they're having the most thrilling time. Isn't Barbara the luckiest girl you ever heard of?"

"Yes," said Joan slowly. "She is." Carol turned to her companion then. Joan drank the limeade quickly, searcel, conscious of what she was doing. So Barbara and Bob were and other guests here for the Sixth District Convention of Music Clubs.

 The affair was unusual, and held at 1 o'clock today in the home of the hostess on South Seaman street.
 Guests were welcomed at the door by the daughter of the hostess, Dorothy, an adorable "Little Alice."

The large rooms were decorated throughout in peasant colors of Venetian blue and orange, and candles that flanked a large mirror in the dining-room, from whose depths stepped an "Alice."
 As the board is a mirror of the district work, the looking-glass motif obtained in the appointments of the several tables, laid in bright peasant linens, centered with mirrors, over which were scattered rabbits, gnomes, and other wondrous creatures, with small white rabbits as individual favors.
 The luncheon opened with a tomato cocktail course. The turkey luncheon plate, a cranberry and pineapple salad; hot rolls, stuffed celery, and last course of individual mince pie, with whipped cream topping.

Tables were lighted with weird, twisted candles in the color motif.
 Guests were: Ozona, Mmes. L. B. Cox, Joe Pierce, Coleman, Mrs. Monroe G. Cheney and guest; Abilene, Mmes. That Reminds Me

ing to close or are we not. That's the issue.
 Twenty years ago or even less a woman wouldn't think of getting on the highways by herself and hitch-hiking from one end of the country to the other. And if a young girl did it, there would something sure enough be wrong. Yet today it is a common thing to drive along the highway and see women, alone, hitch-hiking . . . going . . . on the road to where? . . . Some of them themselves don't even know where they are going, but they are on their way. What a change of the times. We only hope that NRA will solve that problem.

Eastland, first, last and all the time. Its your town and our town. Stay with it, buy in it, keep it before you from here on out. And by the way, there's a little matter of a bank for Eastland to still be settled—bad English we know, but what's the difference, just so we get a bank? And don't forget, the stores are arming of everything you need, and at the right price, and with service that you will appreciate. Here goes, until next time . . . thanks.

Rex Clark May Be In Game Against North Dakota U.

FORT WORTH, Nov. 7.—Rex Clark, hard-hitting line-plunger of the T. C. U. football team showed the Baylor Bears a pair of elusive hips although the Frogs did come home with the little end of the score.

Clarks watchful eye picked several holes in the Baylor line at times when the Frogs were showing bursts of brilliancy and many times the Eastland lad brought the 5000 fans gasping to their feet, as he weaved in and out of the Baylor secondary defense.
