"GASOLINE TAXES SHOULD BE LEFT TO STATES," CAPPER

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas appears to be a level headed individual. He has introduced a bill calling for the repeal of the one cent a gallon federal gasoline tax. To be brief and obtain results he passed it on as a rider to the house revenue bill. His argument "Gasoline taxes should be left to the states." On the surface of things it is shown that the sales tax system or method of raising revenue has been left to the states by the federal government. However, as a revenue raising plan it has not been popular with lawmakers of many states although Illinois, the third state in population and wealth, enacted the sales tax as the swiftest method of meeting the deficit in cost of government.

STATE CONTROL OF PUBLIC UTILITIES

A very important bill ran the gauntlet of its opponents and strenuous opposition in the final showdown of the special session of the Texas lawmakers. It was the adoption of a conference report on a bill to empower incorporated cities and towns to fix public utilities rates. It was adopted by both houses by a majority sufficient to put it into immediate effect if it receives the approval of Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson. An amendment adopted by the senate limiting the authority for the prescribing of maximum rates only was stricken from the bill by the conference committee. Regardless of praise or criticism the special session was a history-making body. It drew to the Capital City for a period of 30 days representatives of many industries "for or against pending measures" and the lobbies of the hotels and the corridors of the capitol building were well lined with visitors from major and minor Texas cities from major and minor Texas cities from the beginning of the session to its finish "long after the hour of midnight."

SPEAKING OF STATE GASOLINE TAXES

Another important decision has been passed out by the supreme court of the United States. Contractors engaged on federal river and harbor improvements are subject to state gasoline taxes. The court of last resort sustained a tax of 5 cents a gallon imposed by Louisiana on gasoline brought into that state by the Trinity Farm construction company of Dallas, for use in the construction of levees along the Mississippi river. It appears that the rights of the sovereign state were not abrogated when Robert E. Lee surrendered his sword to the victorious Grant at Appomattox Court House.

We do not see anything in the international situation that war may not break out at any time, but it takes money and plenty of it to carry on a war on a modern scale and none of the saber-rattlers have much of it. We are quite convinced that they would not get much of it from the powers that have it.

Persian Believes He Could Find Ruins of Ark

FORT WORTH—David George, a 32-year-old Persian grocer here, is convinced that if he could return to his father's estate in Mesopotamia he could find remnants of Noah's Ark on the summit of Mount Ararat. A shy, retiring man, George, who was born in Mesopotamia, lives alone in an upstairs room across the street from his store. As he talked, a Bible lay on his pillow. In it were numerous underscored lines and verses, especially in the Book of Genesis, where he has found what he believes to be proof that he is sole heir to the ark. The young Persian was reared in Mesopotamia. His parents were Presbyterian missionaries and as a youth George studied for missionary work. While he was engaged in his theological study both his parents, his two brothers and two sisters were massacred by Turks. George came to America in 1917. He continued his studies, later graduating from the Presbyterian seminary at Austin, Texas. He came here to enter the ministry in 1926, and later began his business career by selling apples at the Y. M. C. A. building. Quietly and with characteristic confidence, he pointed out his reasons for believing that he could find remnants of the ark on his father's estate, if any remnants survive the 6,000 years since, according to Biblical conception, Noah landed his ark. The town of Hashton, near the base of Mount Ararat means "eight" when translated, George pointed out, probably founded by eight human occupants of the ark at the end of the flood when they descended the mountain. On the east side of Ararat is Reshan, which means to "give thanks." Noah and his family gave a burnt offering to God for deliverance from the flood, George pointed out. George also recalls olive trees at the base of the mountain near his home, which he believes is Ararat. It was from similar trees that Noah's doves plucked leaves to bring back to the ark, telling him the waters were receding. The young minister-grocer has hoped of returning some day to the land of his birth to make explorations or perhaps to head a searching party. His two greatest difficulties at present, he said, is because the tribes of Mesopotamia are barbarous and vicious and because he does not yet have sufficient funds to finance such an undertaking. For a man who always wants to get to the bottom of things, you can't beat Dr. William Beebe, the undersize naturalist. He's going to explore the ocean depths again, near Bermuda.

Entomologists Winning Fight Against Insects

HOUSTON.—Although outnumbered billions to one state entomologists are winning their fight against insects that destroy crops, attack livestock and carry disease. Reports made here by members of the Texas Entomological society revealed advancement on several lines against pests that have cost farmers of the southwest millions of dollars annually in products lost or damaged. Cotton wilt and root rot have been traced to their distributing medium by Dr. J. J. Taubenhaus, plant pathologist of the Texas Agricultural Experiment station at College Station. Cotton wilt is positively a result of insect migration, he said, but insects have nothing to do with root rot. The pink cotton boll worm has been confined to West Texas, said Prof. W. E. Hinds of Baton Rouge, Louisiana state entomologist and a past president of the American Society of Economic Entomologists. Centralized, the worms can be controlled to the maximum good of the southwest cotton farmers, he said. One of the greatest victories against the insects has been in Louisiana, Hinds said, where a treatment costing about $1 an acre has been developed to combat the sugar cane moth borer. By use of the treatment farmers have realized increased revenue of from $15 to $25 an acre, his report showed. Rev. G. Birkman, 80, of Huffman, is one of the oldest bug fighters in Texas. He became interested in entomology 50 years ago and has been active in that hobby in Texas for 46 years. He continued it through his service as a Lutheran minister in Lee county and during his 12 years since retirement.

Whose Fault?

Fitful Sleep or Bad Dreams

Fitful slumber and those bad dreams are sometimes caused by eating things hard to digest, or by too near bedtime. But a more common cause is constipation. If you are constipated, a child can't get the whole system becomes clogged. You just can't give the body a cathartic at such an hour. (Laxatives of adult strength never suitable for children.) Next column for a way to make a child comfortable for the night, and insure the needed movement next morning:

To turn a nervous, wakeful child into a peaceful little slumberer, try two teaspoonsful of a delicious fruity syrup you can get from any druggist. Just have him to give you a bottle of California Syrup of Figs. Any boy or girl will love its taste. It starts at once to sweeten a sour, bilious system; and next morning, after moving about, the child will have a thorough, natural bowel action from the gentle action of the senna, if it is the real California Syrup of Figs.

Wedding Anniversary

probably had a large number of friends in Ranger, Caddo, Kennerly and other towns in immediate vicinity, many of whom had been invited and had accepted the invitation, to partake of dinner at noon.

"Well," he said, "I don't know how big an affair it is going to be, but we are arranging to feed anyone who comes out as long as food lasts and all of our friends are welcome. We are making plans for quite a crowd, and hope that we will have enough around. We would like to see you join us, too."

Mr. Barksley spoke lightly of 50 years he had been married, though it was a common occurrence. Mrs. Barksley was busy preparing for the big day Thursday and was not disturbed in order to get her views on the eve of other big event in her active life.

The scene for the big anniversary celebration was ideal. A large, story, neatly-painted farmhouse, just off the Ranger-Caddo highway, which can be seen from yards and porches, sits on a slightly higher than the fields and the adjoining fields, now green with a sprouting grain crop which peacefully grazed the cows which the owner tends. Large and green shrubbery set off the house so that it presents the appearance of a well tended city home. An ideal March day, with spring sunshine, also added to enjoyment of the occasion.

Scores of friends from Breckinridge, Caddo, Eastland, and other towns within a radius of 50 miles gathered during the day to pay their respects to this old couple which has lived together these many years and still preserve their youth to extent that they are in good health, happy and contented with their lot in life.

With a dog being "dognaped" in Caddo, and cats "catnaped" in Eastland, that seems about the way to get into the headlines. The kidnappings of people have become so commonplace.

Greyhound Lines Announce New Fares

New low fares and new improved schedules to Memphis over the Southwest Greyhound Lines were announced this week by A. F. Baldus, traffic manager.

The Memphis route is the direct route from Texas to the East and Southeast. It became a Greyhound route as a result of the merger Nov. 1, 1933, of three large bus companies to form the present company, which operates some 200 buses over a total of 6500 miles of highways in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico, and Oklahoma, with connections to practically every point in the nation.

"The new schedules which the Southwest Greyhound Lines inaugurated this week," Mr. Baldus said, "will mean much better service to the East and Southeast than we have been able to offer since the new company was formed. In spite of this fact, we are pleased to announce that our low fares will not be increased but instead will be reduced still further, in line with Greyhound's recognized policy of providing the finest service at the lowest cost."

ADOPT NEW WORD

BOSTON.—A new word has been coined by the governor's committee on street and highway safety. It was explained by the committee that when a person is called a "perseverator" it means sluggishness in adapting himself to an automobile different from the one accustomed to driving. The ROMANTIC RUNAWAY

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Pablito knows nothing of his parents—a titled Englishman and a servant girl. He makes his home with a girl named Estelle. He was a murderer years ago. Now, when a guest at Pablito's sees him and recognizes him Pablito, dressed as a tenniser, goes to a newspaper to tell his home to see Estelle. There is a tender love scene between them.

The same night Pablito strikes a match he has seen mistreating a child. He thinks the man is dead. He goes to the man's house and sees this. The next thing Pablito knows he is in a motor boat with three men. Beau has gone and tells Pablito to head the boat for Cuba.

CHAPTER XIII

THE sea was calm and Pablito had reason for his pride in the "Silver Dart." Soon Pablito saw what the man and girl beside him could not see—an indent of water cupped between jagged rocks and leading upward to a deserted stretch of beach. Beyond the yellow sand was a deep green tangle of tropic jungle.

The water was growing shallow and the going was perilous. Pablito knew. Lottie and Beau quarreled mildly, unaware of the danger. Pablito turned the speed low. Lottie was saying, "What the hell are we going to do with this here Leviathan?"

"Turn it over and hope to God it'll drift to sea," Beau answered. "It's a damn shame," the girl muttered. "It's a swell boat!"

It wouldn't be so swell to be caught in it," Beau told her. The boat scraped a rock and poised for a second, far tilted to one side. Lottie's eyes grew frightened but she made no sound. Beau swore. Pablito turned off the engine, stepped out on the rock, pushed the boat off and leaped back into it. Once more he turned the power on. They could not go much farther. He knew, but he wanted to see well out of the water in which sharks might be swimming before he began to pilot the open skiff. Again the boat struck a rock, this time squarely under the prow and so sharply that it vibrated from the shock. Again Beau swore loudly; again Lottie made no sound but her hands gripped one another until her knuckles were white.

Pablito saw a natural channel ahead as he stepped out this time. If he could make it he could get within 100 feet of shore. Slowly and carefully he needed the boat through an opening as Beau screeched high and shrill that he couldn't make it. Then Pablito turned off the engine to sit back.

"All change at Manhattan Junction," Lottie said.

"We'll get you to shore and send the boat out," Beau said, eyes on Lottie. Pablito rolled up his flared trousers, sitting them in order to pull them high on his thighs. Then he stepped into the water "I'll carry you," he said to Lottie. She smiled as she held out her arms and he lifted her over the edge of the boat.

"Oh, baby!" she murmured ecstatically as her arms tightened round his neck.

"I was a difficult feat, getting Lottie to land. She was heavy and the way was perilous. The rocks were slippery and the sands washed by the tide, were shifting and deceiving. The sun beat down fiercely and Beau swore as he followed. Once he fell and once Pablito slipped out he did not fall. At last he set Lottie down on the beach, wiping his dripping brow with a sea sponge. Lottie said closer to Pablito. "You're a good sport," she said and her voice was almost soft.

"Hike for cover, kid," Beau ordered. Father stiffly and after a warm glance at Pablito the girl made her way up the precipitous beach toward the tangle of green. Again Pablito and Beau waded, pulled by the undertow and betrayed by the changing levels of the sea bed. At last they reached the rocky beach and found more difficulties.

Beau stood swearing which was his way of showing that he was balked. Pablito, eyes on the boat, considered.

"I'll take her out," he said at length, "put on a low power and head her toward Key West. I'll run out enough gasoline so that she'll go only 10 or 15 miles. Then if she washes back it isn't likely it will be to this shore."

"Hell!" said Beau admiringly. "We can string up a signal," Pablito went on. "That will look as if we had been calling for help." He crawled into the boat as he spoke. Working quickly, he tied to a small improvised mast his broad scarlet sash.

"How are you going to get back?" Beau asked.

"Swim and wade I guess."

"Ain't there sharks around here?"

"I suppose so but what are we going to do about it?"

PABLITO turned on a low speed then nudged the boat through the rocks once more. When he was in the open at last he stopped to exhaust the gasoline and sense his direction. Then he started the craft, stepped quickly to the prow and leaped into the churning water.

When he could think of anything except the struggle with the churning water and rocks he felt Beau's hand.

"All right!" Beau gasped. He had swam out to meet Pablito. "It's not much farther," he said a moment later. Then Pablito, with a turn, found the uneven sea bed. At last they were wading, driven and pulled and twisted by the water, but making headway.

Lottie, despite Beau's order, stood on the beach waiting for them.

"Honest to Gawd," she said as they joined her, weak and heavy with water. "Honest to Gawd that got my goat!"

The cover of trees and dense undergrowth protected them. On the beach Pablito saw fat lizards blinking their beady, glittering eyes in the sun and a spider four inches across with red markings. In the wood Pablito pulled the undergrowth away from a spot that was high and dry and after beating it hard with his water-soaked jacket told Lottie she

What A. T. & T. means to your Telephone service

Good service at fair cost is the aim. The men and women who furnish your telephone service here could not do that job so well without the help of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, parent company of the Bell System.

Operating Methods are Improved

If a better way of doing a job gives better telephone service on the Pacific Coast, it may work equally well in the cities and towns of this state. A. T. & T. staff experts and engineers search constantly for these economies and improvements... test them... study them. The perfected result is offered to aid the 24 Bell operating companies give a nation-wide telephone service, uniformly good and fair in cost.

Construction Projects are Financed

To give good service, millions are spent each year to keep pace with the public's constantly changing demand for telephone service. Instead of obtaining the funds for scores of such projects individually, the operating companies bring their problems to A. T. & T., where the combined projects are financed on a nation-wide basis at substantial savings in interest rates and financing costs.

Faster Long Distance Service

Nation-wide long distance service, fast and dependable, would be almost impossible without the long distance lines operated by A. T. & T., which owns and maintains the trunk lines that link the territories of the operating companies.

FOR YOU... Good Service at Fair Cost

THE many services of which these are typical, mean an actual saving of millions of dollars to the operating companies... and to telephone users. For the telephone service is planned for the long pull, and such savings have for more than 50 years been devoted not to swelling profits, but to hold low the cost of good service to the telephone user.

This policy springs, in a sense, from self-interest, since it is based upon the belief that what is best for the telephone user is in the end the policy that will bring us the surest, most enduring measure of success.

Beautiful day. Peach trees in full bloom, and other trees putting out little tiny green balls that will soon become full grown leaves. This is one time that we hope that old man crimp will stay up there in his home grounds and browse around on the ice that he keeps permanently as a souvenir for his power. Those little cool puffs that he sends down occasionally are always welcome, but give us spring time now in all its glory and in earnest. So if we don't get any more cold weather, watch the old a bank opens its doors in Eastland we will see things in their true light as to exactly how much we have suffered financially as a result of not having a bank. It is gratifying to note the constant increasing interest that is being manifested for a bank for Eastland, and the occasion of the necessity. Many skeptical remarks that were heard several months ago have almost completely disappeared as to whether a bank would pay or not in Eastland. The tables have turned, the people want one, they will support it; and if we

A Low Watermark Endangered Fish By United Press STEUBENVILLE, Ohio.—Fish story or no, Capt. Joseph Green, superintendent of dam No. 10 on the Ohio river here, said recently that the river had been so low "fish had to stand on their heads and drink between cakes of ice." Rivermen reported the stream lower than at any time since 1907. Heavy ice, they said, made it impossible to keep river dams in place, accounting for the low stage. Indian Put on Spot While Cooking Clams BAKERSFIELD, Calif.—Scouted before his small fire, baking a mess of clams for his dinner, John Yokut, Tualumpju Indian, was "put on the spot," authorities disclosed today. Three stone-tipped arrows were fired into the back of his head and a fourth into his spinal column at the base of the brain. The murder occurred several hundred years ago. It was discovered when Smithsonian Institution archeologists found John's skull on the shore of ancient Buena Vista lake. John apparently never moved from his position in front of the fire, they said. The remains of the fire, they fossilized clams, and the victim's skeleton all were discovered just as the assassins left them.
