A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

OUR BURDEN BEARER: Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee; he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.—Psalm 55: 22.

TRANSFORMATION OF A NATION'S HOPES

A year ago we in Texas struggled haltingly toward the holiday period and toward the climax of economic chaos, with only the prospect of a change at Washington holding forth a hope of stability.

Conditions were getting steadily worse, as President Hoover called in the Wiggins, Mitchell, Vanderlip, Mellon crowd to contribute their disinterested services to the financial crisis.

How vast the change! Now, with confidence restored, hope revived, the nation is going ahead in practical dealing with the heritage of grief, with plans for the recovery. The nation is being guided toward the goal of social prestige, instead of being dragged along by government-supported privilege and self-serving.

The people of America, freed from domination of powerful, ruthless privilege, freed from governmental control impotent in the hands of the privileged class it recognized and paid homage to, have worked out to a degree the beginning of their own recovery. Immeasurably, they have been aided, guided and inspired by a government that now represents the people, understands and shares their burdens and their problems.

The New Year now we may look to a time of rejoicing, not of dread and apprehension. We rejoice with the jobless of last year that they are at work; with the helpless and infirm that they are being cared for; with the small business man that he is guaranteed the right to live; with industry that it shares better days precisely in that it is shorn of the element of exploiting; with the mothers of America, that they and their children are not condemned to the profiteer's sweatshop; with the public officials, that confidence in them and their leadership has been restored; even with the spokesmen and leaders of religious thought, that their altruistic teachings are now merged with practical achievement toward their high goal of human happiness.

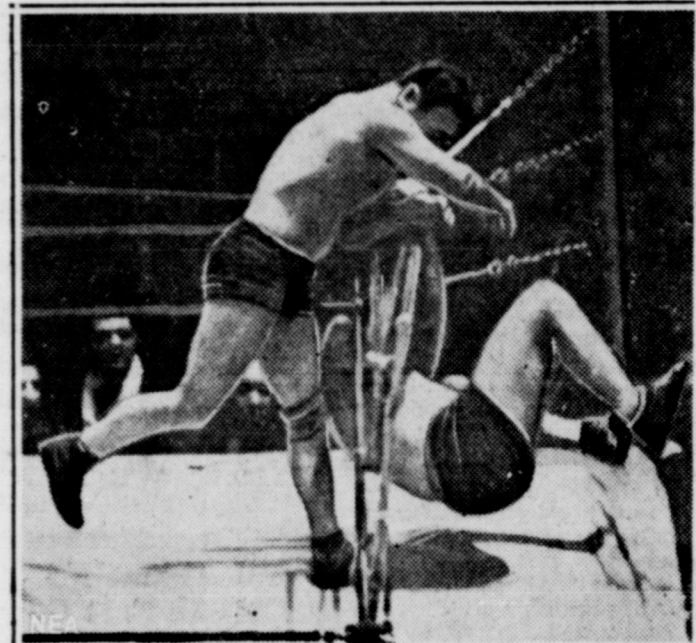

This New Year we may ask: "What is government for?" and in the answer, "The happiness of a people," we may find our own government true to that lodestar, rather than the ghastly parody of 1929-32.

The business man who does not believe in newspaper advertising is not destined to travel very far on the road to success.

A Real Advance in Motor Car Engineering

New Dual Carburetion and Dual Intake Manifold add to power and economy of the New Ford V-8 for 1934. LIKE a pair of lungs for this powerful motor, this new system of carburetion and intake supplies vaporized gasoline evenly to all eight cylinders. Two distinct advantages result from it: 1. More even compression of fuel, giving still greater power, faster acceleration, quicker starting and smoother performance in cold weather. 2. More complete utilization of fuel, more miles to the gallon of gasoline, with consequent economy. Crankcase dilution is reduced to a minimum, thereby conserving oil with still further economy in operation. Increased efficiency at less cost is a notable achievement. Yet it is only one of many improvements which distinguish this new and greater Ford V-8 for 1934. Clear-vision Ventilation. Constant Supply of Fresh Air without Drafts or Obstruction to View. As perfected in the New Ford, this system of ventilation operates efficiently at all speeds, winter or summer. In cold or stormy weather, the new adjustable window ventilators can be opened the desired amount to provide fresh air. Individual control on front door and rear-quarter windows enables passengers to obtain desired ventilation without causing discomfort to others. Windshield and windows do not fog when ventilators are opened. In warm weather, the windshield—which opens—and the cowl ventilator provide additional fresh air. Nicknames and Hoodoos Pursue Basketball Stars

AUSTIN—Nicknames and hoodoos pursue University of Texas basketball players despite what a startling line-up and play-by-play account of the game may reveal, according to reports from the campus here.

The fan who rises in glee when Captain Ronald Fagan makes a perfect shot from the middle of the court, may not know he is rooting for "Six." Captain Fagan got the nickname from the confidential tone in his voice.

He wears only one knee-pad during warm-up practice before a game. To wear two might effect his luck.

Jack Gray, the Wills Point lad with the crazily accurate sidearm shot, is known as "Short Pants" to his comrades. It all came about from his wearing knickers. Gray usually rubs the team manager's head for luck before a game.

Glenn Thompson is "Pee Wee" because of his size. He is said to oil his hands before every game, and to carry a New Testament on every basketball trip.

Paul Wittman, star guard, is "Banann Nose" to his team-mates who think he bears one striking resemblance to Jimmy Durante. Wittman blows his nose seven times—a "natural"—before a game.

Jean Francis, who puts every player on the back before entering a game, is sometimes called "Percy." He has a very aristocratic and intellectual look about him when he wears glasses to class.

Then there is Bonnie Ruedell, veteran guard, whose pet hoodoo is to count the blades in the first row. What it all means none quite knows.

Marshall Pennington became known as "Colonel" when he wore a whisker-like bandage on his chin. He usually places the extra basketballs three players from the coach before entering a game.

There also is Demoye Paulk, tall center, known as "Tree Top," and Claude Harris, who became "Cloudy" since that first day the coach mispronounced his first name.

New Town Will Be Organized

DALWORTHINGTON, Texas.—The name of this town doesn't appear on the Texas map, nor has it been granted a municipal charter, but within many weeks it offers promises of being the busiest town in the United States where the citizens actually are happy and contented.

Dalworthington is the prospective subsistence colony planned by President Roosevelt's new deal system and recently approved at Washington for immediate construction.

Location of the site for construction has been selected 15 miles southeast of Arlington, midway between Dallas and Fort Worth. For lack of a better name someone juggled the names of the three towns and formed Dalworthington.

Within a short time a home in the country should be ready for approximately 100 families in Dallas and Tarrant counties.

Walter B. Scott, Fort Worth attorney, already has taken steps to obtain a charter, after which $250,000 to build the colony will be available, he said.

Final inspection of the 640-acre tract has been completed by Scott, Dr. C. C. Taylor, deputy supervisor of the NIRA subsistence colony division; Hugo Kuhn, supervising architect; Harry Newton, landscape architect; and Francis J. Clair, resident engineer in charge of construction.

All stock in the colony corporation, to be known as Dalworthington Gardens, Inc., will be owned by the government, William E. Easterwood Jr., Dallas, chairman of the board of directors, said.

Selection of the "first citizens" was to be announced at a later date.

The UNKNOWN BLOND

By Laura Lou BROOKMAN

BEGAN HERE TODAY

DAVID BANNISTER undertakes to find out who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader. Bannister is an author and former newspaper man. His work on the murder case with GALE, star reporter on the Post.

Those connected are JULIET FRANCE, blond, pretty and known to have visited King shortly before his death; HERMAN SCHLACH, who wrote King a threatening letter; JOE PARROTT, down-and-out vaudeville actor. It is also known that MELVIN HOLLISTER, old-fashioned spinster, had quarrel with King recently.

AL DRUGAN, friend of King is found dead in a wrecked automobile.

Bannister persuades the police to let Juliet come to his home, ostensibly as a guest on the theory that if the girl likes herself free they can learn more about her.

Melvin Hollister is found strangled in the apartment where he lived with her brother. He threw her dead body from his balcony to $150,000.

A man and woman Bannister has never seen before call to Juliet.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLII

BANNISTER hesitated an instant and then said, "Won't you come in?"

The man and woman entered the house. The woman was small and slender and young looking. She wore a long coat of black fur and a small black hat.

The man was older, squarely built. His dark overcoat, the hat in his hand, everything about him looked expensive. He said brusquely, "My name's Stuart—Elbert Stuart—and this is my wife. Isn't Miss France here? They told us we'd find her here."

His voice was brusque and rather loud. There were foot-prints in the living room and then Juliet France appeared, framed in the doorway.

"Juliet!" the woman cried, rushing forward. Their arms were around each other. Juliet France kissed the newcomer. She said, "Oh, Helen—!" and then kissed Stuart again.

Stuart spoke up. "I don't know if you realize what you've done, Juliet," he said sternly. "We've had a terrible time trying to find you. I don't know what could have possessed you! You should have thought of your parents—"

The girl raised her head quickly. "Do they know?" she demanded.

"Well—we've managed to keep it from them so far. But your sister's been nearly frantic. I don't know what could have made you do a thing like this!"

Bannister had been looking from one to the other, trying to make out what was happening. Suddenly Juliet France remembered him. She turned.

"This is my sister," she explained, "and her husband, Helen. This is Mr. Bannister. He and his aunt have been so wonderful to me. They've taken me into their home and done so much for me."

Stuart stepped forward. "I'd like to have a talk with Mr. Bannister," he said. "Can you girls leave us alone for a little while?"

Juliet looked at her sister. "We'll go upstairs," she said. "Arm in arm, they went up the stairs."

"Come in here," Bannister invited, motioning toward the living room. He led the way and Elbert Stuart followed.

"No doubt," the newcomer began when he was seated, "I should explain this intrusion. On behalf of my wife's family I want to thank you for all you have done for Miss France."

"But I'm afraid I don't understand!"

STUART waved this aside. "That's why I thought you would have this talk. My wife and I arrived in Tremont just a few hours ago. Our home is in Chicago. I'm a lawyer, Mr. Bannister." He added confidentially, "Cook, Hartridge and Stuart left Chicago last night after I read this—"

He fumbled in a pocket of his coat and drew out a crumpled newspaper clipping which he handed to Bannister. It was a tidily written account of Tremont's recent murder, with the name of Juliet France, the "mysterious, blond suspect" prominently featured.

"My wife and I were not sure," Stuart went on, "that the girl mentioned in that newspaper account was really Juliet until we arrived here. But Mrs. Stuart as worried and nothing would do but we must make the trip. He shook his head sadly. "This is a terrible thing!" he went on. "Terrible! I don't know what will happen if Juliet's parents ever find out about it!"

Bannister had been eying him perplexedly. "How did you know that Miss France was here?" he asked.

"They told us at police headquarters. Your Chief—Henley, I believe the name is. We had a long talk with him. I satisfied him completely that Miss France could not possibly have had anything to do with the serious charges against her. I explained that her conduct was the result of a girlish prank and while that does not make it less reprehensible—"

Bannister interrupted. "Just who is Miss France?" he asked. The other's eyebrows rose. "Don't you know?"

Bannister shook his head. "No," he said. "Miss France hasn't wanted to talk about herself and I didn't like to ask questions."

"You took her into your home—a girl arrested on a murder charge—without knowing who she was?" Elbert Stuart's gaze was incredulous.

"This is my aunt's home," Bannister reminded him. "I thought she'd be a good deal more comfortable here than—where she was. And you still haven't told me who she is."

STUART cleared his throat. "Miss France," he said, "is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. France of Evanston. The younger daughter. She's had every advantage a girl could have—expensive schools, travel, social advantages—but she's headstrong. Spoiled is what I call it. Allowed to have her own way too much of the time. I suppose that's how she became acquainted with this orchestra leader, Tracy King."

Bannister straightened but he did not speak.

"I don't know where she met him," Stuart went on, "but I don't think it could have been while she was at home. She's away often, visiting with friends. I understand King was good-look-

That Reminds Me

It takes to make ice. That being the case, home fires were burning in profusion and "heavies" are the popular apparel for the time being. Perhaps the dry goods stores will wipe out their supply of coats and go into the spring season with no carry overs. Any way, we've got the kind of weather we should have and if this will be followed up with a good rain or a heavy six or seven inch fall of snow it will finish the job in an ideal manner. We need rain and need it badly from one end of this country to the other. That's still in the offing.

Over 80 per cent of the candy makers are women.

Responsibility-

NINE times out of ten you will find that the man who advertises in The Telegram is the man who most willingly returns your money if you are not satisfied.

He has too much at stake to risk losing your trade or your confidence. You can depend on him.

He is not in business for today or tomorrow only—but for next year and ten years from next year. He knows the value of good will.

Don't miss the advertisements in The Telegram. This very day they call your attention to values that tomorrow you will be sorry you overlooked.

You get better merchandise at a fairer price than he could ever hope to sell it if he did not have the larger volume of business that comes from legitimate advertising and goods that bear out the promise of the printed word.
