WASHINGTON BY GEORGE DURNO
Stripping
 On occasion Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, Chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, finds it necessary to leave his huge social laboratory in the south and come to Washington for conference and report. To save time he frequently flies. When he does, it is his custom to study the landscape hurrying past below. Take it from the good Doctor, he sees many things that are all wrong—and he also sees a vision of the future.

There is one West Virginia county in particular that rouses Morgan's ire. He calls it a "ghastly monument to rugged individualism." Some years back men with money and business acumen moved into this county. They bought up all land in sight dirt cheap. They stripped it of all its natural resources with never a thought of the future. Then they took their huge profits and went back to the bright lights. Behind them these ruthless exploiters left a native population—dazed by a few years of comparative prosperity—to starve slowly to death. Everything of value is gone from their land and so are the men who once distributed the weekly payrolls.

A little town in Tennessee not so far from where Morgan is fashioning his experimental yardstick is in similar plight. Its factories and mills are closed because surrounding resources had been rooted up and exhausted to produce a maximum of profit in a minimum of time. A young woman who inherited the bulk of the spoils is now traveling leisurely around the world. The money is safe in a great eastern bank. Men of this town became so despondent.

Have Risen To Within 5 Pct. Of 1914 Levels

Richberg Reports To President Of Progress Of AAA
 WASHINGTON (AP)—Donald Richberg reported to President Roosevelt Wednesday farm prices have risen to within 5 per cent of the "pre-war parity"—meaning the real price level of 1910 to 1914 as measured in terms of purchasing power—which the administration has been striving to reach. The head of the President's executive council made plain his figures included benefit payments, farms had received through the AAA. He also stressed that the drought had slashed some major crops, "therefore high prices do not mean a fully corresponding increase in farm income." The report declared farm income this year appears likely to exceed 1933 by about 19 per cent.

WHEN WE LAST AWAKEN TO FIGHT MISFORTUNE

It is a queer quirk of fate that the worst drought in modern times should hit us just as we are trying to drag ourselves out of our worst depression.

Industry collapses, and what do we do? We adopt action that we had never used before; we subject industry to government control, put millions of people on federal pay-rolls, spend enormous sums on public works, revalue our currency, and make millions of dollars in loans available direct from the public till.

We go farther; we begin great experiments such as those in the Tennessee valley, we spend millions on subsistence homesteads, we talk of decentralizing industry and moving workers out of city slums into semi-rural surroundings—all in the hope that we can somehow rearrange our life together so that we need not suffer this way again.

On the heels of this, along comes a terrific drought. Dust clouds rise from the beds of watercourses, broad lakes turn into dry plains, green fields turn brown. So we put engineers to work building dams and impounding streams, we have our foresters begin the creation of a forest that will reach from Canada to Mexico, we talk of shifting hundreds of thousands of people from land that may never be green again to regions which irrigation schemes will turn from desert into farmland.

Once again, we are trying to rearrange the existence system so that a cataclysm like this need not happen again.

Now here is the most interesting part of it all. Both of these disasters, drought and depression, are the so-called "acts of God," pure and simple—natural events which could neither be prevented nor ameliorated.

Now, however, we have begun to realize that we helped bring them on ourselves. We invited the depression by unwise speculation, by a poor distribution of the fruits of prosperity, by imperfect alignment of our economic machinery. We invited the drought by devouring our timber, by exploiting

Sinclair 1 Davis Gains, Calif. 1 Bell Acidizes Again

Completion of Illinois Oil Co.'s No. 1-B Davis at 2,826 feet for 680 barrels of oil the first 24 hours after shooting, the swabbing of a greater amount of oil by Sinclair-Prairie No. 1 Davis as it deepened to 2,787 feet and the second acid treatment of The California Co.'s No. 1 Bell were among principal oil developments last week in Howard county.

Cleared out only to within 250 feet of the bottom, Illinois No. 1-B Davis was flowing by heads a daily average of 400 barrels. It was shot the week before with 1,000 quarts from 2,430 to 2,825 feet. Location is 2,310 feet from the north and west lines of section 2, block 30, township 1 south, T&P Ry. Co. survey, 660 feet west of Illinois No. 1-A Davis, which recently was completed to 2,800 feet, 12 hours after a shot. It extended production three-quarters of a mile northwest.

The leases on which both wells are located were purchased in July by the Illinois, owned by Tyler (Tex.) and Chicago interests, from Stacy B. Dorn, of Fort Worth and Dr. G. T. Hall of Big Spring. Production by both Illinois Nos. 1-A and 1-B Davis is larger than that of wells to the south and indicates that much valuable new territory has been opened. Illinois is drilling a third test, its second in the northeast quarter of section 2, block 30, No. 1 Logan, 990 feet from the north line and 2,310 feet from the east line of the section and 1,320 feet north of its No. 1-A Davis. No. 1 Logan last week was running 10-inch casing at 738 feet in redrock to shut off a hole full of water from 715-25 feet.

Four Others in Area Busy
Iron Mountain Oil Co.'s No. 1 Read, almost one mile north of the Illinois producers and 330 feet out of the southeast corner of section 46, block 30, township 1 south, T&P Ry. survey, had drilled to 415 feet in redrock. Sinclair-Prairie No. 1 Davis, 2,309 feet from the south line and 2,319 feet from the east line of section 2, block 30, township 1 south, T&P Ry. survey, was credited with making around 50 barrels of oil daily as it drilled to 2,787 feet in lime. The week before, when drilled to 2,650 feet, it swabbed 20 barrels daily. It had a showing of oil at 2,420 feet, 400 feet of oil in the hole at 2,485 feet and filled to 1,000 feet after getting an increase at 2,513 feet. Phillips No. 1 Lane, 2,310 feet from the south line and 990 feet from the east line of section 2, block 30, ran 8 1/4-inch casing.

TIGER ISLAND
A THRILLING SEA STORY BY GOUVERNEUR MORRIS
Doomed by the scheming WONG BO, the old tramp steamer Boldero headed toward Tiger Island. Had HARVEY BOWERS, big game hunter, and IVY GREEN, keeper of the ship's seagoing menagerie, known what lay ahead, the name of this volcanic islet off the Borneo coast might have seemed prophetic. ...
Meanwhile their romance flourished before the jealous eye of young FLINT, the wireless operator and sharer with WONG BO of the secret of the insurance pirates. The absorbing story shows Gouverneur Morris at his best, a master in handling thrilling action, breath-taking suspense, startling climaxes.

Daily Herald's New Serial...Starting Wednesday, Aug. 29th

TIGER ISLAND

A New Serial by Gouverneur Morris.

Chapter One 200 SHIP

HE S. S. Boldero, Captain Wong Bo, flying the flag of the Chinese Republic, had put in on board.

to the little port of Sinbao because of sick- The Boldero was of an ancient vintage. It seemed incredible that she had ever been trim and new. She was a tramp; she had no regular run. Upon the hint of remunerative cargo, Captain Wong Bo was ready to go anywhere at any time.

At the moment she was carrying a miscellaneous cargo of goods to Singapore and a very special deck-cargo of birds, reptiles and mammals. A blind man coming within a hundred yards of the Boldero on a still day would have known as much. She reeked with menagerie smells.

This was not the fault of Angus McLeod, who had collected the beasts upon order and speculation. He was a man to whom cleanliness and thrift were very close to godliness.

but he had labored under a handicap. The two Chinamen whose duty it was to keep the cargo clean and neat down the forward cargo-deck where they were ranged, had various disqualifications.

One of them was a lazy fellow who could not be driven, and the other was afraid of everything but the sea, birds. All reasonable persons are afraid of tigers. But he was afraid also of the honey-bee and even of the little Rhesus monkey.

In addition to these two visible handicaps, McLeod for three or four days had been suffering from an invisible handicap, which hurt him cruelly. It had started with a chill on a night when the thermometer stood at 102 degrees Fahrenheit. This chill had been followed by a general sense of abdominal discomfort. There was a pain, but one could not put one's finger on it. It was not so much one pain as an infinite number of small flinching pains. Gradually these drew together into a focus on the right side of his abdomen and rather he lay down.

McLeod was forty-five years of age, a strong man who had lived a hard life, but to have seen him at his work of feeding and tending his collection of wild things, you would have thought him an old man bent with age.

In the game he had diagnosed his trouble correctly, but he had hoped that the sudden inflammation would subside and that without wasting any more time or money, he could make Singapore. But, the inflammation growing more acute, he ordered Captain Wong Bo into Sinbao, where there was a little Dutch hospital with an excellent reputation.

In that heat and humidity, Captain Wong Bo looked cool and serene. He was tall for a Chinaman smooth and heavy. It would not have been possible to guess his age within ten years. He was dressed in a tunic and trousers of white duck, and he wore a tropic helmet. If you had watched him for a little while, even without examining his face, you would have known that he was a Chinaman. Concealed somewhere in his right sleeve was a small folding fan.

He was wondering why the white man on the mattress below there couldn't keep still. He wondered how long it would be before the port doctor, whose launch was at the adjacent piling company with the customs-wharf, came aboard; and he was hoping that the meswhere the Chinese sailor swathed her, beaching in hand. In addition to the doctor, the launch contained another white man. Captain Wong Bo and Mr. Flint met them at the head of the ladder. Dr. Van Reuter was brisk, plump, manly, efficient, young, blond, smooth-shaven, and effervescently Dutch. He reached the head of the ladder five steps ahead

"What seems to be the matter," asked Van Reuter. of his companion, and after a quick nod of greeting, said: "Where is the sick man?" "This way, Doctor," said Captain Wong Bo. "I think too damn sick to think pretty soon him die."

"My name is Flint," said Flint. "And what are you doing under the Chinese flag, taking orders from a Chinese captain?" "Well, you see," said Flint, "I am in on the lay. I'm part owner."

"Glad to know you, Flint," said the stranger, extending his hand. "My name is Bowers." Flint was possessed with a sudden boyish excitement which was very becoming to him. "I'd have told you if you hadn't told me. I've seen your picture in magazines. Why, you're famous! Everybody knows you. You're Harvey Bowers, the big-game hunter. The young man's enthusiasm was a little embarrassing to Bowers, and he made an abrupt change of subject.

perate recently that they rioted to secure food. The sheriff warned Morgan they were a vicious lot who might better be rounded up once and for all. Yes, Morgan brought 50 of the ringleaders over and put them to work on one of the TVA projects. He says they all are doing well.

Frontier

It is said that America has exhausted her frontiers but Dr. Morgan envisages a new one—a man-made electrical frontier which will beckon with promise to those who were left behind to starve and those who are fighting a hopeless battle for existence in the cities.

Stymie

Sudden birth of the American Liberty League put more than one Democrat in a delicate position. Benedict Crowell, of Cleveland, has been a two-way representative of the New Deal. First as Ohio Director of the National Emergency Council, and second as Regional Director for the Federal Housing Administration.

Bunk

Following the Democratic split in Tennessee comes a split in Texas. Joe Bailey beaten by Senator Connally, is to be mollified by being made national committeeman. But

All of which explains why Dr. Morgan is working so hard in the Tennessee Valley undertaking to make cheap power available over vast areas. He is confident he can prove his point.

Morgan has found that the manners of the college classroom don't go in this business of building dams and transmission lines, model communities and small factories. He has felt the weight of extreme political pressure and been fooled several times by the sharp practices of corporation executives.

And now TVA is adopting hard-boiled tactics in turn. Those seeking to sell their materials have to open their books and prove their quoted prices are fair when they appear exorbitant or collusive.

Incorporation of the Electric Home & Farm Authority was one of TVA's masterstrokes. This government corporation makes possible installment selling of electric refrigerators, ranges and all the other appliances at prices and on terms which will attract people of very modest means.

The charter of EHFA was so broadly drawn it can function anywhere in the United States—and even manufacture and sell itself if it chooses. To date it is confining its activities to the Tennessee Valley area. Agents report brisk sales, so much so that other sections of the country—notably the far Northwest where cheap municipal power abounds—are asking for attention.

TVA has made deals with the giant appliance manufacturers, such as General Electric, to turn out specially designed merchandise. These big corporations naturally are whooping it up for that widespread diffusion of cheap power which seems to be frightening the utilities too so much.

At the moment, TVA is limited to a 300-mile radius from any of its southern power sources. Associate Director David Lillythall is in England, however, studying the British "grid" system. And engineers are laboring in their laboratories on a new method of transmission which can throw an impulse clear around the world with the loss of only one per cent of its power. Dr. Morgan says it is nearing perfection.

With several hundred thousand textile workers committed to an imminent strike there are some background aspects of the organized labor situation in the textile industry worth probing.

The strike call was voted by the United Textile Workers, Thomas F. McMahon, president. Within that big A. P. of L. of-ffiliate is a relatively small but completely autonomous organization which actually has supplied the driving power. It is the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers—the same union that precipitated the bitter and bloody strike at Marion, N. C., some time back.

Emile Rieve is president of the Hosiery Workers. When the full meeting of the United Textile Workers was called a definite movement was set afoot to unseat the more conservative McMahon and put Rieve in his place.

Suddenly the movement evaporated into thin air. McMahon advocated a vote to strike and when it was taken the young and aggressive John Gorman, first vice president, of Providence, R. I., was designated field marshal of the walkout when and if it came.

Oldtimers in the labor movement say Rieve's threat at McMahon's job was a piece of pure strategy designed to force the UTW president into a strike mood and then make sure he didn't actively run it.

Announcement of the Liberty League's arrival brought Crowell to Washington posthaste. He conferred here, there and everywhere with old political friends in an effort to get his bearings. Then he went back to Cleveland.

In the face of this general fund expenditures have been slashed. Standing at $135,475 in 1931, they were cut to $99,255 in 1932, $87,778 in 1933 and $97,274 has been appropriated for that amount in 1934. The revision adopted Tuesday evening will raise the latter amount to $91,274. Commissioners Tuesday evening took under advisement a petition asking the municipality to hire a bond director. No action was takarchitectural firm to design the pool. In this connection the city manager was authorized to "employ a reputable bond attorney to prepare the bond transcript for the issue of revenue bonds for the municipal swimming pool as required by P.W.A., said attorney's compensation not to exceed the amount specified in the application."

Under The Dome At Austin

By GORDON B. SHEARER

AUSTIN—Texas has already begun to pay off its "bread bond" debt. Interest payments on the first series have totaled $53,100. The payments would have been $50,000 but some of the bond holders have failed to send in the interest coupons.

First interest on the second series of relief bonds will be due on Sept. 1. There is money in the state treasury waiting to pay it. There is also being set aside in the treasury a portion of the state income tax to form a fund for retirement of the bonds when the principal becomes due.

Both James V. Allred and Tom F. Hunter had their supporters among state officials who were interested enough to "crutch it" to their political addresses in Austin. Henry C. Meyer of the State Board of Control was out on a crutch to hear Hunter. The next night, Mark Wiginton, secretary of the State Highway Department, was out on crutches to hear Allred. It took an ambulance to get Wiginton to Allred's first Austin speech, made while Wiginton was recovering after an appendicitis operation.

Now that is all over, Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt probably wishes that he had listened to those who suggested that he run for state railroad commissioner, instead of Governor. An effort to get him to announce in that race was made early in the campaign, but he turned a deaf ear to it.

Henry Beck, expert stenographer for the state railroad commission, who takes down testimony at its hearings, is back from a vacation in Northern Mexico with some excellent still and motion pictures. Beck's views of the famous Horse Tail Falls below Monterey are superior to those sold to tourists by the commercial photographers.

Eleven months of legal beer in Texas produced a state revenue of $1,767,973. The report covers the period from Sept. 15, 1933, when the beer act took effect, to Aug. 18, 1934. Of the total income, $760, 000 was from license. The remainder was from the beer tax. Newspaper men who have been covering political speeches in the recent state primary campaign returned to Austin with a pertinent suggestion for getting some sense into campaigns. They are content to let the candidates run wild in the first primary. But, when the run-off opens, they suggest that any candidate be prohibited from making a campaign speech except in joint debate with his adversary. They are serious about it. It would either do away with the mudslinging of the usual race, or bring it to a focus. It would force a candidate to answer his opponent instead of evading him, setting up a straw issue and knocking it over. It would give the people some chance to judge between them. Naturally there would have to be some fair arrangement made for alternating the closing speech and for selection of places for the debates. In a series of 12 debates, each might choose the place for six.

Newspapermen would also welcome a provision that would require candidates to say the same thing in prepared copies of their addresses and in the delivered speeches. It would effectually check efforts to make differing impressions in different parts of the state. Another suggestion is the candidates after hearing the same speech, with slight variations through a campaign, is that they have phonograph records made of the speech, place records of it in sound wagons and send the wagons out to make their campaign.

Col. Ernest O. Thompson, member of the state railroad commission, and Sen. Clint C. Russell remained in Austin so late that they had to make a dash for Amarillo to vote. At Fort Worth an airplane connection cut the time for the long trip.

Boy Is Hurt At Slaughter House

Reneil Chaffin, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Chaffin, received a bad fracture of the jaw Tuesday while holding a beef carcass at the Knapp slaughter house.

He was struck on the point of the chin when a "dog" failed to catch and kicked back. Impact of the blow laid his jaw open and knocked out two teeth, attending physicians said. Reneil was resting well Wednesday afternoon.

Ross Sterling Is Millionaire Again AUSTIN—Former Governor Ross S. Sterling's uphill climb to regain a fortune lost during the two years he was Texas' chief executive passed the $1,000,000 mark Tuesday.

His once great fortune assertedly depleted when he relinquished the governor's chair to Miriam A. Ferguson in January, 1933, Sterling began development of the Miramar Oil corporation, as years before he had started and developed the Humble Oil and Refining company, which he sold in 1924.

Today the Miramar was reorganized into the Sterling Oil and Refining company, with assets listed at $1,033,181.

290 feet from the north and east lines of section 19, block 33, was uplugged Aug. 21.

1-MINUTE SAFETY TALKS By Don Herold

Code for a Motorist

I'll try to match the 60 or 70 or 80 horsepower under my hood with a little horsepower under my hat. I won't get giddy or swellheaded or superior because engineering genius has put into my hands the most marvelous mechanical contraption of all time.

I will consider my car a trust rather than a high-powered toy with which to cut capers and didoes.

I will drive carefully enough for myself and the other fellow, too, because the chances are he won't.

I will imagine an idiot driver coming at me around every curve and over the top of every hill.

I will not leave it to any pedestrian to see that I don't hit him, for I realize he isn't much interested; I'll protect him against his own indifference.

I will not mix alcohol and gasoline; I'll be the only living motorist who admits that a few drinks don't improve his driving.

I'll be the only living motorist not to say "I'm fast, but careful."

I'll observe speed limits, not because I like speed limits, but because I believe in figures and can remember that according to The Travelers Insurance Company nine out of ten accidents due to driving errors resulted from too much haste.

Conservative as it may seem, I'll keep on my side of the road—there were 61,270 accidents on the wrong side last year.

I won't cut in (18,760 accidents last year). I won't pass on the wrong side (7,880 accidents last year). I won't pass standing street cars (3,100).

I'll imagine an absent-minded pedestrian coming out from behind every parked car, and a child darting out for a rubber ball in the middle of every block.

JAMES T. BROOKS STRESSES VALUE OF 1936 CENTENNIAL

Judge James T. Brooks stressed the value of the Texas Centennial celebration planned for 1936 in this state to the citizens and the state as a whole in a splendid address before the Rotary club at its regular Tuesday luncheon at Hotel Settles.

Prefacing his remarks by reciting an interesting review of Texas' history under six flags, Judge Brooks said the centennial would bring thousands of people of the United States to the state for this observance in 1936.

From a financial standpoint, Texas has an opportunity to reap even more money than A Century of Progress Exposition has done for Chicago, and in addition to the monetary value of the centennial, Texas has a real opportunity to show the world its many natural and other resources.
