THREE KILLED IN 50-FOOT BUS PLUNGE

ALL VICTIMS WERE ENROUTE TO EASTLAND AND RANGER ON ILL-FATED BUS ON SATURDAY

Mother of Eastland and Olden Women Is One of Victims, Others Are Wife and Daughter of Farmer Living Northwest of Ranger.

Three people were instantly killed, one was probably fatally injured and three others were less seriously injured when an eastbound Greyhound bus plunged over the overpass on Highway 1, three miles west of Cisco a few minutes before noon Saturday.

The dead are: MRS. MARY ANN HILTON of Abilene, mother of Mrs. C. W. Hoffman of Eastland and Mrs. C. W. Young of Olden.

MRS. ETHEL BONEY, 19, wife of M. C. Boney, who lives 10 miles northwest of Ranger.

A 2-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Boney. The most seriously injured are Ernest Golden, 27, of the San Diego Naval Station, who is not expected to live; Edward T. Swindell, San Angelo; Mrs. G. W. Peacock of Colorado City and Roy Turnbow, Fort Worth, driver of the bus.

Golden's injuries consist of a badly fractured right leg, deep lacerations about the right side of his face and internal injuries. Swindell's injuries are a deep cut about the left side of his face extending to behind his left ear, a cut on the back of the head and possible concussion. Turnbow received only slight injuries around his face and a bruised shoulder.

According to the story of the accident, as told by the bus driver, he left Big Spring at 7 a. m. Saturday, bound for Fort Worth. Mrs. Peacock entered the bus at Colorado City, bound for Corsicana. At Abilene Golden and Swindell were taken on as passengers, Golden enroute to Mena, Ark., on a furlough at his home. Swindell's destination was not known.

At Clyde Mrs. Boney and her 2-months-old daughter boarded the bus, which was due in Cisco at 12:01 and was running on time. As the bus approached the overpass it began to get out of control and the driver slowed down. When he first hit trouble, he said, he was making between 30 and 35 miles an hour up the ramp of the overpass. He brought the bus almost to a stop, with the vehicle swerving from side to side and it nosed into the guard rail, hung a moment and then plunged down.

"We seemed to be floating down to the ground 50 feet below," Turnbow said after the accident. "I remember wondering how long it would last and then remembered hearing of people getting hurt when crushed against a steering wheel, so I slipped out from under it. It struck my shoulder, which was bruised slightly."

The first thing after the crash which Turnbow remembered, he said, was seeing Mrs. Peacock, who was pinned by one leg under the side of the bus. Someone on the roadway of the overpass tossed him a jack and he managed to get her out. He told the passengers who were not seriously hurt to help with the others and asked them to try to get word to Cisco for assistance.

The injured were rushed to a Cisco hospital, where they were being treated for their wounds.

The bus, a fairly new White, 18-passenger machine, was almost completely demolished in the 50-foot plunge to the railroad tracks below the overpass. The machine struck to the west of the tracks, just clear of the right-of-way. Shortly after the accident a T. & P. train passed the scene of the accident, clearing the bus, but did not stop, witnesses said, the engineer apparently not seeing the twisted wreckage of the bus.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

There is need for caution and moderation in everything, and especially in publicity for the purpose of attracting tourists.

I read a very interesting booklet received in the mail today, telling about the captivating beauty spots of a certain part of the world. I happen to know the place. It has no Alladin's lamp nor magic gardens for the tourist to tread upon. There are many more wonderful places in the United States and Canada.

The tourist of today is generally a much traveled and educated person, and a mere fairy tale won't satisfy him. If once duped, he won't return and will tell the world why.

When you plan a trip, you will find plenty of places of interest advertised in the newspapers.

SEE AMERICA FIRST!

EDWARD E. BRODIE, publisher of the Oregon City, Ore., Enterprise, says:

"The merchant who consistently carries on in the columns of his newspaper is the merchant who stays in business.

"The merchant who, in times of depression, cuts his advertising appropriation first of all is in the worst possible position to take advantage of restoration.

"The wise merchant is he who does not permit the buying public to forget him.

"The period of quiet business is the period when the careful buyers—the women—read advertising and follow it!

"But there are merchants who will not advertise when it rains.

"There are others who are discouraged over a snow fall.

"And there are some who are just naturally timid and who will always be in the 2x4 business class.

"The opportunity for individualism in business has not left us.

"The cross-road town, where people pass but do not stop, is the place for stagnant business."

Water Fowls Hatch At Bird Sanctuary

By United Press. HARLINGEN, Texas.—Gross-grotesque fledglings of many species of water fowls are trying their scrawny legs on the sands of Green Island, bird sanctuary in Laguna Madre east of here. Each spring the long-legged herons, the colorful egrets, terns and countless other of the water birds come here to nest. The island is covered now with fluffy youngsters of the annual visitors. Some of the eggs have not yet hatched and visitors to the island may see the awkward new sons and daughters of some of the water fowls stumbling around among the nest on which some of the birds still are sitting. Tree nesting birds have increased on the island, as if sensing the protection it enjoys as a sanctuary watched by the National Audubon society. It is said to have the greatest variety of bird life of any area its size in the world. From the sands on the beach to the stubby grass and the growth of brush and trees the island offers haven for many different kinds of birds. Scientists have come from distant cities to study bird life on the small island.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER. WASHINGTON.—The first big New Deal battleground will be found in Missouri, now that ex-Senator James A. Reed is going to seek nomination and election again. Reed is first of the once important Old Deal Democrats to expose himself to the voters on an anti-New Deal platform. Outspoken against the Roosevelt policies, he has been in a class with Al Smith, Senator Carter Glass and Governor Bayliss and Governor Ely of Massachusetts. Reports differ as to the chances that the hale, white-haired 72-year-old war horse has for a comeback. Reed has always been closely associated with Boss Tom Pendergast's powerful machine in Kansas City and retains a popular following through the state. Whether the Pendergast outfit will now take the chance of backing an anti-Roosevelt candidate is uncertain, especially since Senator Bennett Champ Clark has advanced his own pro-administration candidate — Congressman Truck Willman. But Reed is so angry and disgusted at the progressive, experimental trend in Washington that he is even willing to run as an independent and may not enter the August primaries. He is chiefly anxious to roar his protests—and hopes for the chance to echo them from the Senate floor. Roosevelt sentiment is so strong in Missouri that Senator Roscoe Patterson, Republican in-

DONNA of the BIG TOP

by BEULAH POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

LIVE GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDALL who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are circus performers. Years earlier Madeline ran away from her grandfather's farm.

When Donna is injured by a fall from the trapeze Madeline arranges for her to be taken to GRANDFATHER SIDALL's farm to recuperate. To please her partner Donna pretends to be Madeleine, though she is loved by SIDALL. Madeline's cousin, and leg bill and grandfather she is afraid to tell the truth.

Madeline's marriage to CON DAVID, animal trainer with the circus, and although terrified of the lions and tigers takes part in the animal act.

Mrs. PLANK, Con's housekeeper on the farm, is hostile to Donna. Bill and Donna are married. After the ceremony Mrs. Plaster shows Donna a handbill announcing Madeline's marriage to Con in the circus areas.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

The circus was en route to New Orleans and all the performers were looking forward to the week to be spent there. It was where Con usually spent the winter and he had many friends in the city. It meant a change from Pullman state rooms, since those who could afford it would move to hotels and boarding houses. New Orleans was considered the high spot of the tour, and everyone was getting costumes cleaned or making new ones for the opening there.

In Nashville Con had purchased several yards of amber colored satin and asked the wardrobe mistress to make a suit for Madeline similar to one of his own. When she went for her first fitting Madeline drew back in horror and protested that she could not wear yellow. "It's bad luck!" she wailed. "You know yellow is bad luck. Con. We'll get our notices or something else will happen!"

He laughed at her superstition. "Who cares about notices any way? I've worn a yellow suit in all the big cities and I guess I can, you can. Don't be so silly."

Every free moment now he was working with Lucy, the Bengal tigress, determined that she should be the star beast when they played New Orleans. The struggle for supremacy between man and beast was magnificent. Day after day the huge cat would be driven into the arena where Con faced her alone. She would snarl defiance and crouch as though to spring. Then, at the crack of his whip, she would back away until her gorgeous body was crushed against the bars. But Lucy would not go through the routine. Each day Con would curse and leave the cage more determined than ever to break the tigress's spirit.

Then, as though she realized that man was her master, Lucy became tractable. The day she wriggled across the sawdust at his command and lay fawning at his feet like a tame kitten he was as elated as a small boy with a new toy engine.

tigress would turn on him and pay him back for the brutality he had shown.

Madeline knew some day Con would ask her to handle the tigress alone. She knew she would rebel and that on that day their marriage would go on the rocks. Sometimes she wondered if she still loved Con or if she hated him more than she had ever loved him.

They played Biloxi the day before they went to New Orleans. Because it was cheaper to remain there over Sunday Renfree did not move the show until the following evening, but Con, anxious to get into the city, hired a car and he and Madeline motored in.

With the warm autumn breeze fanning her cheeks Madeline nestled against Con's shoulder.

"I wish we could go on and on forever, just like this," she sighed. "No show, no animals—nothing but just ourselves."

"We'd soon starve," Con answered tersely. "We're darned lucky to have a good job."

"I'll have something when Grandpa dies," she reminded him.

"That's counting chickens, but unless I'm mistaken we can pull down some real coin in vaudeville this winter. Any agent will be glad to handle an act with a woman and a tiger. For Christmas you ought to be able to manage Lucy alone."

"Yes," Madeline spoke in a tight little voice.

There was a small hotel just off Canal street that catered to "professionals." It was a rather dreary-looking place, but the air of good fellowship and the reasonable rates appealed to Con. Here he and Madeline engaged a room and slept in a real bed instead of Pullman berths for the first time since early spring.

CON had already gone to the circus grounds when Madeline awoke in the morning. "His precious cats," she thought. Then, because she resented Con's leaving without calling her, she took her time at dressing and sauntered over to Canal street to look for a coffee shop.

The city was new and interesting to her and after breakfast she wandered down towards the river. The old French market was teeming with life and she stood for some time watching colorful women bargaining for fish and crabs and tiny river shrimp, for mangoes, yams and red plantains. Then she moved on until she reached the docks.

Through an open doorway she could see huge bales of cotton being loaded onto a steamer.

The muddy water of the Mississippi eddied and churned, beating against the mounds of sand that held it in leash. Madeline looked down at the rotting planks under her feet. She was wondering at their strength to withstand the rush of the waters when she heard her name spoken.

She whirled in astonishment and stared into the face of Ned Trafford. He wore a three-days' growth of beard and his eyes were bleary and blood-shot. His shabby, dirty overalls were patched and, like the other dock hands, he was bare-armed.

"Oh!" was all Madeline could stammer.

"My eye!" Trafford sneered. "What is my fine lady doing down here? Looking for a job totting rice?"

"I was just looking around. I must get back to the show." She started to pass him, but he reached out a grimy hand and grasped her wrist.

"Oh, no, you're not going off without some sort of 'howdy-do' to an old friend. It's a sight for some eyes to see you again. How do you like my looks? Pretty nifty, eh? I've got you to thank for this. Some come-down! I suppose you know I'm black-listed?"

"It's your own fault," she said hotly. "You jumped the show."

"AFTER I saw you tied up with hang around. Maybe you don't know it, but you knocked the center pole right out from under me and I've been skidding to the devil ever since." Trafford brought his mottled face close to hers and held her frightened gaze with his blood-shot eyes.

"Let me go, Ned!" she said, trying to hide the terror she felt. "If you'd been any sort of a man you'd never have let a snip of a girl like me ruin your life. Why—why any one else would have known I was only playing. I never—were never anything but friends—"

"So you say—and so you'd like to think. But I've not forgotten the times I kissed you and you let me hold you in my arms—"

"Ned, please! I've got to get to the circus grounds. I've a show today. Please!"

He laughed harshly and flung aside her arm. "Sure, you've got a show. I hear you're in the animal act now. So that's why the big star hitched up with you! I think I'll come out and see the act. Maybe you'll do an extra turn, knowing I'm in the audience."

"Perhaps I will." She attempted to laugh lightly and made a step toward the doorway, but he moved more quickly and blocked the exit.

"Maybe you and your husband will have supper with me afterward!" he sneered.

"You keep away from Con. If you don't—"

"You'll what?"

"I'll—I'll have you arrested for trying to kill me."

He flung back his head with a guffaw of harsh laughter. "It's late for that now, my lady! No one would believe you. Well, run along or you'll miss your cue. I'll be seeing you."

Her knees were shaking when she stepped out into the sunlight again. She hurried over to Canal street, looked about for a taxi and bade the driver take her to the circus grounds as quickly as possible.

On the way she debated whether or not to tell Con about the encounter with Trafford, then decided it was better to say nothing.

NEW FORD V-8

Definite reasons for the superior performance and efficiency of the V-type engine

THERE'S no guessing about the superiority of V-type engines. They hold every major record on land, on water and in the air. For years they have been used for the finest motor cars in this country.

We designed a V-type engine for the Ford because it has certain basic, fundamental advantages that cannot be duplicated in any other type. It costs more to build a V-type engine—a great deal more. But we absorb that cost for the sake of getting better performance on the road. Here are just a few of the advantages of Ford V-8 design:

MORE EFFICIENT DESIGN—The Ford V-8 engine is more efficient because the eight cylinders are divided into two short banks of four each and placed opposite each other in a compact V-shape design—instead of being strung out in a long straight line.

SIMPLER COOLING SYSTEM—Ford V-8 design brings all cylinders close together and results in simpler cooling system within the engine. The Ford V-8 has two water pumps.

MORE EFFICIENT LUBRICATION—Oil lines are shorter in the Ford because of V-8 design. Less distance for oil to travel. More efficient lubrication.

GREATIER SMOOTHNESS because of inherently correct engine balance resulting from 90° V-8 design with 90° spacing of crank-throws on fully counterbalanced crankshaft. Precision weighing of pistons and connecting-rods assures accurate running balance.

INGREASED BODY ROOM—Ford V-8 engine takes up less space in hood because of shorter, more compact design. That permits more of car's length to be used for the passengers. It is one reason why the Ford V-8 has more interior room than any other low-price car.

BETTER FUEL DISTRIBUTION—Shorter and more direct fuel passages to cylinders increase engine efficiency.

PROVED PERFORMANCE—V-type engines hold every major record on land, on water and in the air. (Seaplane.) In every test, they show their superior efficiency and performance.

Those are the advantages of the V-type design. The foremost engineers in the country acknowledge the superiority of this type of engine and use it in the finest automobiles, speed boats and airplanes. Only the Ford gives you a V-8 cylinder engine for less than $2500.

The Ford V-8 is the most remarkable engine ever built because it combines V-8 performance with economy. It delivers more horsepower per gallon of fuel than any Ford engine ever built. Dynamometer tests prove it in the laboratory. Ford owners by the thousands have proved it on the road. They know, as you will know, that no car costs less to own and run than the New Ford V-8.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, today.

The Golden Text is: "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly" (1 Corinthians 15:49).

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "That which is born of the spirit is spirit" (John 3:6).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The lines of demarcation between immortal man, representing spirit, and mortal man, representing the error that life and intelligence are in matter, show the pleasure and pains of matter to be myths, and human belief in them to be the father of mythology, in which matter is represented as divided into intelligent gods. Man's genuine selfhood is recognizable only in what is good and true" (page 294).

NEW YORK.—THE BEST judge of a fighter is a fighter. Plainly, being bumped on the sizer doesn't improve the sight.

Well, to cut third base and get in there, Tony Canzoneri and Billy Petrolle predict that Barney Ross will out-gallop Jimmy McLarnin in the Sunken Garden of Queens on May 28.

"Ross is a lightning-fast, aggressive boxer, who makes very few false moves and is hard to hit solidly. He always is on the move and advances instead of retreating—a trait that few boxers can fathom. It invariably keeps him out of trouble."

"I know all about McLarnin. I handed Petrolle against him three times. I was Young Jack Thompson's chief second when the negro made the officials draw a very fine line to decide in McLarnin's favor in Madison Square Garden."

"It was that night that he convinced me that he was far from being an overrated fighter. He showed first-rate skill—and I've been around."

"The managers of Ross made a grave mistake in going out of the lightweight champion's class. McLarnin will end the battle with the first good right hand he lets loose. I don't believe in hand-cup matches. I always disapproved of a McLarnin-Canzoneri match, although Tony wanted it."
