SAN FRANCISCO CARRIES ON DESPITE STRIKES

TROOPS MOVE TO WHOLESALE BUSINESS AREA

Other Seaport Cities Experiencing Strike Conditions On Waterfronts.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., July 16. The entire national guard of California was mobilized today to assist civil authorities in maintaining peace in the San Francisco Bay area and in agricultural districts.

Most of the troops were ordered to San Francisco with scattered units directed into interior California where agitators were attempting fruit pickers' strikes.

To the accompaniment of guerrilla warfare and hoodlumism carried on by roving bands of strikers and sympathizers and with 4,000 National Guards moving into the wholesale district, San Francisco carried on today despite a general strike.

The walkout became effective at 8 a. m. PST, with an estimated 40,000 men on strike. National guards mobilized in the city during the night, an hour and a half later began moving into the wholesale district. Business there had been at a standstill since Thursday.

Vandals among the wandering pickets broke numerous windows, beat several persons, tipped over at least two produce trucks and worked much mischief.

But the large mass of the population put on its walking shoes and trudged over sidewalks and streets to business as usual. At the peak of the rush hour streets were crowded with a great parade of pedestrians, while automobiles, their gas supplies replenished yesterday by visits to out of town filling stations, drove thought the streets.

Police mobilized in expectation of rioting were forced to return to duty as traffic cops, keeping the pedestrians from being run over.

San Francisco was paralyzed by a general strike today.

Portland was threatened with a general strike within 48 hours with 20,000 union men ready to rally behind maritime workers. Seattle's difficulties were confined to maritime workers.

Houston cleared the docks of pickets after three negro strike breakers were killed. New York labor leaders threatened to call a general shipping strike.

Minneapolis truck drivers prepared to strike. A lieup of foot was feared as union leader sought to make the strike general. About 20,000 Alabama textile workers demanded higher wages and threatened to strike.

It is an established policy of the agricultural adjustment administration and farm credit administration that men who have entered the political field should not be held on committees on which they were serving at little or no compensation when there is possibility that this service rendered unselfishly might handicap them in their respective political aspirations, or when they might be called back to committee service when engaged in seeking support at the polls.

For Short Heat Ease Make 'Em Angry; Be Sure Car Crank Hid

Here's one solution for temporary heat ease as executed by a young woman in Eastland recently. She was apparently irked by the conduct of her masculine friend who brought her to the bursting point of anger, perhaps mischievousness, when the friend made a biting and sarcastic remark. It was too much for the girl so she simply and none too gracefully dashed six ounces of water, mixed with ice, which was on a tray, squarely into the boy's face.

Worshipped 50 Centuries Ago

Worshipped 50 Centuries Ago

The lord of fertility here gazes out of all-seeing eyes as he did 5000 years ago on his Sumerian worshippers in southwest Asia. This statue was unearthed at Tell Asmar, 50 miles northeast of Bagdad, by Chicago University Iraq explorers. The unnaturally enlarged eyes indicate divinity, differing strikingly from statues of human types.

This thing called character in business is so great that when it is even mentioned it is well for the public to be grateful that they are in existence. In reading a little statement in the Industrial News Review, by R. M. Hofer, in which he says: "I was recently in the oldest bank in the West, the Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust Company, in San Francisco. It was established 83 years ago. Its name conjures up visions of the Pony Express, the Old Wells Fargo Express Company and the days when California represented a gold miner's dream."

Italy's Planes Are Seen As Threat To Great Britain

By United Press
 PARIS, France. — The thin line of Britain's communications between the homeland and the colonies and Dominions East is threatened.

The threat, according to French observers, comes from Italy. The Italian government has developed giant naval seaplanes for use in the Mediterranean with the main object, it is said, of hitting at Malta, Britain's second Gibraltar.

These seaplanes are capable of setting off from Italian soil in Italy and raining bombs upon the British Mediterranean fleet in Valletta harbor, 75 kilometers away, in less than half an hour. After bombing the hornets' nest, they can be back on Italian territory within an hour.

As French naval and aerial experts see the situation, Italy's expansion of naval and air strength will have a vital bearing on the World Naval Conference to open next year to endeavor to do with disarmament what the Geneva Disarmament Conference failed to achieve with land and air force—bringing about a general scaling down of strength.

Because of British sea power, one half of which is centered almost constantly in the Mediterranean to guard the chain of communications with the Far East by way of Suez, Italy always has had a great deal of respect for Great Britain.

The Italian government realized that Italy was more or less at the mercy of the big guns of Britain's mighty battle cruisers which could steam from their anchorage at Malta to bombard Italy's coasts within a few hours.

With the development of aviation, however, Italy's outlook has changed. The Italian Mediterranean air force now is equipped with bombing plants which are capable of turning the tables on the British menace. They are capable of attacking, crippling and perhaps even wiping out the British sea giants, before even these floating fortresses can weigh an anchor and steam to the attack.

Davenport Inventor Perfects Car Sleeper

 MILWAUKEE — John Bostrom, inventor of the folding davenport bed, who sold his patent for a song, has perfected a device that will enable motorists to convert their automobiles into sleeping cars by merely pushing a button.

By hinging the back of the front seat it can be laid down to the level of the front and back cushions, thereby forming a comfortable bed, Bostrom found.

He believes that his invention will be a boon to motorists, who not only be spared the trouble of pitching tents, but also will be

Missouri U. Site Was Picked In 1836

By United Press
 COLUMBIA, Mo.—The twenty-fourth of June marked the ninety-fourth anniversary of the selection of Boone county as site of the University of Missouri.

On June 24, 1839 efforts of the as yet undeveloped community resulted in the award being made by the state legislature.

The act providing for the location of the University of Missouri was introduced into the legislature by James S. Rollins, known throughout the state as "the Father of the University".

The act provided six central Missouri counties should submit bids of land and money, the university to be located in the county submitting the highest bid. Boone county, the wealth of whose inhabitants was estimated as only $2,000,000, bid $117,921.75, of which $30,000 was in land and the rest in cash.

The first board of curators met beneath a sugar maple tree on the present site of the university in October, 1839. First classes were held in Columbia college building, across the street from the site of the present Parker Memorial hospital.

The cornerstone for the first university building was laid July 4, 1840.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE FERBY comes to New York to visit her mother, and especially AMY JACKSON, that she can make a success of her life. Amy had been her best friend until Howard had forced upon her marriage. Amy in New York takes a fancy to Jane, realizing a real estate office and soon is making a large income.

She has a quarrel with HOGG THORPE, who is married but lives as if single. She hears the expense of their child she contemptuously dismisses him and the confidence she has in her only friend, Jane, is shaken.

For two years Jane stays away from New York. Then, on her return, she asks to see her daughter.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXII

AMY had heard. Amy was running downstairs quickly as if to meet an expected danger. She looked at Jane silently, without any pretense of greeting, of welcome. "Jane wants to see Nancy," he said, "but I don't know."

"Why do you want to see her?" asked Amy. "Why didn't you let me know you were coming?"

They were waiting. Jane must win them, and particularly Howard if she could do that he would in due time. Amy answered, pretending humility. "I was afraid you'd hide her from me. I do want to see her. Amy. That's natural, isn't it?"

Howard answered for Amy and Jane. "You gave the child to Amy absolutely and promised not to claim her. Now if you're not going to keep that promise we'll have to think things over. So first of all, we want to know if that's in the back of your mind?"

"No, it isn't," said Jane, still more humbly. "The child belongs to you and Amy. I mean it. I won't make a scene," she glanced up, faintly smiling.

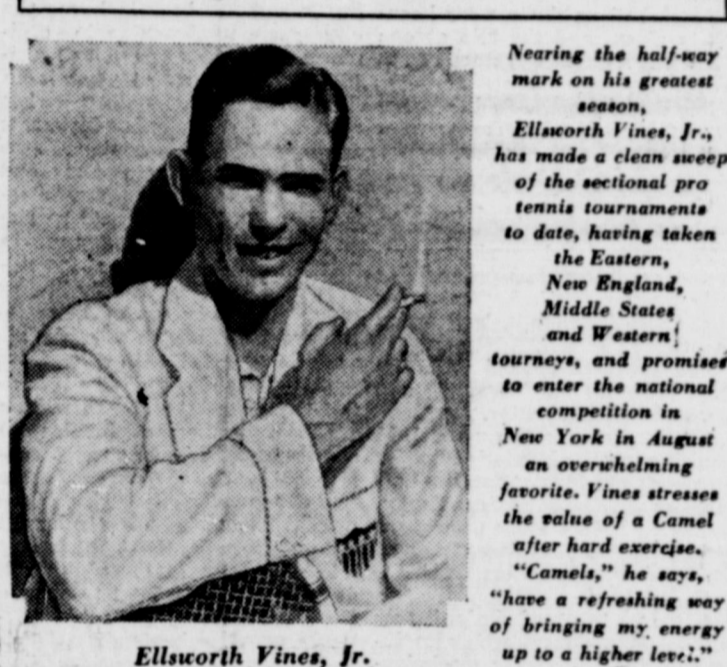

She felt that Howard was melting and she went on to Amy. "You know how awful everything was for me when I gave her to you, and you were so wonderful to take her—that was the one comforting thing out of that horrible time—I'd never have forgotten myself if I'd have let some stranger adopt her. I must have been out of my mind. I've been so ashamed, so awfully ashamed, I know you despise me!"

"I don't despise you," said Amy, "and neither does Howard. Don't drag up the past, Jane. I know you had a hard time. I realized it more afterward. It's only that Nancy's ours, and I was startled—and alarmed for a minute, thinking you might want her. Of course you can see her. She's just ready for her supper and bed. Come along upstairs."

JANE arose gracefully and dropped the fur coat from her shoulders. As she followed Amy she noticed that the house was no better furnished than the first time she had seen it.

Amy opened a door. "This is

Hot Months are Boost to Slayings

By United Press
 PORT WORTH.—Murders and other violent crimes increase in the summer months because of the hot weather, according to Dr. E. W. McDiarmid, head of the Texas Christian University psychology department.

Hot weather may cause the phantasmic Romeo to become irritated and chuck his shoe at his best girl. It may even induce him to kill her.

"People literally go crazy with the heat," Dr. McDiarmid said. "Hot weather makes people quarrel, fight and even kill."

"It's the heat that causes a mental imbalance. Eskimos die an old age because their blood runs cold, while hot-blooded natives of equatorial countries are always fighting and killing one another."

"Of course we can't be scientifically accurate in determining how much the heat contributes to conflict—but it does—greatly."

In support of his contentions, Dr. McDiarmid produced police records here for the last three years. July is consistently the year's peak murder month here. Last year 10 persons were slain here in July. In 1932 there were eight slayings and in 1931 there were 10.

Records for the three years showed that nearly one-half the city's murders occur in July, August and September, when the heat is the greatest.
