Wilson Is Convicted in Mrs. Debolt's Death

PRISON SENTENCE IS RENDERED IN A MURDER CASE

By United Press
Dec. 13.—Percy Howland Wilson, 32, was sentenced to a term of 10 years in the state penitentiary today for the slaying of Mrs. Irene Debolt, 39, on the desert near Van Horn, Nov. 7, 1933. Sentence was set at 99 years in the state penitentiary. The verdict came after deliberation that lasted all night. The state had asked the death penalty. Mrs. Debolt's body, nude except for one silk stocking, was found in a kneeling position on the desert near Van Horn. Death ended a transcontinental automobile trip on which she and Wilson had embarked from Cleveland. When returned here for trial several months ago, Wilson made a statement in which he said he killed Mrs. Debolt in self defense. The state attempted to prove that Wilson killed Mrs. Debolt at a tourist camp after the couple reached Texas on a return trip from California to Cleveland. That motive for the slaying was robbery. Testimony disclosed Mrs. Debolt had received $4,000 in insurance when her husband, Henry Debolt, died. That the killer removed her clothing after the slaying, not only with a view of preventing identification of the corpse, but also to find large sums of money that relatives of Mrs. Debolt said she had stitched to her underwear.

That reminds me...

When a fellow snoops around he can always pick up something good and here goes a pick-up that even "Uncle Sam" will get a kick out of. Listen to this:
U. S. Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.
Gents:
The enclosed form, on which I am asked to make a record of my income for the last fiscal year, is returned to you with my respects and my deepest appreciation of this subtle flattery. I am particularly impressed by its resurrections of old forms and figures of English speech such as "compensation from outside sources," "net profit received," "income from rents," "interest on bank deposits," etc.
One question I got a great laugh out of was "Were you during the tax year supporting in your household one or more persons closely related to you?" Boy, that's a honey.
Say, Mister Secretary, you would be surprised. There are so many persons closely related to me staying at my house that I am what you would call surrounded. Only the other day three more distant cousins of my wife's blew in, making a new high for the movement. And one of them brought a friend.
For the last four years my house has been full of strangers, all claiming to be my cousins or aunts or something. I can't identify half of them, and what burned me up was my wife's Uncle Jerry, who had been living with us a year, slapped me on the back the other day and asked, "Haven't I seen you some place before?"
The blank says it will allow me $400 for each dependent relative and I would say the government is overpricing them, as I would trade the entire lot for $11, and throw in a pair of bicycle pants and a magic lantern. (Two of my wife's aunts you can have for the asking.)
Heigh-ho and lackaday. The blank also asks me to "describe your business as provided in Item (Continued on page 4)

Munitions Profit Bill Was Drafted Two Years Ago

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Legislation designed to take the profits out of war for which President Roosevelt set up a special committee, has been drafted for nearly two years, the United Press learned today.
The legislation was drafted by the war policies commission set up by former President Hoover and has the approval of the war and navy departments. It awaits only a sponsor to bring it actively before congress.
It includes bills to draft both manpower and capital in time of war, to limit profits of munitions and war material firms to about 6 per cent, and to set up a special government agency to co-ordinate all manufacturing, purchasing, distribution and other war-time activities of the government.

Walls Reel as Flames Rage Through Death Trap

Tottering walls of the Kearns hotel, Lansing, Mich., in which more than a score died when flames swept the building, are shown here, silhouetted against the night sky as the blaze spread with terrifying swiftness through the four-story brick and wood structure. Guests trapped in the hotel leaped to death or serious injury in the street below, and several lost their lives when they jumped into the icy waters of the Grand river, immediately back of the hostelry. Among the known dead are five legislators, who just had arrived in the capital for the legislative session.

Suspect Accused of Slaying Cleveland Widow For Her Money.
By United Press
EL PASO, Dec. 13.—Arthur Wilson, Cleveland, Ohio, steel chemist, was convicted by a district court jury today of slaying Mrs. Irene Debolt, Cleveland widow, on the desert near Van Horn, Nov. 7, 1933. Sentence was set at 99 years in the state penitentiary. The verdict came after deliberation that lasted all night. The state had asked the death penalty. HUNT BEGAN FOR KIDNAPERS AFTER RANSOM NOTE WAS FOUND

(Editor's Note: The following is the second in a series of articles about the Lindbergh kidnaping, by Sidney Whipple.)
By SIDNEY B. WHIPPLE
On the morning of March 2, 1932, the whitewashed garage that formed one wing of the Lindbergh manor in the Sourdland foothills became the field headquarters for a regiment of police officials.
Dirt roads leading to the estate were alive with another army of unofficial investigators and morbidly curious citizens who spread, fanwise, through the desolate territory and up the sodden slopes of the mountains, in eager attempts to discover clues to the kidnapers of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.
They tramped through the meadows and into underbrush and forest. They marched through winding paths and unused lines, churning the muddy ground with their heels and creating a confusion of tracks and trails. And they found nothing at all. The only tangible clues to the kidnapers' identity had been left behind, in side, or within 100 yards of the Lindbergh home.
From the vacant crib in the nursery, Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf had taken—with extreme care, lest a fingerprint be blurred—a pencilled demand for $50,000, the price for returning the child to his parents. The notes, in blurred and pencilled script, said:
"Dear Sir:
"Have 50 000 $ ready 25 000 $ in 20 $ bills 15 000 $ in 10 $ bills and 10 000 $ in 5 $ bills after 2-4 days we will inform you where to deliver the money.
"We want you for making anything public or for notify the police... (blurred).
"The child is in gut care. Indication for our letters are signature."
Then followed a "signature" consisting of a strange device of interlocking circles, colored with red and blue ink and bearing the imprint of three slight indentations—pin pricks, perhaps—near the edges of the circles. Subsequent notes, in negotiation for payment of the ransom, bore the identical symbol.
When Colonel Schwartzkopf and Colonel Lindbergh, lighting their way with electric torches, made their first hurried search of the grounds, they had stumbled upon the second physical clue—an abandoned ladder.
The ladder was of "home-made" construction, and consisted of three sections which, when joined together, rose to a height a little above the nursery window. The pegs by which the sections were joined fitted perfectly into grooves carved for them. The rungs were sunk, to be flush with the sides. One rung apparently had broken beneath the weight of the kidnaper and his burden. Could that have been the sound heard by Colonel Lindbergh outside his window?
Not far from the nursery window they found a heavy chisel. Part of the kidnapers' equipment, and evidently intended for forcing the nursery shutters, it had not been needed. The shutters, warped by inclement weather, had resisted all efforts to lock them.
From the house, and trailing away into nothingness at the main road, were a series of heavy footprints. But they were not clearcut. They looked to have been made by one who had bound his feet in an overcasting of cloth.
These provided the only physical

American Standard of Living Still Eludes Most of Us

One of the points at issue in any discussion of our return to prosperity is that famous old American standard of living.

The men and women who came to this country from Europe, in all the years since Plymouth and Jamestown were settled, came with the wistful notion that life over here could be easier and richer than it was back home.

Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, brain-truster of the Agricultural Department, made this very clear in a recent speech at Washington. An American family that is to have a moderately full life, he estimates, must have an income of at least $2500 a year.

In other words, between two-thirds and three-quarters of us aren't able to get that American standard of living even in the most prosperous times.

It is doubtless a recognition of this fact which leads some people to insist that reform must go hand in hand with recovery. Such people are simply saying that it is not enough for us to get back to pre-depression conditions, but that we must go a long way beyond that point before we can feel that we are doing justice to ourselves.

The trick ought not to be quite as difficult as it seems to be. When you think of the marvelous productive capacity of this country, of the intelligence of its people, the energy and optimism with which the most baffling tasks are tackled, it does seem as if it should be fairly easy to find some way of introducing more than a third of us to that standard of living which we like to think of as typical of the whole country.

Nothing is more conducive to the continuous growth of a business than continuous advertising.

evidence of the kidnapers visit to the Lindbergh home. The investigators turned to an analysis of the note.

Manifestly, the demand had been written by a person of foreign antecedents and of slight education.

The English speaking races do not write "50 000 $". The note said "We warn you for making anything public." It said the child was in "gut" care.

Quite obviously, the kidnaping had been staged for gain, and neither with the hatred of a crank nor with the thought of "revenge" by a deranged mind.

In the 24 hours that followed the kidnaping the police forces of three states swung into action with increased momentum.

Every road in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania was patrolled and

BEGIN HERE TODAY

ANN HOLLISTER, pretty and 20, breaks her engagement to TONY MILICENT, commercial artist, because of his drinking and general irresponsibility.

Ann and Peter, both heart-sick and disillusioned, meet in a restaurant. When Peter asks her to marry him, Ann agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIX

ANN said, "Yes, Valeria's invited. She heard about the party and told Millicent she hoped she wouldn't be excluded."

"She can fight better close to you, and with less danger of discovery. Ann, dear, can't you see what's before your very nose?"

"I certainly can. Which reminds me it needs powdering." Ann turned toward the bedroom and Sarah followed.

"Ann, I can't bear it. Getting all these lovely things for my trousseau when you've been so unhappy—"

"No, I wasn't unhappy—that is, not terribly unhappy. Sarah, Peter has been wonderful. It's just that I feel I'm living in a sort of dream. Of course," her voice broke, "I had planned everything differently. I had always expected to have a real honeymoon, not a make-believe one."

"Peter's wonderful, Sarah. The best friend I ever had."

"Friend? Who wants a friendly husband?"

"He took a huge apartment and has servants all over the place. Sometimes I think I would be a lot happier if I had work to do—like Peter."

each other. Your ancestors may have come over in the Mayflower, Ann, but it wouldn't make any difference to the Kendalls unless theirs were on the same boat. I wish old Peter was on your side. He would be a whole regiment for you."

"He's refused to see me. There's nothing I can do."

"There is another side to Mrs. Kendall's attitude," Sarah said. "Peter is the only one who isn't her child. I suppose you know that. Peter was only three when she married his father. Millicent was born within two years and several years later the twins came—Carol and Don."

"Yes, I know," Ann said. "Peter told me the family history. He seems very fond of them, particularly Carol."

"Hm. I can't say I admire Peter's taste. Everybody thinks she's an awful snob."

"Peter thinks she is misunderstood, and kicking against the traces makes her seem arrogant and hard. He says she's really the finest of them all when you know her well."

"When's the party?"

"Thursday night. You and Mac must be sure to come."

"Mac in full dress!" Sarah smiled. "I'll threaten him with that."

"But you will come?"

"I won't promise. Send me one of those swanky invitations though. I want to frame it. Imagine being invited to a party given by a Kendall! You never can tell what will happen in this world."

Ann laughed. "I feel the same way," she confessed. "I wake up sometimes at night and turn on the light and look at the magnificence. I want to pinch myself to see if it's true."

Ann opened another envelope. Out fell a clipping, with one paragraph boldly re-enclosed: "Wonder if a certain man-about-town's hasty marriage was the result of a fit of pique, and if the redhead with whom he is skinned down the aisle will be able to disprove the old saying that gentlemen prefer blondes . . . we wonder."

Ann's face was sober. Peter asked, "Mind if I see that, Ann?"

He read the clipping, his face white. "When I got my hands on the man who wrote this—that a dirty trick! His eyes were blazing."

Ann broke in breathlessly. "Oh, Peter, you wouldn't. Nobody pays any attention to 'High-Life'."

"But everybody reads it," Peter said grimly.

"Peter, I couldn't bear it if you did anything about it. Everybody would be talking then."

"Guess you're right," Peter said. He crumpled the clipping in his hand. "Sure you won't let me upset you?"

"I won't give it another thought," Ann said. "Unless you need your car, why don't you let Evans drive you down? I'll pick you up this afternoon."

"I thought you'd be busy getting ready for the party. Buying a dress—"

"It's bought and waiting."

PETER was standing by her chair, smiling down at her. Ann, in her simply tailored brown jersey with the starched white collar and cuffs, made a pretty picture. She never appeared at breakfast in negligees, but was always dressed in some simple, attractive morning frock like this.

Once when he had remonstrated with her, Ann had said, "You always dress for breakfast. Why shouldn't I?"

"I'M ALL SET for one of those old-fashioned Winters! I just got myself a bureau-drawerful of HANES Heavyweight Champions. Get them by the dozen, I do... but only wear one at a time. I've had HANES before and believe me, I'm for them! I can't describe it exactly, but they make you feel like you are somebody. You know what I mean—they sort of snug and hug right up to your skin, and you want to throw your shoulders back. They're not too tight, though. You can bend over without getting cut in half. But the main reason I like them is, they keep me warm. I can't 'take' the cold. The Missus is all for HANES, too. She hasn't sewed a button since I don't know when.
