Three Ways to Prevent Release of Guilty

One of the things which the last year brought us was a new attitude toward our crime problem. We are no longer discouraged about it, or ready to admit that the problem is insoluble. Some of our most notorious lawbreakers are under the ground and some of them are behind the bars, and we are beginning to see that putting them there isn't an impossible job, after all.

Nevertheless, our machinery for dealing with criminals needs overhauling; and one of the places that need it the most is the courtroom where the crook stands trial.

Prof. Mason Ladd of the University of Iowa discussed needed changes in the law of evidence before the 32d annual meeting of the Association of American Law Schools, in Chicago recently.

There are ways, says Prof. Ladd, by which we can make the conviction of guilty persons easier without increasing the hazards which an innocent man must face when he goes on trial. One of them is by tightening up the laws governing an alibi defense.

Let us provide, suggests Prof. Ladd, that where an accused person plans to plead an alibi he be required to give notice to the state's attorney in advance of the trial.

As things stand now, a man being tried in San Francisco can assert that he was in New York when the crime was committed, and it is practically impossible for the prosecution to meet his claim when it is sprung suddenly in the middle of the trial.

If advance notice were required, the state could make the necessary investigation ahead of time and marshal evidence to refute the claim, if the claim were false. Some states already have such a law; Prof. Ladd suggests that the law should be made universal.

Then, he continues, the state should be allowed to comment when a prisoner takes advantage of his constitutional rights and refuses to testify. In 42 of our states the criminal may refuse to testify and the prosecutor may not remark upon it in any way.

Surely no innocent man's rights would be jeopardized if the state were permitted to draw inferences from such silence.

Lastly, Prof. Ladd urges that criminal law be revised to permit the impeachment of one's own witnesses. As things stand now, a crook may bribe or intimidate the state's star witness so that that witness, on the stand, will give testimony contrary to his former statements—but the state cannot expose that witness before the jury, and the criminal wins by a technicality.

Here, again, a simple revision in procedure would make it harder for a guilty man to win acquittal.

None of these changes would increase the hazards for an innocent man. As Prof. Ladd suggests, they would simply provide a fair trial for the state as well as for the defense.

Some communities show no evidence of doing anything to help themselves. They could strive to reduce local taxes and build local trade.

Suppressed excitement and fear was in the air at Mission San Luis on the San Saba river. The big Comanche chief in his French uniform rode through the men gathered in the patio, and stopped before Father Terreros. He did not dismount, but gruffly demanded a letter to Captain Parrilla of the presidio, in order that he and his men might gain entrance. The kindly Father did not wish to bring trouble to the residents of the presidio, but he believed the Indians thought the presidio better armed than it was, and he was relying on their cowardice not to attack. So, he wrote a brief note to Parrilla, and some scouts sped away with it.

In a short time, shorter than it would have taken the men to actually reach the presidio and return, the scouts were back, and reported to their chief that they were denied entrance. There was no way to keep peace except for Father Terreros to volunteer to go back with the scouts. Excusing himself, he went to his room for the last time, then for a final prayer at the altar. Accompanied by a soldier, Joseph Garcia, he went back into the patio. The chief was nowhere to be seen but the Father and Garcia stepped outside the gate. A dozen arrows whirred through the air immediately. Father Terreros, mortally wounded, fell to the ground as his companions in the church watched with horrified eyes. Joseph Garcia was killed instantly.

The signal given, a fierce combat started. Father Santiesteban, Lazaro de Ayala and Enrique Gutierrez were killed before they knew what was happening. Father Molinas, with a badly broken arm, and eight wounded soldiers fought their way to the Father President's room, where they barricaded the door. Knowing that they were locked in the room, the Comanches set fire to the buildings, plundered the store rooms, smashed the images of the saints, tore away the beautiful altar ornaments, and left their prisoners to die—or to he shot the first time they attempted an escape.

In the meanwhile, the Indian servants had slipped away from the mission that morning when the two men were first attacked. They gave Captain Parrilla the terrible news, and at once nine men were sent to the mission. Hours later eight of them feebly knocked on the entrance to the presidio. On their way to the mission they had been attacked, one of their party was killed, and all the others were badly wounded.

Red flames against a black sky motionless figures in the dust of the patio, nine wounded men in a little church room, and savages around the church ruins were results of the attack.

The story of Mission San Luis de los Amarillas was not ended, however. Help came from the presidio that night. Those brave fathers who had died and those who were prisoners had chosen to remain with their post of duty, rather than retreat in danger. For New Spain and the Province of Texas they had lived, and for them they died. In 1936 the State of Texas will honor them for their courage, faith, and loyalty.

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

They came looking for gold ... but they found tobacco

... and tobacco has been like gold ever since! The tobacco raised in Virginia and exchanged for goods helped the struggling colonists to get a foothold when they came to America.

Later on, it was tobacco that helped to clothe and feed Washington's brave army at Valley Forge.

Today it is tobacco that helps—more than any other commodity raised in this country—to pay the expense of running our Government.

In the fiscal year 1933-34 the Federal Government collected $425,000,000 from the tax on tobacco. Most of this came from cigarettes — six cents tax on every package of twenty.

Yes, the cigarette helps a lot—and it certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Smokers have several reasons for liking Chesterfields. For one thing, Chesterfields are milder. For another thing, they taste better. They Satisfy.

OLDEN

Mrs. L. S. Hamilton is seriously ill at the West Texas Clinic in Ranger, where she underwent an emergency appendicitis operation last Friday afternoon. She had been ill several days but the seriousness of her condition was not known until Friday when she was removed from her home to the hospital.

It was reported Tuesday that she was as well as could be expected. She and the family have hosts of friends here who are hoping for a speedy recovery. A surprise birthday party honoring Cordell Upton was given at his home here Thursday night. A number of Olden and Eastland and Ranger friends attended and reported a fine time. Cordell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Upton. The Olden girls basket ball team played Carbon Friday night at Carbon and were defeated but greatly enjoyed the game. Mrs. Sam Newcomb has been quite ill for some time suffering from an abscessed throat, but she was reported resting easier Tuesday, having had her throat lanced Monday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Arnie Fox of Stamford have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Sam Newcomb for the past ten days, and Mrs. Fox expects to remain until Mr. Newcomb is much improved in health. BEGIN HERE TODAY... I heard you dashing away in the car... "Where were you—hid from me, weren't you?" He caught her roughly by the shoulders. "Don't be silly. Why should I hide? I was back in my room doing things to my face. I ran to the front door and called you but I guess you didn't hear." He was still staring at her suspiciously. "No tricks, Ann. If I thought—" Ann said gently, slipping her arm through his. "You've been drinking too much. It's made you imagine foolish things. Is my supper ready? I suppose I shall have to heat the coffee again." She was leading him, with an insistent little pressure against his arm, to the kitchen. "Everything's ruined," he grumbled. "And all my fault. I suppose, because I went to powder my nose," Ann said lightly. "Well, let's forget it!" "Take off your wet coat, Allan." He poured two drinks. Ann slipped her own and then, feeling his eyes upon her, finished the drink quickly. "Want another?" "Later. I'm going to scramble more eggs, if you don't mind. I never could eat cold eggs." He has slumped down in a chair, watching her gloomily as she mixed the eggs in a bowl and whipped them steadily. She turned to the stove, stirred them into a hot skillet. Oh, why didn't the taxi come! It must be all of a half hour. If her plan failed the taxi, but no, it must not fail. It couldn't fail. She went into the breakfast room, got a cloth and napkins and came back. "A lot of fuss," Allan said, "over a little food. Let's cut the frills." ANN, spreading the cloth, smiled at him. "There's nothing to hurry about and I like the table to look nice." There was the taxi coming up the drive. Allan had not heard it. His head had dropped to his arms, on the table. "I forgot the silver. Will you please get some?" He got to his feet and staggered into the dining room. "For heaven's sake, Ann—" She flew to the front door, grabbing her hat and coat on the way. The driver had reached the door. In another moment he would have pressed the bell. He helped Ann into the cab, got in himself and turned on the ignition. "How long will it take you to get here?" "It's a half hour run." "Please hurry." "Okay, lady." Ann closed the door. She turned out the lights in the hall, turned on more lights in the living room, went back into her old room and turned on a light by the dressing table. It was fully 20 minutes before Allan returned. He had finally given up the search. The door was shut. Between the drawn shades in a room on the left wing was a thin yellow streak. A light in Ann's room. The front door was locked. Allan rang the bell angrily. Ann opened the door. "Allan, where in the world did you go?"

There was no way to keep peace except for Father Terreros to volunteer to go back with the scouts. Excusing himself, he went to his room for the last time, then for a final prayer at the altar. Accompanied by a soldier, Joseph Garcia, he went back into the patio. The chief was nowhere to be seen but the Father and Garcia stepped outside the gate. A dozen arrows whirred through the air immediately. Father Terreros, mortally wounded, fell to the ground as his companions in the church watched with horrified eyes. Joseph Garcia was killed instantly.

The signal given, a fierce combat started. Father Santiesteban, Lazaro de Ayala and Enrique Gutierrez were killed before they knew what was happening. Father Molinas, with a badly broken arm, and eight wounded soldiers fought their way to the Father President's room, where they barricaded the door. Knowing that they were locked in the room, the Comanches set fire to the buildings, plundered the store rooms, smashed the images of the saints, tore away the beautiful altar ornaments, and left their prisoners to die—or to

he shot the first time they attempted an escape.

In the meanwhile, the Indian servants had slipped away from the mission that morning when the two men were first attacked. They gave Captain Parrilla the terrible news, and at once nine men were sent to the mission. Hours later eight of them feebly knocked on the entrance to the presidio. On their way to the mission they had been attacked, one of their party was killed, and all the others were badly wounded. Red flames against a black sky motionless figures in the dust of the patio, nine wounded men in a little church room, and savages around the church ruins were results of the attack.

The story of Mission San Luis de los Amarillas was not ended however. Help came from the presidio that night. Those brave fathers who had died and those who were prisoners had chosen to remain with their post of duty, rather than retreat in danger. For New Spain and the Province of Texas they had lived, and for them they died. In 1936 the State of Texas will honor them for their courage, faith, and loyalty.

LUCKY FIND

BURLINGTON, Wis.—An receipt bearing a canceled stamp blew against the feet of Jay L. here and he picked it up. To trace its source, he discovered that it came from a bale of which a junk man had taken from an old express office in a neighboring town. Land bought the for 75 cents. It contained more stamps of the Civil War period. He already has sold $ worth to dealers and has made rare find that may be worth much as all the others sold.

—so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

They came looking for gold ... but they found tobacco

... and tobacco has been like gold ever since! The tobacco raised in Virginia and exchanged for goods helped the struggling colonists to get a foothold when they came to America.

Later on, it was tobacco that helped to clothe and feed Washington's brave army at Valley Forge.

Today it is tobacco that helps—more than any other commodity raised in this country—to pay the expense of running our Government.

In the fiscal year 1933-34 the Federal Government collected $425,000,000 from the tax on tobacco. Most of this came from cigarettes — six cents tax on every package of twenty.

Yes, the cigarette helps a lot—and it certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Smokers have several reasons for liking Chesterfields. For one thing, Chesterfields are milder. For another thing, they taste better. They Satisfy.

Early Colonial planters shipped hundreds of pounds of tobacco to England in return for goods and supplies.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
ANN goes to Florida and is engaged to TONY MICKLE the same day that PETER KEY-DALL tells VALERIA BENNETT, his fiancee, that everything is over between them. Ann thinks she still loves Tony and Peter believes he still cares for Valeria, but when chance brings the two together and Peter asks Ann to marry him she agrees. They go to Florida and are happy there until Peter is recalled home. His family sends Ann and Valeria trials to make trouble. She succeeds finally and Ann goes away, leaving no trace of her whereabouts. She is hired as governess for the children of MRS. TRACY, an aristocrat. ALLAN VINCENT, Mrs. Tracy's brother, is attentive to Ann. Through him Ann learns that Peter is furnishing a house. Convinced that he plans to divorce her and marry Valeria, Ann leaves the Tracy's. She goes to work in a book store. One rainy night she meets Allan and he persuades her to drive home with him for dinner. After she is in the car she realizes he has been drinking. They reach the Tracy home and Allan admits his sister is away. Ann realizes she has been tricked. Frightened, she plans to escape NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLIV

IN the kitchen Allan was making progress slowly. He smiled as he bent over the stove and moved uncertainly about the room. A plate slipped from his nervous fingers and crashed to the floor. He called, "Guess you'd better help me dish up. I'm breaking all the china." There was no answer. He waited a moment and called again. "Say, Ann, you never did have that cocktail. Want one now?" Still no answer. At the same moment he felt a rush of cold air. A door must be open. A door—Allan ran to the hall. A black expanse met his bewildered gaze. The front door was wide. A quick survey convinced him that Ann was really gone. He would find her, he thought furiously. It would have been better for her if she hadn't played him a trick like this. Ann, crouched behind tall shrubbery near the sun porch, heard him driving away. As soon as the sound of the motor died she opened the door, removed her wet coat and hat, putting them on a chair in the hall and called a taxi company. "I want a cab sent in a hurry to the Ingleside section. You know where it is?" "Sure, lady. What street?" "No. 44 Cherry Circle. Write it down, please, I'm in a great hurry." "I have it. Forty-four Cherry." "It's the fourth house after you turn in from town. Back among some trees." "I think I know the place. Anyway I'll find it." "How long will it take you to get here?" "It's a half hour run." "Please hurry." "Okay, lady. What street?" Ann closed the door. She turned out the lights in the hall, turned on more lights in the living room, went back into her old room and turned on a light by the dressing table. It was fully 20 minutes before Allan returned. He had finally given up the search. The door was shut. Between the drawn shades in a room on the left wing was a thin yellow streak. A light in Ann's room. The front door was locked. Allan rang the bell angrily. Ann opened the door. "Allan, where in the world did you go?" "I heard you dashing away in the car." "Where were you—hiding from me, weren't you?" He caught her roughly by the shoulders. "Don't be silly. Why should I hide? I was back in my room doing things to my face. I ran to the front door and called you but I guess you didn't hear." He was still staring at her suspiciously. "No tricks, Ann. If I thought—" Ann said gently, slipping her arm through his. "You've been drinking too much. It's made you imagine foolish things. Is my supper ready? I suppose I shall have to heat the coffee again." She was leading him, with an insistent little pressure against his arm, to the kitchen. "Everything's ruined," he grumbled. "And all my fault, I suppose, because I went to powder my nose," Ann said lightly. "Well, let's forget it!" "Take off your wet coat, Allan." He poured two drinks. Ann slipped her own coat off, feeling his eyes upon her, finished the drink quickly. "Want another?" "Later. I'm going to scramble more eggs, if you don't mind. I never could eat cold eggs." He slumped down in a chair, watching her gloomily as she mixed the eggs in a bowl and whipped them steadily. She turned to the stove, stirred them into a hot skillet. Oh, why didn't the taxi come! It must be all of a half hour. If her plan failed in the end—but no, it must not fail. It couldn't fail. She went into the breakfast room, got a cloth and napkins and came back. "A lot of fuss," Allan said, "over a little food. Let's cut the frills." ANN, spreading the cloth, smiled at him. "There's nothing to hurry about and I like the table to look nice." There was the taxi coming up the drive. Allan had not heard it. His head had dropped to his arms, on the table. "I forgot the silver. Will you please get some?" He got to his feet and staggered into the dining room. "For heaven's sake, Ann—" She flew to the front door, grabbing her hat and coat on the way. The driver had reached the door. In another moment he would have pressed the bell. He helped Ann into the cab, got in himself and turned on the ignition. "I forgot the silver. Will you please get some?" He got to his feet and staggered into the dining room. "For heaven's sake, Ann—" She flew to the front door, grabbing her hat and coat on the way. The driver had reached the door. In another moment he would have pressed the bell. He helped Ann into the cab, got in himself and turned on the ignition. They were driving away when Allan rushed to the porch. "Ann!" he shouted. "Drive on, please," Ann said. "Don't stop." Now that her frightful suspense was behind her she leaned back against the seat, shivering in her wet garments, tears pouring down her cheeks. The driver guessed that this girl had quarreled with the fellow who called at them. Perhaps he was her husband. Women were always running away from their husbands. There was the girl who had run away from that young millionaire, Peter Kendall. The taxi driver hadn't believed the story until the detective who had questioned him told him there'd be a fat sum in it if he could locate the girl. The detec-

Civic League of Eastland Biennial Election

The Civic League of Eastland opened its annual business meeting Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the community clubhouse with session conducted by their president, Mrs. W. K. Jackson and minutes presented by the recording secretary, Mrs. Iola Mitchell.

The session brought the reports of officers and treasurers report, showing many new dues paid in membership.

The handsome prizes in yard, home window and business house lighting contest held by the league during Christmas week, were presented on behalf of Mrs. R. L. Perkins, unable to attend, by Mrs. W. A. Martin, to the winners, Mrs. Curtis Kimbrell, Mrs. James Horton, and F. V. Williams, for the Community Natural Gas company.

The prizes were partly the gift of the electric light company, and the league extended them a rising vote of thanks. Wrought iron wall electric lamps with parchment shades and silver cords were the pleasing gifts.

In the recipients gracious thanks

Mr. Williams included a plea for co-operation from the league with the better housing proposition for which he is Eastland's chairman, and requested a committee from league to meet with other civic committees. The chair appointed Mrs. James Horton and W. P. Leslie to represent the league.

A special vote of thanks was extended Mrs. J. M. Perkins for her chairmanship of community Christmas tree and to the electric light and gas companies, Chamber of Commerce and all organizations for splendid help.

Mrs. Jackson thanked the league for the munificent Christmas gift shower, in which gifts represented lodges, P. T. A.'s, all the clubs of Eastland, and many individuals, including colored women's clubs and their churches.

Mrs. R. D. Mahon, chairman of the poetry contest, reported the contest closes next Tuesday, Jan. 15; that to date there are 80 entrants from the junior high school, several from high school and from 10 to 12 in the grammar schools. That two prizes would be purchased by league, and two have been donated by poets of Texas, these to be awarded at the February meeting of the league.

The biennial election of officers who take their places in May, was conducted by Mrs. J. M. Perkins, parliamentarian. The league voted to nominate from the floor.

Mrs. Jackson appointed as tellers Mrs. Perkins, E. E. Layton, D. Wolf, and R. E. Sikes.

Officers elected were Mrs. Jackson, president, re-elected; Mrs.

Richard Jones, first vice president; Mrs. B. E. McGlamery, second vice president, re-elected; Mrs. Iola Mitchell, secretary, re-elected; Mrs. N. N. Rosenquest, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eugene Day, treasurer, re-elected; Mrs. E. E. Layton, health chairman, re-elected; Mrs. James Horton, clubhouse board director.

Each officer expressed appreciation of the honor conferred. The chair on behalf of league paid tribute to Mrs. O. F. Chastain, retiring member of clubhouse board, for her services since her charter membership of the league, and on the board.

The next league meeting for Feb. 13 with first vice president Mrs. W. P. Leslie presiding, and program arranged by Mrs. N. N. Rosenquest, was announced.

The meeting closed with an address on "Better Speech," by Mrs. Hazel Carter Ammerman.

Personnel of attendance: Mmes. P. L. Crossley, R. E. Sikes, C. W. Price, N. N. Rosenquest, B. E. McGlamery, Dave Wolf, Curtis Kimbrell, O. F. Chastain, E. E. Layton, Frank A. Jones, R. D. Mahon, Bula B. Connelley, W. P. Leslie, Hazel Carter Ammerman, James Horton, W. A. Martin, Eugene Day, Richard Jones, J. M. Perkins, Iola Mitchell, W. K. Jackson, and a guest, F. V. Williams.

Attended Play
Mrs. James Horton was car hostess to Mmes. Grady Pipkin, J. M. Perkins, and Miss Betty Perkins, when the foursome attended the performance of "Green Pastures" on Wednesday night in Abilene.

Mrs. O'Rourke Hostess
The Bluebonnet club enjoyed a delightful afternoon Wednesday at the home of their hostess, Mrs. E. R. O'Rourke, whose decorations of ferns and begonias were reflected in the playing appointments in colonial design, for the four tables in bridge.

High score favor in game, a cookie jar, was awarded Mrs. Guy Patterson, and cut-for-all, kitchen memorandum pads, went to Mrs. Veon Howard, Mrs. R. L. Ferguson and Miss Ethel Fehl.

Others present were Mmes. James Beale, James Harkrider, W. E. Brashier, James Watson, Faye Earnest, Roy L. Allen, Joe Kramer, Jr., and a guest, Mrs. Carl Johnson.

The hostess served refreshments of cream cheese sandwiches, potato flakes, pickles, chocolate aclair with whipped cream topping, and coffee.

Delphian Announcement
The Alpha Delphian chapter announces that their session scheduled for Thursday afternoon was called off out of respect for the funeral held for the late Mrs. T. M. Wilson, that afternoon.

The club will meet Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the community clubhouse.

Junior Thursday Club Tourney News
Tickets sales are going fast under direction of Misses Josephine Martin, chairman; Marguerite Quinn, Jessie Lee Ligon, and Mary Carter for the Junior Thursday club game tourney, set for next Tuesday night, at 8 o'clock, in community clubhouse.

The proceeds of the tourney will be used for the Thursday Junior club expenses and to buy books for the junior reading department of the public library.

Douglas School Parent-Teacher Association
The Douglas School (Colored) Parent-Teacher association met Tuesday night with a majority of the members in attendance.

The president, Mrs. Eva Brisby, urged all to pay their school taxes, so that they might show the proper interest in the endeavor to build a new schoolhouse from the relief fund.
