SILVER PLAN IS SUBJECT OF CONTROVERSIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Nationalization of silver today sent inflationists and hard money advocates into bitter controversy as to whether it constituted inflation. The government made ready to print $100,000,000 in silver certificates as quickly as possible.

President Roosevelt's proclamation and executive order seizing all domestic silver except newly mined, will mean issuance of the new currency as rapidly "as the presses can turn them out," said Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr.

The congressional inflationary bloc headed by Sen. Elmer Thomas, Dem., Oklahoma, hailed the order as a boon for farmers from the standpoint that it will be easier for them to pay off their debts.

Hard money advocates, however, pointed out that issuance of $100,000,000 in new silver certificates is a "mere drop in the bucket" compared to the nearly half billion dollars in notes now in circulation.

Morgenthau would not enter the controversy, explaining the "treasury prefers to work on a day-to-day basis and intends to continue its present policy of silver certificates issuance."

ROOSEVELT IS BACK AT HOME IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—President Roosevelt returned to Washington today in good health and ready to tackle the problems facing his administration.

A small but enthusiastic crowd cheered the president as he was swept out of the station yards in a white house motor car at the end of his 10,000-mile seven weeks vacation trip.

The president appeared to be in the best health he has enjoyed during his administration. Those who accompanied him on the trip said he had gained several pounds.

He prepared to plunge immediately into the administration problems, coping with which will bring the new deal into another phase of its eventful history. He arranged a conference for 3 p. m. with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., who was one of the three cabinet officers to meet the train.

"Mighty glad to be back" was all the president said.

Money Is Granted To Fight Forest Fires In Texas

AUSTIN, Aug. 10.—Texas relief director Adam Johnson today approved an emergency project for $1,500 and a force of 50 men to fight a forest fire north of Clarksville, spreading toward valuable pine tracts in Red River county.

State aid in fighting the fire was asked after 100 CCC workers were withdrawn from the fire lines for a much needed rest. The blaze, which has been burning slowly for a week, gained headway and threatened 35,000 acres of forest lands.

Aubrey Williams, acting emergency relief administrator, revealed drought area cattle were being processed into canned beef and veal sides at the rate of 51,000 a day. The meat is shipped throughout the country for distribution to needy unemployed.

In addition relief workers were ordered to gather all surplus feed crops including hay, oats straw, wheat straw, soy bean hay and cotton seed meal to eliminate possibility of a shortage of forage crops in stricken territories.

In states in which relief workers have been employed in canning plants and the number of cattle processed in them daily include, Texas, 2,350; California, 1,000; Louisiana, 460, and several others.

IS TO ENTER A PLEA OF GUILTY BEFORE COURT

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, Aug. 10. James Patterson, prison guard charged with aiding the death house escape of Raymond Hamilton, Joe Palmer and Ervin (Blackie) Thompson, smuggled guns into the prison himself on a truck, it was learned from an authoritative source today.

Patterson, County Attorney Robert Burns said, will plead guilty to the charge in open court next week.

"I put the guns in a package and took them in unmolested on a truck I was riding as a guard," Patterson said in a statement. "I hid the package among my effects in the guards' quarters, then later planted them where one of the escaping men could pick them up."

"So far as we were able to learn Patterson got only $500 for his part in getting the guns into the walls," District Attorney Max Rogers said. "We understand reliably that Patterson was promised $1,000 or $1,500."

Rogers said Patterson would be arraigned before Judge S. W. Dean here Monday and that he would plead guilty immediately after an indictment was returned.

Eastland City Commission ISSUES A STATEMENT ON THE LOCAL GAS RATE SITUATION

The Eastland city commission, in a signed statement by all five members of the commission, states that for more than a month the commission has been working unceasingly on the gas situation in Eastland in an endeavor to work-out the best rate for Eastland gas users, regardless from what source that rate comes, and that the commission believes their work in this matter has met with the approval of the majority of the people.

"In order to keep you fully advised as to all real progress made in the matter, we submit to you a telegram just received by the commission," the signed statement says and then is quoted a telegram from F. L. Chase of the Lone Star Gas company.

The telegram and the statement by the commission are given below:

"For more than a month the city commission has been working almost ceaselessly upon the matter of the gas situation in Eastland. The members of the commission, though engaged in businesses of their own, have given the greatest portion of their time in past weeks in an endeavor to work out of the situation the best possible gas rates for this city regardless of from what source the rates might come.

"By the acquiescence of the great majority we take it that our actions in handling the matter with extreme caution, have met with your approval. In order to keep you fully advised as to all real progress made in the matter, we submit to you a telegram just received by the commission:

"Hon. Donald Kinnaird, mayor, "City of Eastland, "Eastland, Texas.

"I understand that Mr. Hickok is endeavoring to spread the propaganda in Eastland that should a franchise not be granted to his company under such terms as he desires that the Community Natural Gas company will attempt to raise its rates in the city of Eastland as soon as it may become known that the Eastland city commission has refused to grant a franchise to his company. Stop. We recognize that a competitive condition exists in both Eastland and Cisco I wish to state to you and your commission and to the gas consumers of Eastland that it is the intention of the Community Natural Gas company to always maintain its gas rates for gas used for domestic and commercial and industrial purposes in the city of Eastland lower than the rates established by the Cisco commission as minimum rates to be charged in the city of Cisco under an ordinance recently passed so long as these minimum rates in Cisco are in effect.

REPUBLICANS WONDER ABOUT THIRD PARTY

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Republican leaders tonight in President Roosevelt's Wisconsin speech an answer to the question: "Is the president starting a third party movement?"

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the republican national committee put the query.

Fletcher refused to make his own interpretation of Mr. Roosevelt's swing through the progressive northwest, culminating at Green Bay yesterday, in a boost for the re-election chances of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, a republican who bolted to the new deal in 1932.

"The question I would like to ask," Fletcher said today, "is this: 'Is he starting a third party?' I'd like to ask whether the progressive party is to be taken over and subordinated to the democratic party or whether there is to be an amalgamation."

Zoo Inhabitants Welcome Visitors From Old Country

DETROIT, Mich.—A lean, bronzed man in his late 50's hurried from section to section carrying to the occupants of the African veldt at the Detroit Zoological park.

The visitor was Chris Schultz, known the world over as Africa's most successful trapper of wild animals.

He hurried to the lion exhibit and emitted a piercing whistle. From under ledges and from the depths of caverns came curious lions and lionesses, showing their pleasure in meeting this man who knew how to give the proper greeting in the correct manner.

Chris and his friend, John T. Millen, director of the zoo, went on, over an embankment and into the trench encircling the rhinoceros enclosure.

"Ki Feru!" Chris called, and a whimpering sound came from his throat, "Ko Feru!"

JOBS FOR DEMOCRATS OUTSIDE OF CIVIL SERVICE

There were millions of hungry democrats on and after the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President. Now it is said the executive department pie counter has been stretched to a new peacetime high and these new jobs are outside of the civil service rules and regulations. The New Deal administration has put 100,000 persons on executive department payroll. These figures do not include those employed in the legislative, judicial or military branches of the government. Members of the congress have found work for hundreds more of their constituents. By far the greater number of employes at work are outside the District of Columbia.

There were no national recovery set-ups with the reins of government in the hands of Herbert Hoover. There were no huge relief set-ups. Millions of American men and women wage workers were out of employment. They had exhausted their private reserves—meaning their savings and their credit. Something had to be done. "Poverty had not been abolished." The poorhouse remains. Herbert Hoover was in error when he said it. When a patient is near death the physicians go all the way in their efforts to save the life of the individual. Why not the life of the country?

For years and years all the fat jobs were held by the republicans in power. For years and years all the high tariff laws were made for the makers of things and the growers who were the home buyers were almost bled to death. All the agricultural states carried the burden cost of government. They sold the surplus of American staples in foreign lands at prices fixed in the financial capitals of the old world countries. They paid the high price the tariff fixed for all the finished products of the makers of things on this side of the Atlantic. Well, the farmer landed in the ditch. There will be no return of great prosperity in America until his purchasing power has been restored and foreign markets are found for the surpluses produced by the tillers of the soil.

We must all come to realize that the greatest power for good in our present civilization is the solidarity of our people, working conjointly for a common ideal in which justice for all is the keystone.

AMOS PLEADS FOR JUSTICE

Amos 5:1, 10-15, 21-24
Amos, who declared he was not a prophet, yet foretold direful things to happen that did happen, fulfilled the meaning of his name—burden or burden-bearer. In all of his writings he portrayed a longing to lift weights from the oppressed.

He is classed as one of the twelve minor prophets, who lived in Tekoa in B. C. 793. Amos, the strong, rugged character, was a shepherd and a farmer. Tekoa was a desolate place almost surrounded by limestone mountains. The east side was open sloping downward to the wilderness of Tekoa. Centuries later, a kindred spirit, John, the Baptist, lived in this wilderness. It was here amid hardship and danger that Amos learned to speak fearlessly and with an oratory that was great in its simplicity, using illustrations from nature and scenes familiar to plainest country life.

When Amos sought the markets in the cities of the world he contacted many rich merchants. Possessing a religious conscience fastened in his quiet sheltered life he saw that the life in the cities reeked with corruption.

Idolatry, with its bestial immoralities was rampant; prices and measures were unjust; bad grain was sold as good and everywhere he saw wasteful luxury and extravagance.

We can picture him a great, strong, rugged man of the wilderness, stalking down the street with his soul raging within him, until he stops in the gate and begins to speak in an untrained voice and with awkward gestures. But his messages created a great sensation.

"O House of Israel," is his introduction because he includes it all from north to south, east to west. He told them of their hatred for anyone who spoke up-rightly and how they trampled the poor underfoot with prices, false measures and bribes; that he knew of their mighty sins. These sins were so mighty that the few who were prudent kept quiet, "for it is an evil time."

He explained to them that it was not enough just to seek good but they must "hate the evil, and love the good, and establish justice in the gate; it may be that Jehovah, the God of Hosts, will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph."

He concludes this chapter with strong and forceful language. "I hate, I despise your feasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs," are some of the phrases expressing his contempt for their hypocritical show of religion. "But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." He declared to them in ending this chapter their offerings to Jehovah while they still carried idols in their hearts would be punished by "captivity beyond Demascus, saith the Lord, whose name is the God of Hosts."

I wonder what Amos would say today if he should visit this land. He spoke of the "houses of hewn stone" in that day but they cannot measure up to our modern, comfortable homes of today.

Would he find idols in the hearts of people until Jehovah would refuse to hear their songs or prayers?

The sweetest songs, prayers, or music does not reach the ear of God unless the heart of the person is in unison with God. Hypocritical people ease their conscience with such services but it avails them nothing.

Too many people have drifted away from the study of God's word, away from the study of our own laws and have left it in the hands of a few until sin and strife is rampant within our own fair land.

Thousands of needy people are being helped and thousands are still suffering of whom the world knows nothing. The law of love should be introduced by the churches who hold Christ high that all may be drawn unto Him. Each member should rid himself of idols and help to bring in Christ's kingdom.

Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; love therefore is the fulfillment of the law. Romans 13:10 Golden Text.

Canadians to Hunt Gold In Old Wreck

HALIFAX, N. S.—An attempt to wrest treasure from the hull of an unidentified ship which sank off Portuguese Cove, near here, a century ago, is to be made by a party being organized by C. S. Gould. The ship lies in an inlet near the entrance of the Halifax harbor. Reports that a fortune in gold lies in the vessel's hull have been confirmed by the recovery recently of a quantity of the precious metal by a lone diver. The diver said the wreck is hard to reach and will have to be broken up with dynamite before the treasure can be taken out.

Indians Friend Has Quit at 70

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Dr. Vernon Ardagh, 70, known throughout Northern British Columbia as "Old Doc," who went to school with Rudyard Kipling, Will Spend the Rest of Days in the Old Man's home here.

Dr. Ardagh, who qualified in Edinburgh Medical school in 1885, has been the confidant and adviser of the northern Indians for the past 44 years. Born in Jurungabad, India, Dr. Ardagh was a pupil of Westward Ho school in Devonshire with Rudyard Kipling, who was nicknamed "Ginglamps" because he wore glasses. Following graduation, Dr. Ardagh went to British East Africa, now Kenya colony, where he was sent by the Church of England Mission society. He was invalided home after a year and a half with malaria. British Columbia was selected by the society for the young doctor's next field, and he arrived at the Indian village of Metlakatla in 1889, where two years later he established the first hospital in that territory.

Following a 10-year rest in the Old Country, Dr. Ardagh returned to British Columbia in 1911 and resumed practice of medicine, and under direction of the bishop of the diocese.

 On Friday night one of our town's well known citizens passed away suddenly and seemingly without a struggle when Lute Beach, known to all as "Daddy" Beach, was found lying on his bed, dead. His son, Ben Beach, and wife had gone to the revival at the tabernacle and on their return found him lying there just as if asleep with his clothes on. He is survived by several children, to all of whom sincere sympathy is extended. He was buried Sunday near Stephenville beside the graves of his parents. "Daddy" Beach was a unique character, a man who was known for his remarkable memory, being able after hearing a sermon or lecture to repeat it almost word for word. He had attended the revival on Thursday night and those near him had remarked on his intense listening. He was known in the town for his sense of humor and dry wit, also for his honesty in all business dealings, his loyalty to friends and devotion to his family. Quite a large crowd of friends and relatives attended his funeral. One more tribute of respect to "Daddy" Beach is that during the years that he lived here he was always ready to do his duty as a citizen in paying his taxes and casting his ballot in every election.

 This community is still in the grip of the worst drouth this writer has ever seen. He has seen lots of watermelons and tomatoes sunburn and ruin just as they began to ripen and we have seen a few tomatoes blister while they were still green, but we have never seen green apples sunburn while still hanging on the trees weeks and even months before time to ripen, until this summer. Many apples on this farm that are exposed to the direct rays of the sun all day are damaged to badly they will be unfit for food even if they should stay on the trees until ripening time.

Pneumatic Tires Said to Improve Farming Tractor

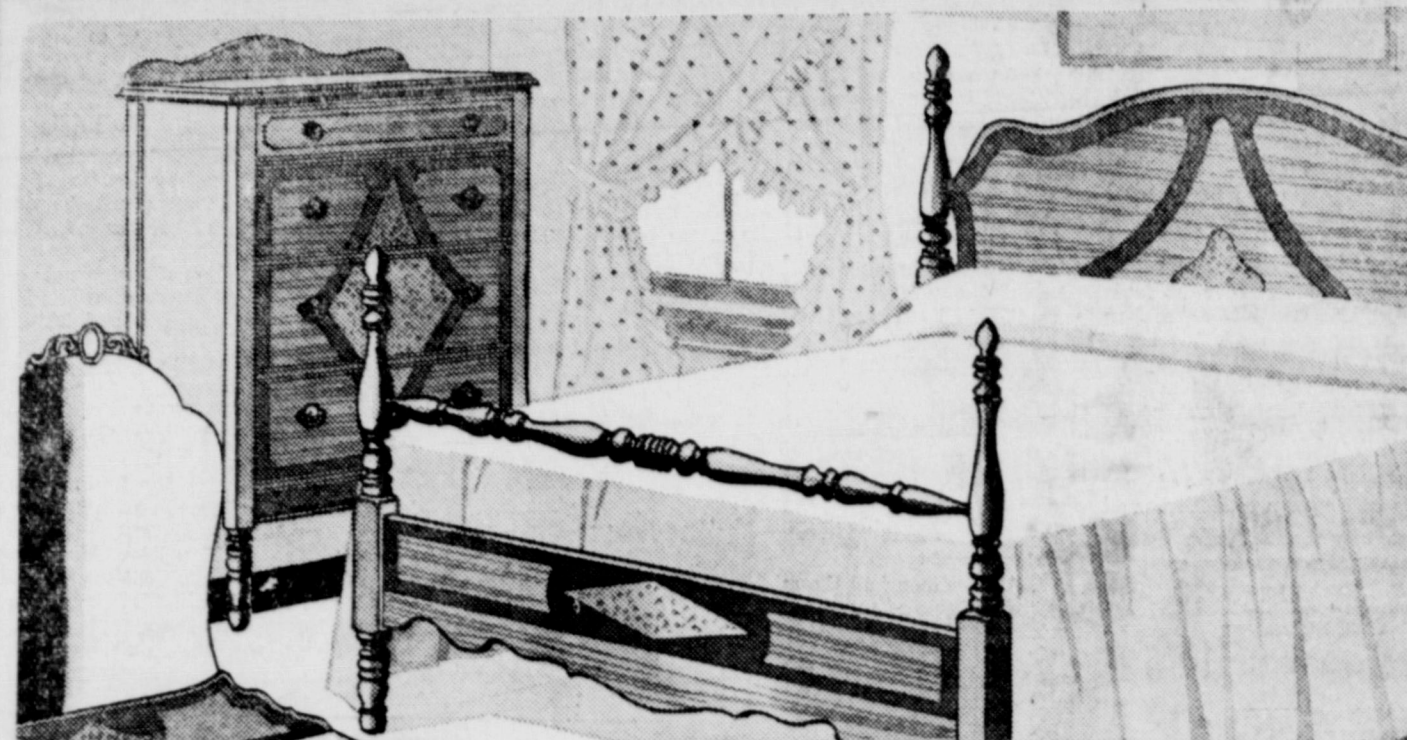

In a series of tests extending over a period of several months at the University of Nebraska it was demonstrated that tractors equipped with pneumatic tires were more efficient, more economical in operation, and generally outperformed tractors equipped with steel wheels having spade lugs. According to the published reports of the investigators, the tractors equipped with air-filled tires used an average of about 20 per cent less fuel on all operations than the steel wheeled tractors and plowed about 10 per cent more acres in the same amount of time. The air-filled tires were said to have been much easier on both tractor and driver because of smoother riding and easier steering. They also operated in high or intermediate work that steel wheeled tractors could perform only in low. This meant higher average speed and lower gasoline consumption.

One of the outstanding features of the pneumatic tires according to the report was their exceptional mobility and adaptability to any and all road or ground conditions. They can be moved rapidly from one field to another, from field to barn, if power is needed around the barn, right down any roads, even concrete, across plank bridges—many places where steel wheel tractors cannot be used. Because the pneumatics are such big, soft tires (they only use about 15 pounds of air) they won't pack seed beds, turf, or hay. Farmers can travel over new fields without danger to seedlings; orchards can be worked without fear of damaging tree trunks or roots.

According to Mr. Perkins, tire department manager of the local Montgomery Ward store, it is simple to put pneumatic tires on any tractor and they usually pay for themselves within a year by their economical operation. He also pointed out that Wards are especially proud of their line of Riverside tractor tires because they have all the best features of modern tractor tires—plus Wards famous and exclusive power-grip tread which gives the best traction under all ground conditions of any non-skid tread known. Mr. Perkins said, "Riverside tractor tires are remarkably low priced today and can be purchased on very convenient terms with payments spread over a period of six months."

BEACH CLUB GIRL

MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS BELONGS TO THE YOUNGER set of Larchneck, fashionable New York suburb. The coziness has had financial reverses and Boots tries not to be tedious of her visits to friends.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER II

"I MUST be running along," Boots told young Mrs. Hart, rather uncomfortably. She had been an idiot, she reminded herself, to come butting in here. Lois would think her a fool and this cool, utterly superior young man, with his foreign air of dandified elegance, rather bothered her.

"Nonsense, my dear," Lois said, her arm and made her sit down again. "Denis is staying with us—oh, you didn't know, you had child, you haven't been to see me in weeks. Boots," she said affectionately and rather gushingly, "was just graduated from high school some weeks ago—with honors. And are we proud of her!"

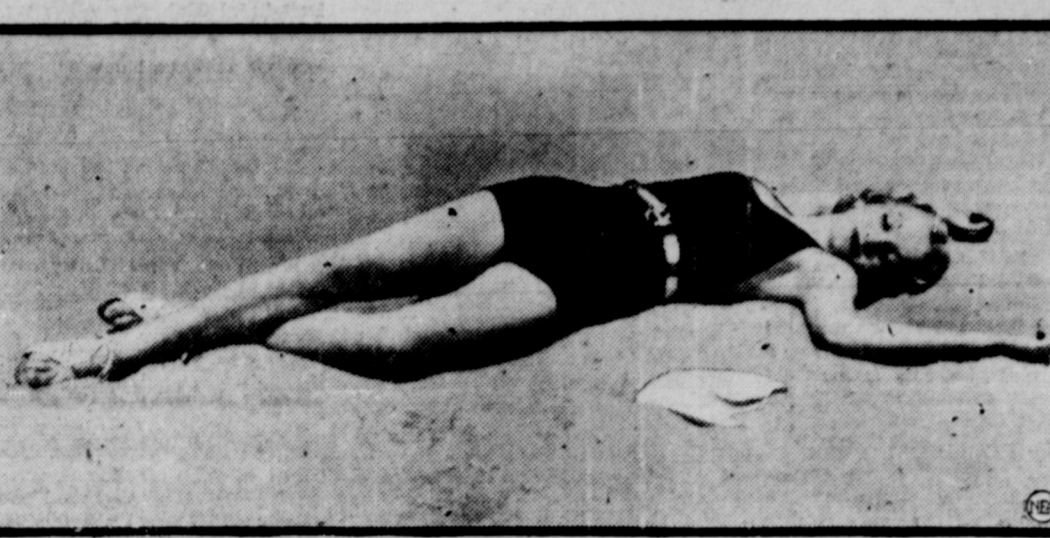

The young man smiled coolly (she thought) at this. She had sat down again, at the insistence of her hostess. Mrs. Hart was lounging gracefully in a deep chair and the young man had eased his tall self into another.

"Oh!" Boots forgot momentarily her distrust of the stranger, her uneasiness. "Do you, really?" The young man waved his achievements aside airily. He was very good looking, Boots thought, if you admitted that rather superficial type. He had long, narrow, gentleman blue eyes, put in with a smutty finger. His eyelashes were ridiculously long. They fascinated one.

Just the same, she didn't like him. She resented him. Maybe it was partly because tonight she was feeling lost and hurt and out of things: at any rate, after a few minutes of this wandering, desultory conversation she said she must go. She hadn't left a note for the parents. They would be at home any minute—they would wonder.

"Lois, who knew how the casual comings and goings of Larchneck's younger set were managed, rather opened her eyes at this, but she did not protest. Denie would walk down with Boots, she said.

"No, oh no! I'll just slip through the hedge," Boots Raeburn, noted in Larchneck for her "smooth" that her case and plans were actually stammering and flushing. Somehow she managed to get away. Her cheeks were very hot. He might have insisted on accompanying her, she thought resentfully. He might have—

She stretched out on the hot, white sand and lay there in that blissful state of suspension which is half-waking and half-asleep.

ment, shabby and comfortable. For the thousandth time Boots thought enviously of the rooms of the other girls. Isabel, with her pegged mangle and candlewick spread and the big satin puff, hand quilted. And Sylvia Rivers, whose sitting room had been "done" to a famous decorator from the city all in pastel with modernist furniture. No, it wasn't fair. Life itself was not fair.

She ran water into the tub in the big, staring white bathroom. She scrubbed her teeth meticulously, and stared discontentedly at her unadorned skin in the mirror. What good was it, she demanded passionately of herself, what earthly good was it to be pretty and graceful and well behaved? It got you precisely nothing.

"Really?" he said idly. Boots could have killed him for it. And "really?" he said again. "Denis," interpolated Lois Hart, facing the girl, "is just back from England. On his way to California. He," said Lois impressively, "writes."

"Oh!" Boots forgot momentarily her distrust of the stranger, her uneasiness. "Do you, really?" The young man waved his achievements aside airily. He was very good looking, Boots thought, if you admitted that rather superficial type. He had long, narrow, gentleman blue eyes, put in with a smutty finger. His eyelashes were ridiculously long. They fascinated one.

Another bright, hot, breathless day dawned. Boots woke to a feeling of gawdy and hopelessness. Anything might happen. It was sure to be a splendid party. What an idiot she had been to be so much about things yesterday. Everything went more smoothly on this hot morning. At 11 Mrs. Raeburn bound for the stores, dropped Boots at the clubhouse gate. Shouts and splashing were heard above the sound of a player piano. Boots sprang lightly up the stairs.

It was too early for the crowd. Although the girl saw out of two familiar faces and waved gaily to a few of the high school set who already seemed "just kids" to her. Nothing could bother her, nothing upset her, she told herself gaily. Today was wonderful. There was a special feeling in the air of hope and promise. The dance tonight would be wonderful. Too. What matter if she were to be among the oldest? Hardy would see her. He might even single her out.

She dove and swam in solitary happiness. Afterward she stretched out on the hot white sand and lay there in that blissful state of suspension which is half waking and half sleep, thinking her own thoughts.

None of this matters," Boots tried to tell herself calmly and judiciously. "Years from now I'll laugh at it. Maybe I'll have forgotten it entirely."

But her palms were wet as she raised herself from the sand. There were only a few people on the beach and circling the pool now. Somehow Boots managed to walk to her cubicle. She thought even stupid Dinty Adrian must see that something had happened to her, as he handed her the key. But Dinty only stared owlishly and said it sure was hot.

SHE struggled into her few brief garments. The striped seersucker dress had seemed pretty and fresh this morning. Now the hateful cheapness of it sickened her. A 69-cent remnant... she had made it herself, feeling happy and clever to be able to contrive this way. Now everything was blackened and spoiled. All she asked was to be able to get away, to get out of it all to some new place where clothes and money didn't matter. Maybe she could be a settlement worker... anything.

She came blinking into the darkness of the awning porch some moments later, a slim girl with dark eyes burning in a white face, her gilt hair framing her face in a classic cap of wet ringlets. The young man idling with the rolls at the player piano turned a frank stare of admiration up to her.

"Hello," he said amiably. "Oh, can all that stuff," she heard a boy's voice, unrecognized, say disgustedly. "You women—"

Then the group drifted away. She wished that she might die. Only that. To be engulfed in some blessed, all-enveloping tide. To pass out of life painlessly, definitely and for all. That was all she asked. Her pulse pounded in her temple; she thought for a minute she was really going to be sick. With plunging heart, she fought off the feeling. Any minute now, say minute she might get up and crawl away, like some stricken thing, some mortally wounded creature.

Why, she had never known anyone could be so cruel! It wasn't her fault that their house was shabby, that they had to plan and contrive for everything. She hadn't realized that anyone ever talked so about her. About her! She had been in Patty's light, careless room, what unabashed glee! But then Patty was Sylvia's friend and sycophant. And Sylvia was definitely her enemy—had always been since that first day of school four years ago when Boots' theme and won the first-term prize and Sylvia's had been shelved.

Entertained By Many Friends

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Kitley and children of Troup, who have spent their vacation in Eastland, have been entertained at the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Moorhead, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bedford, and Mr. and Mrs. Fenner, latter managers of the Red Point Tourist Camp. Wednesday, Mr. and Mrs. Kitley and daughters, Misses Jean and Alice Payne, were the noon dinner and evening tea guests in a spend-the-day visit with Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Hunter, and Miss Mary Frances Hunter, who has been hostess to Miss Jean Kitley for some weeks.

A Correction
Mrs. Charles Ratcliff of Brownwood who was the recent guest of her daughter, Mrs. Valson Jones, had a delightful visit here, with her daughter's friends. We regret that, accidentally, Mrs. Jonathan Jones was mentioned as the daughter of Mrs. Ratcliff.

Rev. Hogan's Coming Postponed
Rev. Hogan's announced pulp visit for this Sunday, Presbyterian church services, is canceled, as arrangements have been made by him, to preach here Aug. 19th. It is not known at this time whether he will conduct both morning and evening services, but he will fill the pulpit in the church in the forenoon.

Delightful Club Luncheon
Mrs. Roy L. Allen entertained the Bluebonnet club most delightfully at her home Wednesday morning, with bridge and noon luncheon.

The motif of the entertainment was in Japanese effect in playing table appointments of 13 tallies, score pads, and tiny Japanese umbrellas for favors, the motif also carried out in the awards of a half dozen wooden Japanese coasters for Mrs. W. J. Peters in high guest score, and half dozen Japanese nut dishes, the cut-for-all, the happy luck of Mrs. Ayers.

Consolation, a Japanese memorandum pad, went to Mrs. Bernice Blowers. The luncheon menu of fruit cocktail, with second course of meat loaf, potato ring with creamed peas filling, hot buttered rolls, lettuce and tomato salad and iced tea with minted lemon, had last course of caramel pastry with whipped cream topping.

Guests of the club meeting were Misses Ayers, W. J. Peters, Carl Johnson and John Fehl; and club members present: Misses E. R. O'Rourke, James Watson, James Beale, Guy Patterson, Bernice Blowers, R. L. Ferguson, James Harkrider, Miss Ethel Fehl, and hostess.

Birthday Honored
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stokes honored their daughter, Thelma's, fourteenth birthday with a 12 o'clock luncheon at their home, 515 South Daugherty, Sunday. Luncheon was served to Misses Louise Cook, Fern Allen Meroney of Ranger, Denise Ware of Los Angeles, Calif., and house guest of the Stokes, and Mr. and Mrs. Stokes and Thelma.

Games were played throughout the afternoon and punch and cake was served in mid-afternoon.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHURCH
Mass on Sunday will be at 7 a. m. by Rev. Collins. Sunday will be the Twelfth Sunday after Pentecost. The Epistle read is taken from the Second Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians III 4-9, the Gospel is from St. Luke X 23-27. This gospel insists on the necessity of mercy towards our fellow man. The Bible says that God's mercy is over all his works. We ask God to forgive us on condition that we forgive those who may have injured us.

Wednesday, August 15, is the Feast of the Assumption of the Virgin Mary into heaven and is a holy day of obligation. Mass on that day will be at 8 a. m. Tuesday, the eve of the feast, is a day of fast and abstinence.

"Girls today are very nice," says a 100-year-old woman of Atlantic City, "but they ought to wear more clothes." Then, if they do, how could we tell they're so nice?

Mother Robin Stole Gloves For Babes
By United Press
COLUMBUS, Neb.—A mother robin living near the home of Judge Louis Lightner here apparently believes in handling her family with gloves.

Several weeks ago, Mary Ann Lightner washed out a pair of white gloves and hung them out on the line to dry—and they disappeared.

A few days later Judge Lightner saw one of the gloves on top of the garage, so boys in the neighborhood promptly were blamed for the misdeed.

But last week came the denouement. At an ice cream social the judge happened to look up into a tree and saw something white. A spy glass revealed the other missing glove—draped fetchingly about the robin's nest.

The glove will remain missing because the judge feels that feminine desire should be appeased.
