CHAIN OF EVIDENCE AGAINST BRUNO HAUPTMANN GROWS TIGHTER WITH DISCLOSURES

Roosevelt Says Relief Question In Study Stage
By United Press
NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The chain of evidence linking Bruno Hauptmann to the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby tightened today with disclosure of a code letter written before the abduction telling of plans for the crime.
Evidence that Hauptmann had confederates was strengthened, including one hint a woman was "leader" of the plot.
While Hauptmann was questioned again, officials of New Jersey, Ohio, and government agencies piled up the evidence which now includes a "positive" identification of his writing as that of the man who wrote all the ransom notes.
Other developments included:
1. Announcement by Warden P. E. Thomas of Ohio state penitentiary that a letter signed by Bruno Hauptmann was written to George Paulis, a prisoner, prior to the kidnaping. It was a code letter, which conveyed this message: "Intend kidnap Lindbergh baby. Hope for me."
2. Revelation that Paulis was taken to New Jersey after the kidnaping to aid the investigation and that a man and woman tried to approach him on a station platform. Later Paulis said the couple was responsible for the abduction and the woman was the "brains of the plot."
3. Search for a woman in the case was spurred by New York police declaration a strong theory had been built up a woman aided Hauptmann. However, they did not have any specific woman under suspicion.
4. The kidnap ladder was traced to a lumber yard where Hauptmann worked. A pair of field glasses were found in his home. He might have used them to study movements at the Lindbergh house, police said.
5. Indication that the New Jersey murder charges against Hauptmann have been so strengthened that extradition may be sought earlier than expected.
Police revealed that the department of justice agents sought a friend of Hauptmann, who visited the Hauptmann garage after Hauptmann was arrested.

CONGRESS MAY BE ASKED FOR NEW ARMS LAW

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The inside picture of the arms industry revealed by the senate munitions committee inquiry, was expected today to bring a sharp demand in the next congress for rigid government control or monopoly of the vast armament business.
Chairman Gerald P. Nye said the revelations "had a tendency to paint a sordid picture of the industry and many who had contact with it." Senator Bennett Champ Clark, democrat, Missouri, charged a "partnership" existed between arms manufacturers and the government and said he would demand laws to break it up.
Additional hearings are scheduled about Dec. 1. Officers of the Bethlehem and United States Steel corporations probably will be heard.

Pep Group Choice Was Red and Black

Selection of uniforms, red and black, for the Eastland high school pep squad was made Thursday by members to enable the group to whoop up football doings in the near future.

Health Officer Is Not Afraid of Leprosy Colony

HOUSTON, — Leprosy, most dreaded of all diseases for thousands of years, hold no fears for Dr. John Brown, Texas state health officer.
How Dr. Brown personally conducted leper railway car from Brownsville, Texas, to Carrville, La., allowing no one else to contact the diseased persons, was told here by E. D. Hopkins, state health department engineer.
Dr. Hopkins said he went with Dr. Brown to Brownsville after they heard there four leprosy cases there.
"Dr. Brown's purpose was to take the victims to the leprosy colony at Carrville, the only one in the United States Permission was secured from the federal surgeon general," Dr. Hopkins said.
The doctor said Dr. Brown examined the four cases, found they had leprosy and persuaded them to go to the colony. Dr. Brown refused to let any one other than himself do any of the contact work, Dr. Hopkins added.
"A special car was hired and the sick persons were placed on it. The door was locked and no one was permitted to enter during the trip but Dr. Brown."
"When the train got to Carrville the car was switched off. The four were taken to the colony in an automobile. The car then was fumigated," Dr. Hopkins said.
The doctor said that new discoveries have taken away much of the fear of leprosy among the medical profession. He said it probably was the least contagious of all diseases called contagious.

On work relief projects, 80 per cent of the funds must be spent for workers' wages, 20 per cent for materials.
No wage scale was set for relief workers. Conferees pointed out that to set a scale different from that prescribed by the federal government would endanger Texas' chances of securing funds under the matching agreement.

ROTARIANS OF EASTLAND IS WINNER OVER ANGELO 12-6

A light but ever alert Eastland Maverick team in San Angelo with their eyes wide open to profit by the mistakes of their opponents, took the long end of the score, 12-6, off the field Friday night in Angelo.
The game, season opener to both, was one in which the Mavericks carried on the tradition of playing bang-up style with San Angelo, a tradition which started years ago when Rex Clark and Bill Cheatham starred in offensive against San Angelo.
The last year's West Texas high school champions began to feel the pressure of the Mavericks' charge when the big doings began after Garrison made a 21 yard run during the second quarter. Then the Bobcats made a midfield punt in their goal line stand. When the ball went to Eastland, Johnny Garrison made Eastland's opportunity out of a bad passback into their first scoring play by running a 65 yard irregular route to the goal line. Tully missed goal.
In the latter part of the second San Angelo covered an Eastland fumble on the 35-yard line. Drake of Angelo passed to North, who made good 15 yards before he was downed. Bowden made short gains and finally Strom plunged the one yard line. Turner's kick was too wide and left the score tied, 6-6, at the half.
A fumble by Angela in the third quarter meant the opportunity of another scoring play by Eastland which was carried through by Tully, Garrison and Mackall. Tully's leave to Garrison netted 24 yards for the Mavericks as did the other for nine yards in the end zone which was carried over by Mackall. Goal kick failed to add extra points.
The final quarter was marked by the defensive play of Eastland after the threat made by a 35-yard pass from Drake to Wood.
Bagley of Eastland put up good line play. Bagley, one of the left overs from last season was named by fans returning as an asset of big value to Eastland. Tully's pass heaving was predicted as the best displayed to date.
Garrison of Eastland made an example to fellow workers, who all played brilliantly, how it should be done.
The starting lineups:
Eastland—Taylor and Tully, ends; Trantham and Brown, tackles; Bagley and Frost, guards; Butler, center; Garrison, quarter; Upton and Hart, halfbacks; Mackall, full.
San Angelo—Smith and Doran, ends; Baker and Mercer, tackles; Hill and Shotts, guards; Reese, center; Young, quarter; Bowden and Wood, halfbacks; Strom, full.

Both were under sentence to be electrocuted for the murder of Sheriff Jess Sarber, Lima, O., committed when they freed John Dillinger from the Lima jail.
They were shot by a specially armed and trained riot squad. Rushed to death row by a buzzer signal signifying trouble, the riot squad met the two gangsters as they came out of their cells pointing wooden guns. The guards opened fire and the gangsters dropped.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK.

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

PAUL HOLLISTER, executive vice president of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., says:

"One of the shrewdest and hardest-boiled of the Washington newspaper and radio observers, William Hard, wrote the other day in the Washington Star: 'It was Macy & Co., leading merchandising outfit that led the fight against all price fixing in retailing.' Did you ever stop to think why?"

"Because in 76 years since a Nantucket Whaler named Captain Rowland H. Macy came ashore and set up a little cash store at 14th street and 6th avenue, New York, his store has never been able to get away from a few simple truths.

1. "The truth that any business is run not by the management but by the consumer. That is, by you and me—citizens, who have the right to buy where they will and to pay no more than they can afford.

2. "The truth that cash business costs less than credit business, and that the cash saving must be passed on to the consumer.

"In those 76 years, Macy's has been dozens of attempts at price fixing, every one of which aimed to make you and me—the consumer—pay more, in order to "protect" a manufacturer or a retailer who needed outside help to make up for his own lack of ability. The price fixer always thinks 'the public will foot the bill.'

"The consumer is very patient—but the public will not foot the bill. What happens—the price-fixer raises prices so as to guarantee his own profit.

"Then the consumer says: 'I can't afford that much. With prices up 20 per cent and wages only up 10 per cent, I lose; I can only buy 90 per cent of what I could afford before prices rose.' So the consumer—you and I—buy less.

"Then the price-fixer sees that his sales have dropped, and that instead of making money, he has actually shrunk his market. He is starting a negative downward spiral that can only stop when he asks a price most people can afford.

"Perhaps the simple faith in and fearless defence of those two truths is what has built the largest retail store in America."

It is permissible to wonder whether future historians will record today as one of the most momentous in American history or whether its doings will be relegated to that limbo of forgotten things.

PLANE PASSENGERS WANT TEA

VANCOUVER — Coffee aeronade may be popular drinks with Americans aloft, but United Air Lines has had to bow to the tea drinking habit of Canadians. Stewardesses on the company's big coastal liners are now serving tea with lunches, as a concession to the taste of British Columbians.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

BEGIN HERE TODAY BOOTS RAEBURN, IS, elopes with RUSSELL L. AND handsome swimming instructor, and almost immediately realizes the marriage is a mistake. When Russ goes to Florida, promising to send for her later, she goes to work in a department store. She meets DENIS FENWAY, young author, and EDWARD VAN DER BEEK, wealthy and socially prominent. When Russ and Boots does not write, then word comes that he has been killed in a motorboat accident.

"Why do you do this?" Edward complained one night when he found her particularly white and tired. "Why not marry me and step right out of it all?" Edward urged with impatience. Boots could not — would not explain the situation at home. Her pride would not permit it. To have Edward offering to subsidize her parents would be most humiliating. Besides, she felt definitely that this was not the way out — marriage. She had slipped into it before as a means of escape from life that she hated. She was more mature, more sturdy now; she would not make that mistake again.

coats walking toward her, attended by two or three young men. Sylvia's high-heeled shoes were shining and elegant, setting off her narrow feet to perfection. Her dark hair was crowned by a feathery cap of crushed golden brown petals. A wave of expensive scent preceded her. Boots, in her tweed coat which had seen three seasons' wear, her sturdy brogues and stockings darned at the heel, was conscious of her own shabbiness. Sylvia's eyes flicked her once, raced past her; it was the cut direct. Boots turned away quickly, her blood racing. It was silly, it was stupid to be hurt by the incident, she assured herself. Sylvia was ignorant, crass and cruel. But the long stung, none the less, and all the way in to the city she read her paper with unseeing eyes, her heart burning angrily within her.

Boots went back to the little D apartment she shared with Frances, and which Frances had occupied alone before her coming. Briefly she explained the situation. Frances was all sympathy, all understanding. Naturally Boots wanted to be with her people if they needed her. Boots glanced around the gay and colorful room in which she had been so happy. By contrast with the shabby house in Larchneck it wore a particularly inviting air. All the soft hued lamps were lighted. Frances, in vivid pajamas of "vari-colored silk," toasted bread before the fire.

"I'm sorry, honey. I guess there's nothing else to do." Frances cocked her bird-like dark head up at her. Boots had her bags packed. The furniture all belonged to Frances. There was a flower arrangement on the bedroom wall, one Boots had admired and Edward had bought for her. "I'll take this of our good times," said Mr. Derringer who knew the family well.

Sylvia's engagement to some young Oregonian was announced in the village papers that week and a score of "functions" followed in the announcement's wake. Sylvia's picture, a flattering one showing the Rivers heiress in an evening gown of daring cut with the inevitable orchids on her shoulder, smiled forth from the society pages. The day Boots saw this particular picture she paid the first installment on the new furnace and had her brown shoes half soled.

"I'll take this of our good times," said Mr. Derringer who knew the family well. The furnace was repaired and Boots signed the note. She cut down on lunches. She mended her worn stockings painstakingly. She raged inwardly at the knowledge that her frail mother traveled over to the Exchange with the dozens of rolls in trays. How did people get money? She marveled. It seemed to her that they had never had enough, really, but things had never been so bad as this.

LIFE was quiet in the big house. Occasionally Isabel ran over for an evening gossip. Once Johnny came in, rather embarrassedly, to call. But he was obviously awed by Boots' new status and went away Boots found, moreover, that she had little to say to her contemporaries now. They seemed to move in a different world.

Her mother grew thinner and more gaunt and more determinedly cheerful. Boots watched the gallant figure narrowly, fearfully. The first snow of December fell, ushering in actual winter. Boots figuratively tightened her belt, thinking she must feel as a soldier does who faces a long siege. The invalid upstairs occupied himself with his solitaire, his books. Miss Florida came and went. She was giving music lessons now, but they knew her finances were low and reluctantly accepted the small amount she gave them weekly. They could not have managed without Miss Florida. She stayed with Mr. Raeburn when his wife went to the Exchange morning and afternoon. She was invaluable, both for her spirit and her physical aid. Boots, as a school girl, had been mildly tolerant of the spare, angular spinster with the rather gushing laugh. Now she thought the plain face actually beautiful and the thin hands held in them a kindness the like of which she was not likely to know again.

It was strange taking her place again in this old, familiar world, seeing the same faces; hearing the same voices; realizing the old order of things still prevailed, no matter what her personal earthquake had been. Showers were still given for engaged girls. Jealousies and rivalries were still rife in club and sorority. The Thanksgiving dance, now impending, embraced a host of small storms and quarrels and misgivings. Isabel told her about it all. Isabel now belonged to "the old girls."

She passed Mrs. Fennell on the street one Sunday afternoon and the older woman bowed cordially. She seemed to wish to stop and chatter but Boots went on her way coolly. She was not to be drawn into conversation with her old enemy. With sharpened vision and perceptions, she realized there was nothing Mrs. Fennell would have enjoyed so much as a resume of the whole affair. She would have liked the girl to grovel in spirit, saying, "You were perfectly right and I learned my lesson."

But it was not easy going for the girl. She had her moments of black discouragement, difficult to conceal. It was in one of these that Edward, gliding up to the shop in his big car one early winter twilight, found her. "Drop all this," he urged almost angrily. "Let me take care of you, of all of them. I want to do it." It was tempting. The snow fell steadily outside. Boots dared not buy the warm things she needed to keep out the mounting cold. And Edward, murmuring in her ear, talked of a warmer climate for her father, golf stream currents, eternal sunshine.

Sylvia Rivers, Boots learned, had been abroad. She would be back "any day now." The thought of Sylvia left Boots unmoved. It seemed ages ago, centuries, that she had envied Sylvia, had hated and resented her. She went back and forth to the city every day. On the train she was absorbed in her newspaper and her lists.

But if the encounter with Mrs. Fennell failed to hurt her, the return of Sylvia Rivers did not leave her completely untouched. Boots morning train for her usual early platform when she heard a high, affected voice a gust of whispering notes of laughter. Glancing up, she saw Sylvia, wrapped in the sleekest and softest of dark mink

CCC Workers an Aid to Rangers

WASHINGTON—A round-up of the work sheets of jobs done by the civilian conservation corps during its first year reveals a big increase in major item accomplishment for the second half of the year over the first half, according to the forestry news digest.

The figures, compiled during the period of drought when fire hazards are the worst, points out to the American people the tremendous job facing the forester when there is no CCC to help him, said Charles L. Throp Pack, president of the American Tree association.

F. A. Silcox, U. S. forest chief, declared fire losses were "more than cut in half" during the first 10 months of 1933, adding that he attributed much of this saving to the work of the CCC.

The conservation corps was responsible for a 37 per cent reduction in forest fires, according to Arno R. Cammerer, director of national parks.

Analysis of figures compiled by the forestry news digest shows 639,709 man days were spent fighting fires for the year ending April 1, 1934.

Other achievements of the CCC include:

- Telephone line construction, 15,241 miles; insect pest control, trees, 1,666,637 acres; well development for livestock, 1,168 wells; erosion control, bank protection, 110,020,183 square feet; trail building, 5,733 miles.

ROGERS PLAYS FAMED JURIST IN NEW FILM

Will Rogers—in the most human and lovable role he has yet played! That is the screen fare promised at the Lyric theatre, where Will's latest Fox picture, "Judge Priest," shows on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

According to advance reports, the star has never been so well suited as by this screen character, the shrewd, kindly but strong-willed Kentucky jurist, who is already famous in the stories of Irvin S. Cobb, perhaps America's most noted humorist.

With his characterization of the "Judge," Rogers is said to add a new and original figure to his all-American gallery, which includes such memorable portraits as David Harum, Mr. Skitch, Dr. Bull and the Connecticut Yankee.

This time he plays a wise old fellow who, following the Civil war, has settled down in his native Kentucky village with his Confederate cronies. The story opens in his court room on a lazy spring day in 1890.

One does not expect drama in a village, perhaps, but in "Judge Priest" plenty of it transpires, according to advance accounts. The Judge's nephew, a novice lawyer, and his sweetheart, a girl whose birth is shrouded in mystery, figure importantly in the touching and dramatic story. Always there is Judge Priest, who dilutes justice with the milk of human kindness and who helps to shoulder the troubles of the town.

John Ford directed "Judge Priest" from a script prepared by Dudley Nichols and Lamar Trotti. Irvin Cobb himself was present in Hollywood during its filming.

The notable cast includes Tom Brown, Anita Louise, Rochelle Hudson, Henry B. Walthall, David Landau and Stepin Fetchit.

FOOLS THE DOCTORS

Tom Mix, film star to appear with Sam B. Dill's circus in Eastland Saturday, Sept. 29, has been told eleven times he would die, yet today is very much alive.

Tom Mix Has Fought Way Out of Eleven "Fatal Wounds" to Date

Tom Mix, the distinguished and virile film star, who is heading Sam B. Dill's three ring circus, at Eastland Sept. 29, in person, with a massive company, could very well ascend the platform of pedagogy and administer an A-B-C lesson in courage to all of the quitters and wholly or partially discouraged persons in the universe.

Tom Mix was only 14 years old when his hardy parents took him to town on a holiday. The sheriff's posse spotted a desperate bandit group. They dismounted and opened fire with the huge 45's of old, and young Mr. Mix chanced to be standing in the path of two of their boring bullets.

Later in life Mix donned the uniform of the United States artillery and went to war against the Spaniards in Cuba. An enemy sniper let fly point blank for the glory of the Empire and the cowboy's New York stage favorite in an outstandingly mourning the loss of a brave soldier.

Then came the day that the lanky Texan chanced to be pushing an artillery wagon out of a trench near Peking when shrapnel splintered its wooden spokes and tore the skin off his head from forehead to nape of neck. He was scalped as cleanly as any Cherokee could have done it.

He was shot two inches below the heart while on "river duty" at Capa Blanca, Texas, in the days when he wore the badge of a United States marshal. He was riddled with bullets through arms and abdomen while rounding up dangerous outlaws, on duty in Oklahoma, also as a marshal.

As a sheriff at Chito, Okla., Mix was shot through the pelvis as he attempted to wrest a pistol from a drunken mad man.

He suffered 22 knife wounds in the wild western territory of those days.

A dam blew up too soon while he was filming a motion picture in California, tearing a hole four inches square in his back, and he was given up for "gone" once more.

Just recently he was stricken with peritonitis at his Beverly Hills home. And this is the eleventh "fatal" illness or accident in his life. Serums were rushed by airplane, distinguished surgeons hurried to the hospital chamber for grim consultation, and the world's press again printed the prophesy of Tom Mix's early demise.

"MIDNIGHT ALIBI" THRILLING ROMANCE BY DAMON RUNYON

"Midnight Alibi," First National's picturization of Damon Runyon's thrilling romance of metropolitan New York of the present day, is scheduled to open at the Lyric theatre on Sunday with Richard Barthelmess in the stellar role and Helen Lowell, famous New York stage favorite in an outstandingly mourning the loss of a brave soldier.

Much in the same tempo as his "Lady for a Day," Runyon has drawn gangster characterizations in whimsical vein, in a story that carries an unusual romance and many thrills. The unusual friendship that springs up between the proud old aristocrat, Abigail Ardley, and the young racketeer, Lance McGowan, who seeks refuge in her secluded mansion when pursued by a rival gang intent on putting him on the spot, dramatizes the spirit of New York, as few, if any other stories, have done.

Barthelmess has the role of the gangster, and also appears in a short episode as the sweetheart of the aristocratic spinster when she was a young girl 45 years before. It is the resemblance of the two youths that draws the spinster to the gangster. Miss Lowell appears as the elderly Abigail Ardley, and is said to have a remarkable performance, and one that will proclaim her as one of the leading screen players as she had formerly been on the stage.

Ann Dvorak plays the role of the "Matter" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, today.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept from the owners thereof to their hurt" (Ecclesiastes 5:13).
The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Every step towards goodness is a departure from materiality, and is a tendency toward God, Spirit. Material theories partially paralyze this attraction towards infinite and traction towards the infinite, temporal good by an opposite at-rary, and discordant" (page 213).

Honor guests were Mrs. F. M. Kenny, president Thursday Afternoon Club; Mrs. Ben E. Hamner; Mrs. James Horton, district secretary, and Mrs. J. M. Perkins, president of Sixth District, each of whom gave informative and interesting talks along the line of club work.

The informal program included several delightful readings by Mrs. Hazel Carter Ammerman, guest reader; a piano solo, "Romanza," Clara June Kimble; and violin solo, Moskowski's "Spanish Dance," by Miss Jo Earl Uttz, with Miss Kimble at piano.

At close of program, supper was served in buffet fashion from three tables laid in Italian linen, and charmingly arrayed in refreshments of congealed vegetable salad, macaroni and olive salad, tristos, olives, pickles, cheese wafers, sandwiches, appetizers, and spiced cake squares.

Coffee was poured from a handsome silver service by Mrs. Poe Lovett. During the tea hour inter-incident piano and violin music was charmingly brought by Misses Kimble and Uttz.

The president distributed the handsome new year-books, published by the Eastland Telegram, and with which the club is well pleased.

Miss Davenport introduced the guests of the evening, Mrs. John Hart, Miss Vera Creighton, Mrs. Ben L. Sears, Mrs. Homer Norton, Mrs. R. L. Ferguson, Miss Carter, and Miss Reik.

"FAUCET ACTION"
controls the bill for Hot Water

The average housewife washes more than 43,560 square feet of dish surface every year. This endless task can be speeded unbelievably by steamy water as hot as the hand can stand.

Modern gas inventions make available instantly at small cost this needed labor-saver in the home. Take, for example, this revolutionary new "Ruud" automatic water heater.

With it hot water flows the instant the faucet is opened. Gas burns in direct ratio to water flow and only for water drawn. In other words, this "faucet-action" makes possible the control of hot water costs with your hand at the faucet.

Be sure the gas appliance you select carries the approval of the American Gas Association Laboratory... and remember, modern gas appliances are available also from your gas appliance dealer. See his display.

- No lost heat as Ruud Model W heats water as it is used.
- Main gas burner is open only when the faucet is open!
- Striking design which can be installed on floor or on the wall!
- Special low introductory price and trade-in allowance!
