BRUNO'S FRIEND GIVES ANOTHER ALIBI FOR HIM

By United Press
FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 4.—John Klottberg, compatriot and friend of Bruno Hauptmann, testified today that he saw Isador Fisch carry a package into the Hauptmann home on the Saturday night before Fisch sailed for Germany.

It was the defense contention the package contained what was fit of the $50,000 ransom money passed over the fence of St. Raymond's cemetery and into the hands of the extortioner. The story was designed to clear Hauptmann of charges he collected the ransom money and to place the guilt on Fisch.

He swore that on the night when the state contends Hauptmann collected the ransom from Dr. Conon he was at Hauptmann's home and the defendant was there all evening.

Then he related that in December, 1933, Fisch attended another party at the Hauptmann home, bringing with him a package about five inches by six inches by 14 inches.

He immediately walked to Hauptmann, Klottberg said, and went into the kitchen. When he emerged Fisch did not have a package and he did not see it, said Fisch.

The defense contends Fisch gave Hauptmann a package to keep for him, that Hauptmann took it and put in a kitchen closet and it was months later when it was discovered the package contained money.

Breckenridge will be the scene of oil operators from all over the Oilbelt district Tuesday evening at the Burch Hotel. An unusual and interesting program has been arranged for the occasion. Wirt Franklin, who has been an outstanding figure in the oil business will be among the features of the program. The organization of the Oil Belt is known as the Central West Texas Oil and Gas Association which was organized a little over a year ago. C. W. Hoffman, with the firm of Hoffman and Page of Eastland is president of the organization.

Under the leadership of Mr. Hoffman, much has been accomplished during the past year. He has devoted his time and money faithfully to the trust that was imposed upon him and he is held in the highest regard by the members of the organization as well as state and national officials. Too much cannot be said in his behalf and in commendation for his work. He is the kind of individual who follows through on anything pertaining to the business of oil and gas and when he is thoroughly convinced that the subject in hand is right and just he leaves nothing undone until the job at hand is completed. He goes after the thing in such a manner that even though there may be set-backs during the drive for fairness he never quits. Whoever the job of president will be handed over to to succeed him for another year will have a real man's job to handle and will follow a man who was capable of handling the job. Eastland is proud of Mr. Hoffman and his achievements and values his judgment very highly in matters of oil and government economics. Eastland county will be well represented at the meeting by members as well as special invitations sent out by the organization to individuals.

Most all business firms in Eastland report a good business Saturday, better than usual, which is an encouraging factor and a stimulator for going after more business as well as taking care of what we have. Beautiful weather greeted us today. Farmers report that the late freeze killed most of the grain. That means replanting but since we are going to have another freeze or two it will no doubt be delayed until the danger line is passed.

Two New Oil Bills Sent to Legislature
By United Press
AUSTIN, Feb. 4.—Two bills to ease the railroad commission enforcement of oil regulations were offered the Texas legislature today.

The bills prohibit district judges issuing temporary restraining orders against the Railroad Commission. The other gives the supreme court final authority to mandamus state courts.

State oil officials and the attorney general's department have objected to district judges granting temporary restraining orders without hearings. Before state officials get a hearing and present the facts, they complain, oil or oil products they sought to check have been moved.

RICHBERG IS ACCUSED OF KILLING NRA

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—President John Lewis of the United Mine Workers, returned to his attack on the recovery co-ordinator, Donald Richberg, today in the fight which is arousing fear of spreading unrest along the industrial front.

Lewis issued a reply to Richberg, who had defended President Roosevelt's extension of the automobile code. The extension is under fire by labor leaders, who claimed they were not consulted concerning the action.

The mine official today charged Richberg with "betraying" the president and the NRA by holding secret conference with automobile industry leaders before renewing the code.

"In tearing the mask of hypocrisy from Richberg," said Lewis, "labor is not attacking the president. It is revealing to the president the unworthy connection of a trusted servant."

Lewis charged Richberg has systematically scuttled the NRA by constantly attacking article 7-A.

Mr. Dabney has given unstintingly of his time and efforts and we desire to express our thanks and appreciation for the help and cooperation extended to us by the district attorney, the sheriff and his deputies, and by the bailiffs, all of whom have worked with us faithfully in the performance of our duties.

ARMAMENT OF GERMANY IS AGREED UPON

By United Press
LONDON, Feb. 4.—Great Britain and France today offered to recognize German rearmament under proposals that would send the air forces of neighboring European nations against any nation that started a war.

Three days of negotiations between the premiers and foreign ministers of the two great world war allies, were brought to an end with a communication which envisaged a complicated series of regional treaties whose authority would be the bombing airplanes of the nations which signed them.

The negotiations, based their agreement on a Germany which recognized as an equal for negotiatory purposes, was returned to the League of Nations and participate in a general armament treaty.

Both the British and French expressed satisfaction with the agreement, however, interpretative statements by spokesmen indicated it might cause difficulty in the next few weeks for both British and French governments.

Though on the surface the agreement was plain, it seemed to be subject to interpretations which might make it unsatisfactory when the time came for backing it up.

Measles Cases Are Reported In State
AUSTIN, Tex., Feb. 4.—Many cases of measles are being reported to the State Department of Health. The disease spreads quickly; it is very dangerous for young children, and because many mothers are inclined to think that measles don't amount to much and that it is better for the children to have it and to have it over. Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer, sends them this message:

"Measles is especially hard on very young children—babies from about six months old to children of school age. It is a very treacherous disease. It often opens the way for pneumonia, and other diseases of that kind, and it frequently leaves some serious after-effect. It is very 'catching' right from the start, so a special effort should be made to keep the younger children away from others who have it. It's a mistake to say, 'Oh let them have it, and have it over.'"

"But even though it may not be as dangerous for the older children as for the younger ones, measles is a serious disease for anybody, at any age—young or old—who has it. Anybody who has it, or who shows symptoms of it, should have the best possible medical care—and the doctor should be sent for promptly.

"If your child shows any of the symptoms of measles—at the start it often seems to be only a cold—put him or her to bed, keep the other children away from the one who is sick, and send for your doctor."

Sentiment No Answer To Prison Problem

The one thing more than any other which stands in the way of our reaching a sane and workable prison program is sentimentality.

Here is one problem which we do not seem able to approach reasonably. No matter when or how it comes up, we look at it through a mist which our sentimental preconceptions have spread before our eyes, and this mist distorts and conceals the things we look at.

Now there are two kinds of sentimentality in connection with the prison problem.

One is the kind made familiar by the man who suffers from excessive softness of heart. To this man the convict is simply a luckless, misunderstood child—a person who has never had a chance, and who will forsake his evil ways overnight and become an upright citizen, a devoted husband and father, and a pillar of the church, if only someone will speak to him kindly.

The mischief that this kind of sentimentality is responsible for in our treatment of criminals is so obvious and so widespread that it needs no comment.

The other kind of sentimentality is the exact reverse of this. It is the hard-boiled type. The man who possesses it thinks that no prison routine can be too harsh for law-breakers.

If someone tries to give prisoners decent food, decent sanitation, and a halfway respectable training for law-abiding life, this man cries that the prisoners are being "coddled."

He is against paroles, against "trusty" systems, against every effort to turn criminals into good citizens.

This attitude is just as truly a sentimental attitude as the other one, though we don't usually look on it in that light.

It is sentimental because the man who has it is ruled by what he feels and not by his brain. And it is just as great a barrier in the path of enlightened penology as is the sentimentality which springs from maudlin sympathy.

Julian Alco, acting president of the California Board of Prison Directors, points out that the hope for an intelligent penal program lies between these two extremes.

Our present system, which herds great masses of men together, keeps them idle, and mixes first offenders with hardened old repeaters, simply creates fresh troubles for us, he asserts.

It is his idea that each state should establish work camps for such prisoners as are not completely beyond reform.

Let transfer from prison to camp be a reward for good behavior, he urges; let the convict in the camp understand that he is being fitted for a return to civil life; put hope in his breast instead of hatred—and we shall approach a sensible solution of our prison problem.

If we can lay aside these two kinds of sentiment and be guided by reason, we may follow some such scheme as this . . . and save ourselves much trouble.

Advertising in newspapers is not an experiment. It has been tried and tested ever since the day of the first newspaper. It has been "weighed in the balance" and not found wanting.

It is quite true that none of our leaders possess a magic wand with which they can satisfy the needs and personal desires of everybody.

It looks as if the small town investors are among the forgotten men. Their submissiveness passes comprehension.

In writing ads, business men should make them so plain that the least educated person can read them.

Method of Killing Crows Is Found

HOLLAND, Tex.—A novel way of killing crows has been tried out by farmers here who report that it has worked successfully.

The farmer takes some shelled corn and threads each kernel with a long horsehair. He scatters this corn about the fields where crows are frequently found and withdraws to await results.

The crows—according to the reports—eat the corn but are unable to swallow the horsehairs. After a time they develop fits of frenzy trying to get the horsehairs out of their mouths, turn over on their backs and die of fatigue.

One farmer said he counted 59 dead birds after he used the method the first time.

SILKEN SPINDLES

By Louis Brockman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Henderson, pretty and 23, in a silk mill. She and her old brother, Phil, support a blind father.

Meyers, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him in a few days.

Later that evening Gale goes skating on the river, goes through the ice and is rescued by Brian Westmore, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car when he returns she is gone. Brian has come home after two years in Paris, convinced he can never be an artist and eager to work in the mill. Vicky Hatcher, daughter of Robert Hatcher, general manager of the mill, schemes to captivate Brian.

Brian sees Gale in the mill and recognizes her. Next evening he asks if he can walk home with her. Gale refuses, but Steven sees her together and later she and him quarrel.

Lately, Gale goes skating again, meets Brian and they skate together. He asks her to meet him again next evening.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI

Brian went on, not waiting for an answer. "We'll skate up the river," he said, "maybe as far as the Fulton Bridge. It's smooth all the way, they say. And solid—"

When there was no answer he turned. "See here," he said, "you're not going to say you won't come? Not doing the disappearing act again when we're just getting acquainted?"

Gale said, "No—"

"You'd better not," Brian said earnestly. "What time shall we skate?"

The campfire was only a bed of smoking embers now. Brian turned his heel on a half-burned bit of drift wood and looked up. Gale moved farther into the shadows.

She said, "I shouldn't come—"

"Why not?"

"Because I shouldn't," she told him.

"Doesn't sound like a good reason to me. Do you mean you don't want to?"

"I didn't say that."

"Well, look here, you and I went to school together, didn't we? We're practically old friends. I'll bet we know a lot of the same people."

"Yes," she agreed, "I suppose so. But we're not in school any longer. I've got to go—"

"Not until you tell me when I'm going to see you again. What am I to do? You won't talk to me at the mill. You won't let me walk home with you. Can I come to your home?"

"No," she said quickly. "Oh, no, you mustn't do that!"

"But I want to see you!" He was near enough to touch her, though he did not. "I like you, Gale Henderson. I like you a lot."

The dark lashes were lowered. Her face, in the darkness, was only an oval of misty-white. Gale did not speak for a moment. Then she said slowly, "I'll—try to come. Can't promise for sure."

"What time?"

"The same time as tonight."

"I'll be waiting," he assured her. Gale stepped out on the ice. She said, "It's only a little way to the mill. I'd rather you didn't come with me."

"You're sure you'll be all right?"

"Of course I will! Good night!"

"Good night—"

She skated rapidly, but it couldn't have been the exercise that made her cheeks glow so warmly and set her pulse to pounding. It could have been the desire that put the star-shine in her gray eyes.

The lamp in the living room was turning as Gale came up the front steps. She let herself in the house and her father looked up from the book he was reading.

"Have a good time?" he asked.

"Yes. The ice was like glass."

"Many skating?"

"Quite a few."

She went into the kitchen to dry her skates and put them away. Then she came back she asked, "Phil hasn't come in yet?"

"No."

Gale returned to the kitchen. A few minutes later she was back. "I think I'll go to bed," she said. "Are there anything you want?"

"No, father shook his head. "Go to bed and get your sleep," he said. "I'll be up a little longer. Maybe you'll come."

Gale turned into the little bedroom. She slipped out of her clothing and pulled a gown over her head. Then she stood before the square, old-fashioned mirror and brushed her hair. Fifty strokes on either side. Presently she put out the light and crept between the covers.

But it was a long time before sleep came. Over and over Gale told herself, "There can't be any harm in this—just going skating. I won't do it again, of course. But just this once! He isn't a bit like people think. He isn't a snob and he doesn't put on airs. He's been all the places I want to go, and he's fun to talk with. It's silly to make so much out of something that's just nothing at all."

They were perfectly good arguments but they couldn't quite silence the clear, small voice that objected, "You shouldn't have done it; you know you shouldn't have promised to meet him tomorrow."

Gale repeated the arguments and added some new ones. And all the time she was seeing Brian Westmore as he stood looking down at her, hearing him say, "I like you, Gale Henderson. I like you a lot—"

She couldn't forget that. It was something to keep tightly in her heart and cherish, something so precious that she was afraid to take it out and examine it closely even here in the darkness. It was something—the preciousness of that moment—Gale wasn't ready to acknowledge even to herself.

She went to sleep at last, dreaming of a pair of dark eyes that were serious one moment and laughing at you the next, hearing a voice that was low-pitched, a trifle husky and exciting—

It was Phil who awakened her. She felt his hand on her arm and saw the triangle of yellow light shining through the doorway.

"You'd better get up," Phil said. "It's Dad. I'm afraid he's worse—"

Gale was out of bed in an instant, rummaging for her slippers. She caught up an old flannel dressing robe and threw it around her.

"What's happened?" she demanded. "Is it—"

"I don't know exactly," Phil told her. "He hasn't ever been like this before. He says he can't get his breath."

Gale wasn't listening. She flew down the hall to the front bedroom, twisting them, unaware of the pain. "If the doctor would only come!" she prayed. "If he'd only come!"

State Planning Power Sectors

By United Press

COLUMBUS, O.—Public power advocates in Nebraska are envisaging creation of huge government financed public power distribution districts to absorb the tremendous output of two generating plants now under development in the state at a cost of $15,000,000.

The Southeast Nebraska power district, financed by a half million dollar PWA loan and grant, already has begun negotiations with the $7,300,000 Columbus-Genoa power canal to purchase a portion of its output.

The district, which will be ready for service by midsummer, proposes to pioneer new fields in rural electrification. Until the Columbus turbines begin to produce energy, the district proposes to buy power from privately owned utility companies.

Movements are under way in the state to organize at least three more such districts at a probable cost of about $10,000,000. These organizations would bring electrical power and light created in the Columbus and Platte Valley plants to areas where electricity never before has been available.

Advocates of the plan propose to divert a large section of the new federal works appropriation asked of congress for this purpose. Such a development, they claim, would be in line with President Roosevelt's power experiments in the Tennessee Valley and would be of inestimable value to this state.

Planet Now Named For a Texas Man

By United Press

AUSTIN.—In the great universe there now is a planet named for a Texan. It is only a minor planet, one of the asteroids. Its name is McDonald.

It went without a name for several years after Dr. Otto Struve of the University of Chicago discovered it in October, 1922.

He has now named it in honor of the late W. J. McDonald of

Prison Cotton Crop Brought Big Sum

By United Press

HUNTSVILLE, Texas.—The Texas prison system's 1934 cotton crop was sold for $380,855, Manager Lee Simmons announced in a report which showed a production of 5,167 bales during the year. Ramsey farm, Fort Bend county, produced 1,177 bales; Eastham farm, 820, and Central farm, 815 bales.

Austria Faces a Peaceful Year

By United Press

VIENNA.—Stormy 1934, with its February revolt and July riots in which Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss perished, will be followed by a year of domestic peace and progress for Austria, according to the forecast of Ignaz Gartenberg, famous Viennese astrologist.

Many attempts to break the pact, concluded between Austria, Italy and Hungary in 1934, will fail, so it is written in Gartenberg's stars, while the death of the head of one Central-European country and the resignation of a prominent statesman of the same nation will open the way to the formation of a Danube confederation, by which Austria and her neighbors will profit economically.

Germany and Japan are seen as potential centers of international conflicts by the astrologist.

Under the spell of a technical invention, which is considered to give her an indisputable military superiority over other nations, Germany may yield to the temptation of appealing again to the luck of war, if Gartenberg has read the stars correctly.

In the Far East, Japan, he claims, will successfully attack Russia and subsequently turn against the United States.

Gartenberg's further forecasts predict a number of aviation catastrophes and three attempts to assassinate prominent state leaders. The stars are somewhat vague as to whether they will be successful or not.

Mother Earth he expects to behave nicely; no important earthquakes or other natural catastrophes are to be expected.

Income Tax In A Nutshell

PUBLICITY OF INCOME RETURNS

Under section 55 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1934 every person required to file an income return for a taxable year or period beginning on or after Jan. 1, 1934, must file with his return, whether taxable or nontaxable, a correct statement on form 1094 of the following items shown upon the return: (1) Name and address, (2) total gross income, (3) total deductions, (4) net income, (5) total credits against net income for purposes of normal tax, and (6) tax payable. In case of failure to file the required statement with the return the collector must, under the statute, prepare it from the return, in which event $5 must be added to and collected as a part of the tax in the same manner and at the same time as the tax.

The statute further requires that the statements made on form 1094, or copies thereof, be made available to public examination and inspection as soon as practicable in the office of the collector with which they are filed. Although the Commissioner is authorized to determine, with the approval of the secretary, the manner in which the statements, or copies thereof, shall be made available to the public the requirements of the statute are otherwise mandatory and the Commissioner has no authority to exempt any person required to file an income return from filing with it a statement on form 1094 nor to waive collection of the additional $5 in case such statement is not so filed. Every person filing an income return should accordingly obtain form 1094 from the collector for his district, if such form is not mailed to him with the return form and fill in all items correctly as shown on the return with which it is to be filed.

The provisions of subdivision (b) of section 55 of the Revenue Act of 1934 are entirely new and it should be understood that those provisions do not authorize inspection of income returns by the public but inspection only of the statements required to be filed on form 1094 with the returns. Inspection of returns is governed by subdivision (a) of section 55 which provides, in effect, that income returns made under the Revenue Act of 1934 shall be open to public inspection only to the extent expressly provided by law or as authorized in regulations approved by the President and this provision is similar to the provisions of preceding Revenue Acts. Under existing law and the regulations approved by the President income returns are not open to inspection by the general public.

Fake First Editions Of Books Are Sold

By United Press

AUSTIN, Tex.—Artists who copied the Mona Lisa and sold copies for originals had nothing on a group of English vendors of rare books.

Such is the finding of Miss Fannie Ratchford of Austin, librarian at the University of Texas, where 47 of the fake first editions are held. Miss Ratchford has prepared a summary of the false first editions which have been sold.

Discovery of the hoax, which shocked American and English book collectors, was first announced by John Carter and Graham Pollard in London last spring. Outstanding writers of the last century were copied and the "first" editions widely distributed.

Writers whose works were faked included Matthew Arnold, "The Brownings, Dickens, Eliot, Kipling, William Morris, Ruskin, Stevenson, Swinburne, Thackeray, Rossetti, Wordsworth and Yeats. Of the books copied, not more than 20 of the same volume were faked so that rarity might be preserved. "Up to $1,500 for a single volume has been paid for the faked books," Miss Ratchford said. "But," she added, "it is a thing that the hoax was for fame rather than for money making purposes."

Distribution of the faked books was started after 1885 and the last reported sale by publishers' agents was in 1910.

Suspicion of the authenticity of certain books in American and English collections had existed for several years, but it was not until last spring when a letter by Robert Browning was discovered that conclusive evidence of the fraud was available.

"One of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's sonnet collections had been listed as '1847: Not for publication,' on the flyleaf of the fraudulent original. Robert Browning, in the newly discovered letter, said he did not know of the sonnets until 1849 and the true publication took place several years later in an anthology of Mrs. Browning's poems.

The fake books have been traced to the London press from whence they were issued and were doubtless printed sometime after 1870. Type faces used were cast after that year, examination disclosed. First record of one of the clever imitations was in 1886.

Texas Citrus Fruit Crop to Be Large

By United Press

WESLACO, Texas.—An increase of 1,144,000 boxes in Texas grapefruit production for the 1934-35 season is forecast by the United States agriculture in its report which was issued here.

The report estimates the valley crop at 2,276,000 boxes compared with 1,130,000 boxes during the 1933-34 season, or an increase of slightly more than 101 per cent.

The Texas orange crop will be increased about 37 per cent, the department figures indicated, with an increase from 390,000 boxes last season to 535,000 boxes this year.

The entire nation is expected to produce 69,556 boxes of both oranges and grapefruit, a decrease of about 8 per cent from the estimated crop on Dec. 1. The decrease is due primarily to the heavy freeze in Florida which destroyed a large part of the crop.

The man who asked $250,000 to put through a $10,000,000 naval contract was no piker. He knew he didn't have to be big to talk big.

PHILADELPHIA. — Passenger trains will whiz through the countryside at 100 miles an hour—and freight trains will travel 60 miles an hour—within the next 10 years, according to a forecast of I. Lamont Hughes, president of the Carnegie Steel company.

Speaking before a club, Hughes asserted the higher speed will be made possible with improvement of rails and in construction of locomotive and passenger coaches.

The greatest change in rails and track beds will be necessary in the mountainous sections, Hughes believes.

"Curves and grades must be reduced and additional bridges and tunnels built," Hughes continued. He asserted that fortunes of railroads and steel companies are closely aligned.

"One of the surest ways of return to prosperity," Hughes declared, "is by return to normal operations of the durable goods industries, of which steel is one of the most important."

"I believe we cannot have prosperity again until these two great industries are operating at a more satisfactory rate."

NEW MASTERPIECE BY CREATORS OF "LITTLE WOMEN"

After more than a year of preparation and filming, "David Copperfield" is finally coming to the screen!

It opens Monday at the Lyric theatre as one of the gold medal pictures of recent years.

No photoplay in recent years has aroused more advance interest than "David Copperfield." Listed among the immortal stories of all time, it frequently was described by Charles Dickens, its author, as "my favorite child." It is a story that has been read by untold millions since it first was published, and its presentation on the screen is awaited eagerly.

No liberties have been taken with the original story, according to advance information. It remains a thrilling, dramatic and humorous tale of adventure and romance, just as Dickens wrote it.

Hearty Laughter Aided Americans

HOLLYWOOD, Fla.—F. Ray Comstock, Broadway producer, today gave "good hearty laughs" a large share of the credit for carrying the United States through the depression.

The theatrical executive places a high valuation on laughs. Some of them, if rollicking enough, "are worth 10 grand any day."

Comstock is wintering at the Hollywood Beach hotel. "Just lying on the beach in the sun and thinking about the stuffy offices along the grand canyon of Broadway brings a smile that's worth $1,000," he said.

When the masseur strikes a tender spot in his ribs while he is sunbathing in a solarium, Comstock says: "There goes another thousand."

The "satisfied chuckle" that follows the landing of a "whopper" in the gulf stream — "well, that must be worth $5,000."

"It was courage, combined with laughs, that carried us through the depression. We're coming out of that period. You can tell it by watching the faces of people everywhere. They're not smiling—they're laughing out loud these days. It's good for them. Just think of all the dough they're spending in laughs."
