OFFICERS ARE STILL LOOKING FOR HAMILTON

DALLAS, Feb. 5.—Officers' fingers were in nervous quest today for another brush with Raymond Hamilton, fugitive desperado, and his brother, Floyd, who escaped from an ambush here last night under furious gunfire. The desire for personal vengeance of a convict who was released from the penitentiary by an appeal bond was being aided by officers in the quest for Hamilton, erstwhile pal of Clyde Barrow and Sam Parker. The convict was known to have had said he would get Hamilton, claiming the latter had been the favor of the former's cell. State highway patrolmen and law officials throughout Texas and Oklahoma were on the hunt for Hamilton and his brother. Whether Raymond or Floyd was injured was not known.

A proud girl is Paulette Goddard, Charlie Chaplin's leading lady, shown here just after she won a medal in the Lake Arrowhead Ski club's two-mile endurance contest. And in spite of the fact that Paulette seems to have taken at least one tumble during the race.

'That reminds me...'

Reports in general are that there is lots of flu and several cases of pneumonia scattered around. While all brings to mind that at the very first sign of aches or pains, whether fever is evident or not, see your doctor. Sometimes folks go ahead and do the things they do every day while in the best of health, don't change their methods, and apparently do nothing that would tend to make the body resistance low, yet get sick, that's something none of us can understand. A little precaution however is always worth while, and the idea of saying "just a little cold" or "just a little ache" sometimes is a big one in disguise and first thing we know, down we go, and the doctor has about 50 times the job on hand to put us back on our feet that he would have had had we gone to see him at the first little sign.

Eastland is blessed with men in the medical profession that any town can feel proud of. Every one of them are good. They are men that keep up with the modern trend of medical science and surgery. For this reason alone it is important to go to your favorite physician regularly at intervals. This also goes for the dentists of Eastland. Teeth sometimes deal a world of misery, and jeopardize the future health of the individual that has any kind of infection, whether minor or otherwise. The health of a community is seriously important, as it takes health to keep up with progress.

Raymond Hamilton, according to officers who stated that they identified him, went through a fusillade of shots and got away. Sometimes luck is with a man no matter what the angle of his existence. Raymond Hamilton can well see however that the officers of the state are after him and will offer no quarter when they clash.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann, is going through the final analysis of his trial for the kidnapping and murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr. At the first there was every evidence testified to that he was guilty and the finger of guilt was pointed at him by every witness. Now along comes a bunch of witnesses who state that he was elsewhere, and even to the extent of that he didn't do it. The jury, listening late tomorrow and will take at least two weeks.

REILLY SAYS HE WILL PROVE FISCH GUILTY

FLEMINGTON, Feb. 5.—Isador Fisch, lured to Bruno Hauptmann, lured in St. Raymond's cemetery on the night of April 2, 1932, and collected $50,000 ransom from Jatsie, Benjamin Heier swort today at Hauptmann's trial. The witness said he was out driving with a girl whose name he refused to give, she since having died. Suddenly, he said, a man stepped into the glare of headlights. "Who was it?" asked Edward J. Reilly, chief defense counsel. "Isador Fisch," was the reply.

The declaration of chief defense counsel Edward J. Reilly that he would prove Isador Fisch, now dead in Germany, was the Lindbergh ransom extortioner, brought Bruno Hauptmann's murder trial to a climax today. The declaration came as an interlude to a group of petty witnesses to clear up some of the discrepancies in previous testimony. It was during the examination of Mrs. Bertha Hoff, a Bay-side housewife, that Reilly made his statement to the court.

Mrs. Hoff had testified that Isador Fisch had brought two suit cases to her home and wanted to leave them there before he departed for Europe. The defense inference was that Fisch was trying to dispose of the ransom money by leaving it with friends. Attorney General David Willentz objected that the testimony was immaterial, but not before Reilly announced his intention to prove "Isador Fisch was the man who jumped over the cemetery wall and received the ransom money."

Reilly withdrew his witness after making no headway on his promise. Previously Mrs. Maria Muller and Mrs. Louisa Wollenberg, matrons in the Hauptmann little group in the Bronx, testified to being at gatherings on Nov. 26, 1933 at a time when the Bronx carpenter is accused of passing a ransom note. Hauptmann, they said, was at home throughout the evening.

We believe other nations should be interested in removing the danger of aggression and decided to call for participation of the nations which signed the Locarno pact."

Roads and Streets Program Urged By Good Roads Group

WASHINGTON.—A $50,700,000 construction program of roads, streets and grade-separations for Texas has been presented to the finance committee of the United States Senate by highway advocates as a sound way to employ part of the huge federal public works fund. Col. Ike Ashburn of Houston, manager of the Texas Good Roads Association, has announced. The Texas program is part of a nation-wide plan worked out by road leaders from many states. They listed for the committee 23,192 specific projects, to cost $1,700,000,000, which the various state highway departments can initiate immediately or within the year. There are 975 projects on the Texas list, Colonel Ashburn said, including 75 underpasses or overpasses, 26 eliminations of dangerous highway intersections, 650 federal aid or secondary roads, and 200 within cities or towns. Colonel Ashburn urged all influential Texans who favor the plan to so advise their senators and representatives in Washington. "This program meets all the President's policy demands for public works," the Texan said. "These are useful and permanent improvements, with more than 80 per cent of the money going to wages. The projects are efficient, planned, they do not compete with private enterprise, and they add to the economic resources and stability of the nation. The project, costing between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 would carry excess gas now being wasted at the rate of 1,000,000,000 cubic feet a day. The project to be administered by the State of Texas, would make possible low gas rates in both St. Louis and Detroit, he said. He revealed he had conferred with a personal representative of Gov. James V. Allred of Texas regarding the project. No formal PWA application, however, was filed.

Texas May Get Big Pipe Line Grants

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes said today he expected Texas to file an application for a federal loan and grant to finance a pipe line to carry natural gas from the Texas Panhandle to St. Louis and Detroit. The project, costing between $30,000,000 and $50,000,000 would carry excess gas now being wasted at the rate of 1,000,000,000 cubic feet a day. The project to be administered by the State of Texas, would make possible low gas rates in both St. Louis and Detroit, he said. He revealed he had conferred with a personal representative of Gov. Twenty-one directors appointed the state board of water engineers with the consent of the governor, will have overlapping terms. The bill was finally passed 28 to 1. Its acceptance in the house will perfect Texas' program for Brazos river development which now awaits federal action on a proposed $50,000,000 PWA loan. Senator Weaver Moore of Houston today announced he will not press his bill to amend the Colorado river act to forbid paying commissions or fees for obtaining a $4,500,000 PWA loan for Buchanan Dam.

Parents of Famed Quintuplets Visit City of Chicago

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—A bewildered and excited couple were swept into a dizzy whirl of crowds, questions and cameras today as Chicago turned festive for Mr. and Mrs. Olivia Dionne, parents of the quintuplets. The 27-year-old mother elbowed her way through passing crowds and turned wearily to her husband. "Quelle fiele," she murmured in French. Getting her first glimpse of an American metropolis, she was complaining of so many people. Olivia, looking like an American college boy in his camel hair coat, seemed unconscious of the crowd but was amazed by the buildings.

We Should Preserve Natural Resources

In considering the huge expenditures proposed by the Roosevelt administration, it is necessary to distinguish between those which are aimed directly at the current depression and those which would be advisable even if the depression should end tomorrow morning.

The vast public works and work-relief schemes, of course, fall in the first class. They are emergency measures, pure and simple.

However useful some of their tangible fruits may be, they are designed chiefly to stimulate lagging industry and to give jobs to men who won't get jobs other wise.

But the long-range program for conservation and development of our national resources is something else again. For the most part it has no relation to the depression. The president envisages it as a continuing thing which should be carried on over a 20-year period, with ultimate expenditures at the rate of $500,000,000 a year.

A program of this kind requires us to visualize the whole country as a unified social organism—a society which must pay as a whole for loss or waste suffered in any of its parts, and which eventually will benefit as a whole through prevention of any such loss or waste.

Of the cutting of our last stands of virgin timber; of the increasing floods; of the washing away of millions of acres of our top soils; of the lowering of our watering tables; of the dangers of one-crop farming; of the depletion of our minerals—in short, the evils that we have brought upon ourselves today and the even greater evils that will attend our children unless we act.

All this ought to be a reminder that we owe a very large part of our commercial and industrial greatness to the fact that we built up our society in the midst of natural resources of unparalleled richness.

We had everything a land could desire—tremendous forests, enormous deposits of mineral wealth, millions of acres of fertile soil. We have built upon that foundation.

It ought to be obvious that if we dissipate those resources—if we heedlessly destroy the last of our forests, delve for minerals wastefully, and permit our farm lands to deteriorate—we are simply knocking out the foundation on which the whole structure rests.

After we have done whatever is possible to beat the depression, we shall still be under the necessity of preserving this foundation. If we fail, we shall eventually enter a depression from which there can be no full recovery.

Everything Will Soon Be Eimplified

'Dusting the Covers of Texas History' for The Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

A few soldiers were outside Mission San Luis gathering firewood just as the sun rose on the morning of March 16, 1758. Suddenly they were knocked almost senseless by heavy clubs. Whirling around, they found they were face to face with mobs of wild-eyed Indians. Father Giraldo Terreros put an abrupt end to the early morning devotion which Father Santiesteban was leading as he and his companions heard the terrified cries of "Indian! Indian!"

All was silent as Father Terreros and the corporal of the guard slowly removed the huge cross-bars from the protecting gate. In one minute a mad multitude of 2,000 savages had poured inside the church walls.

Only a week or so before the attack, Apaches had come racing through the presidio on their horses, warning the Spaniards that the enemy were near. Alarmed, Captain Parrilla had hastened to the mission to persuade Father Terreros and the other fathers to come inside the protection of presidio walls. The fathers declared they were unafraid, and if they were to meet death, they wanted to be in their church. It was necessary that all men available be used to guard the presidio, and none could be spared to join the priests and servants in the mission. On March 15, Captain Parrilla went again to the mission. Pleading with kindness, then with roughness, Parrilla did his utmost to get the priests to leave. They were firm in their refusal, and he rode back to the presidio with misgivings in his heart.

When the Indians who attacked San Luis saw that the Spaniards were prepared for them, they shrewdly pretended friendship. Asencio Cadena, Corporal of the guard, ventured into the patio, and peeped through the cracks in the wall. He recognized the Texas tribe members, and a few others who were friends of the Spanish, and turning to Father Terreros assured him that the Indians could mean no harm. Clapping his cross, his black robe sycoping the patio ground gracefully, Father Terreros walked steadily out to join the corporal.

"On all sides, as far as the eye could reach, there was a moving, swaying multitude of savages, arrayed in strange garbs and mounted on gaudily equipped horses." Some of them wore on their heads skins of animals, and let the tails fly in the wind. All carried guns, sabers, and keen-edged spears.

Income Tax In A Nutshell

Hand and Wife May File Joint or Separate Returns

Husband and wife living together may each make a separate return of the income of each, or income may be included in a joint return. If a joint return is filed, such return is treated as that of a taxable unit.

Where separate returns are filed by husband and wife, the joint personal exemption of $2,500 may be taken by either or divided between them in any proportion as agreed upon. In certain cases it would be to the advantage of the couple if they should file separate returns and one spouse claim the joint personal exemption. In the following examples, which illustrate this point, the husband has net income of $4,700, all of which represents earned net income, and the wife has a separate net income of $2,500, not earned net income.

Table with 2 columns: Description and Amount. Rows include 'Balance (surplus-net income)', 'No surtax applicable since amount is less than $1,000', 'Total tax of husband and wife', etc.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVII

Dr. Carr folded the stethoscope and slipped it into his pocket. He was a little man with a very round face and bushy gray eyebrows. He wore spectacles set down on his nose, so that he had to per downward to see through them.

"Well," he said, sitting down in a chair beside the bed, "what have you been doing lately?" He leaned forward, putting his hand on Tom Henderson's wrist.

"I've been feeling pretty good," the man in bed told him. The heavy breathing had stopped but Tom Henderson's voice sounded weak and spent. "I've felt better lately than I have for a long time—until this spell came on tonight."

Gale was standing at the other side of the bed. She said, "Yes, Doctor, he told us that yesterday. He's been getting out for a little walk every day—"

"How far'd you go?" Doctor Carr asked. "Just to the corner." "Too far," the doctor nodded. "Too far," he said. "Just what I thought. You've been over-doing it, Henderson. That's what always happens. As soon as a man begins to feel better he thinks he can get out and do as much as he ever did. Well—he can't. Body's like any other machine; when it's used up it's got to have rest. Now for the next two or three days I want you to stay in bed. Right here in bed, understand?"

He looked up at Gale then. "I'll write a prescription," he went on. "You can have it filled tomorrow. Keep on with the other medicine, just as I told you. And see that your father stays off his feet."

"Yes, Doctor." Doctor Carr rose. "I think you'll sleep now," he said to the man. "Best thing for you, too. And, remember, tomorrow you're to stay in bed all day. I'll drop around again tomorrow or the next day and see how you're feeling. Be on my way now. Good night—"

Gale followed the doctor into the outer room. Her eyes held the question she dreaded putting into words. "Doctor—?" "There's nothing to worry about," he reassured her, "so long as your father does as I've told him. Those walks were too much for him. See that he takes his medicine and stays off his feet. That's the only cure there is—just rest. All anyone can do for him. See that he gets it."

He had taken a pen out and was writing on a sheet of paper. "Here is the prescription," he said. He went on with instructions about the medicine and a moment later was at the door.

"I'll drop around in a day or two," he repeated. "Good night—guess it's nearer morning, though."

Gale said, "Good night, Doctor," and stood for a moment looking out at the darkness. In an hour or so the sky would be growing light again. She thought of the old phrase, "Always darkest before dawn," and thought that it was certainly true of the night, at least. Was it true of other things?

She closed the door then and locked it and turned to see her brother waiting in the hallway. "How is he now?" Phil asked. "Better, I guess. The doctor gave him something to make him sleep. Doctor Carr says there's no danger of another attack so long as he keeps quiet. He'll have to stay in bed for a few days."

"Can he stay here alone?" "I thought maybe Mrs. O'Connor would be willing to come in and bring him some lunch at noon and perhaps stop in once or twice during the day to see if there's anything he wants. If she can't we'll have to get someone else. You'd better go to bed, Phil, and get some sleep if you can—"

"Aren't you going?" "I'll wait up for a little while. I'm not sleepy."

She went to the door of her father's bedroom and looked inside. He was lying with his eyes closed. Gale entered quietly and turned out the light. Her father moved on his pillow, murmuring something that was inaudible. Gale said, "Good night," and slipped from the room.

She went back to the living room and sat down in the big chair by the window. It was true that she did not feel sleepy now—merely tired—but she wanted to be near in case her father should call. She couldn't feel sure that he was really all right again. Those terrible moments, waiting until the doctor came, still haunted her.

Gale leaned back in her chair and thought that the night seemed endless. Could it possibly have been only the evening before that she had been down on the river, skating with Brian Westmore?

She put the thought from her guilty. She didn't want to think of that now. The clock on the table ticked monotonously. Gale could not see it from where she sat but she knew it must be 4 o'clock, or later. She heard a train whistle and then there was silence again except for the clock's ticking. Gale closed her eyes.

The bright sunlight, streaming through the window, awakened her. For a moment she did not know where she was. Then she jumped to her feet and hurried to her father's room. He was sleeping quietly. Gale closed the door and went to wake her brother. "Phil!" she said. "Get up. It's late—almost 7 o'clock!"

"Phil!" she said. "Get up. It's late—almost 7 o'clock!" "And what?" he asked, with his hair still damp from the wet comb he had used on it, Gale was pouring coffee. There was cereal on the table, a plate of toast and another containing a fried egg. "Sit down and eat," she told him. "I'm going to run over to see Mrs. O'Connor."

"Aren't you going to have breakfast?" "I've had mine. Just leave everything on the table where it is. I'll have to do the dishes tonight."

She was out of the room and back again an instant later, pulling on her coat. "Father's sleep," she said. "I guess it will be all right to leave him if Mrs. O'Connor can come over—"

Mrs. O'Connor could. She listened sympathetically to Gale's account of what had happened the night before, and said she'd be glad to take Tom Henderson his lunch. The poor man—him such a hard worker and always glad to do a good turn for a neighbor. Sure, she'd see he had something to eat.

Vegetable soup, they were going to have that day and there'd be plenty to spare. Yes, and she'd run in the middle of the morning and later in the afternoon to see if there was anything the man wanted. Yes, indeed!

"Tim's brother, you know," Mrs. O'Connor confided, "he had them spells when he couldn't get his breath. Oh, it was terrible! I've seen him that bad, I'm telling you—"

The shrill blast of a whistle interrupted. "Oh!" exclaimed Gale, panic-stricken. "I'll be late at the mill! Here, Mrs. O'Connor, here's the key—"

She turned and fled down the walk. Her breath was still coming in deep gasps as she entered the big room and hurried to her place. She bent her head, fingers flying. Somehow she knew, though she did not look up, that Fisher, the foreman, was crossing the room, coming toward her. She knew what he would say. She had heard him say it to others.

"You there?" The big man was scowling down at her. "Yes, Mr. Fisher." The heavily sarcastic voice rose loudly. "So you decided to come to work today, did you? Well, that's certainly very nice! Made up your mind at the last minute, I suppose—after you'd heard the whistle. Do you know what time the switches are turned on here?"

"Yes, Mr. Fisher." "Oh, you do! Well has anyone ever called your attention to the fact that you're supposed to be here, in this room, when the switches are turned on?"

"Yes." "Then what's the idea of coming in five minutes late? Do you think you can get away with that? Do you think we can run this mill with everyone coming to work when they please?"

Girls all around heard what he was saying. It was impossible for them not to hear. Gale's cheeks were burning but her head was erect.

Without waiting for an answer Fisher went on. "Maybe you think there ought to be some changes around here—so you can drop in to work whenever you feel like it. Well, let me tell you, there'll be changes all right if this happens again. Five minutes late, you were. FIVE MINUTES LATE! If it happens again, Miss High-and-mighty, there'll be a new girl standing right where you are. Do you understand that? You'll be though!"

Gale said, "Yes, Mr. Fisher." She could scarcely hear her own voice but she got the words out. He started away and then turned ed back. "If it happens once more—" he said menacingly. Gale did not answer. She bent her head and snapped a bobbin off. (To Be Continued)

Range of Jobs To Cover Every Type of Worker

By RICHARD L. HARKNESS United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON.—The federal government, planning to spend almost $5,000,000,000 to end unemployment and want, must supply jobs for every type of worker—from bricklayer to charwoman, from steel padder to church sexton.

At least 2,250,000 of the 3,500,000 persons on city relief rolls at the present time are experienced craftsmen ready to earn wages from the $4,000,000,000 public works fund recommended to Congress by President Roosevelt.

The group consists of 1,574,000 manufacturing and mechanical industry workers, 465,000 building tradesmen and 263,000 iron and steel laborers who were self-supporting until the depression forced them on relief between 1929 and 1934.

Other groups unemployed in major cities and towns include: 736,000 domestic and personal service workers—barbers, boot-blacks, nurses, charwomen, building attendants, and sextons; 446,000 trade industrial workers; 408,000 persons formerly on transportation and communication pay-rolls.

Banking houses and brokerage offices contributed two per cent to urban unemployed, insurance and real estate agents four per cent, street railroads, rubber factories, silk mills, printing and publishing houses eight per cent.

The figures, compiled by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration in its computation of "employables" and "unemployables," showed that, in 1930, six per cent of all building tradesmen were receiving relief. The figure now is 13 per cent.

The unemployment toll increased from 12 to 20 per cent among trade workers; manufacturing and mechanical industries, including building, accounted for 38 per cent of total urban workers on relief in 1930, and now has increased to 43 per cent.

The statistics were gathered from 79 cities and covered relief activities to May, 1934. Officials said, however, the unemployment situation remains unchanged since that time.

Nation-Wide Line Survey Nears End

By United Press

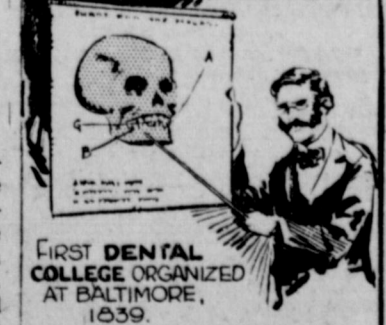

KERRVILLE, Tex.—A line being surveyed entirely across the United States from north to south is nearing completion, the work having progressed as far south as Kerrville.

About 100 men and 50 trucks, working under the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, have been stationed here. The project began in September at Devil's Lake, N. D., on the Canadian boundary, and is to be carried to the Mexican border below Mission, Texas.

The workers move in three groups. The first erects temporary towers, the second makes observations and angle measurements, and the third dismantles the towers.

FIRST DENTAL COLLEGE ORGANIZED AT BALTIMORE, 1839.

CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY FIRST OPENED IN 1800.

SHAKERS WERE FIRST CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS—DURING REVOLUTIONARY WAR.

THE first dental college was the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery. The Library of Congress was established by an act appropriating $5000 for the purchase of "books for the use of both Houses of Congress." Ann Lee led the Shakers in refusing to aid the colonies in the war for independence. They were accused of treason and imprisoned until released during the winter of 1780-81.

Rootless Teeth Are Rarely Found

By United Press

PITTSBURGH.—Dental literature tells of only two cases where persons have been known to possess rootless teeth. The first came to light in Germany in 1920 when a patient's teeth were falling out.

The second case was discovered here quite accidentally when an 18-year-old girl appeared at the University of Pittsburgh's free clinic to have an aching tooth examined. X-ray picture was taken, and it was found that a cyst was causing the pain, but no roots were shown in the photo. Extraction of the molar confirmed the instructor's belief. There were no roots. Further examination disclosed that none of the girl's teeth had roots.

Members of the young woman's family were called to the clinic. Then it was discovered that the girl's father and 14-year-old brother also possessed teeth which were rootless. The mother's teeth and two other children's, however, were normal.

The patient's teeth were perfect in appearance and color, according to Dr. J. C. Eselman, demonstrator in radiology, but had no root canals or pulp chambers. A bony attachment and the gum tissue held the teeth in position, he said.

The lesson on "Loyalty," was a splendid character study by Judge W. P. Leslie. The high light brought that when Peter and the disciples of Christ went fishing, it was to change their trend of thought, that there was no better way to come from under a cloud, than to keep busy. That Christ asked "Simon lovest thou Me?" and Peter said "Yea Lord, thou knowest that I love Thee."

"WE LIVE AGAIN" IS TOLSTOY NOVEL

A world that is now only a memory comes to life again as Anna Sten and Fredric March begin a two day engagement at the Lyric Theatre in Samuel Goldwyn's presentation of "We Live Again," retitled from the "Resurrection" of Leo Tolstoy.

An idyllic courtship between an aristocratic young cadet and an apple-cheeked peasant girl becomes a grim struggle through misery and despair toward happiness and peace in the screen play by Presto Sturges, Maxwell Anderson and Leonard Praskins.

This best loved of all Russian stories has the countryside in the days of the Czars as its early setting. Colorful religious festivals, spy songs, breath-taking cavalry maneuvers, Moscow, heavy food and wine and debauched gaiety; sombre gray prisons, the taut trial that gambles with human lives, the exile with which criminals were punished in that distant day, are details in the patch-quilt panorama that Director Rouben Mamoulian has taken out of Tolstoy's great humanitarian novel as a setting for the screen version, released through United Artists.

Miss Sten and Mr. March have as fellow protagonists in the new Rouben Mamoulian picture, lovely young Jane Baxter, newly arrived from England, C. Aubrey Smith, Jessie Ralph, Sam Jaffe, Mary Forbes and a huge cast of Russians recruited from the Slavic colonies along the Pacific coast.

It's a good thing we remember the crippled children on President Roosevelt's birthday, since there's no telling what we'll do when the president is retired.

Club Secretary Is Good Bill Collector

WASHINGTON. — William H. Sanford, secretary of the Engineers Slub of Philadelphia, has discovered the secret of bill collecting.

Here is his explanation of how he makes one-third of the members of the Philadelphia Club pay up before the fourth of every month.

"I send their bills so they'll receive them on the last day of each month, instead of the first. When a single bill comes in, on the morning of the last day, the natural reaction is to pay it and get it out of the way, prior to receiving a number of bills which are always expected on the morning of the first day of the month."

Parents Battling To Secure a Son Doomed to Death

By United Press

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Mr. and Mrs. William Pirk of Buffalo, have started a court fight for custody of their son, Norman, who is doomed to a slow death from an incurable disease.

The boy is afflicted with a disease known as progressive muscular distrophy. Norman never has attended school and cannot read or write. He gives the impression of being a bright young baby instead of a boy almost in his teens. The disease renders muscles in the body useless, starting with the legs and gradually working upwards until the heart is affected and stops beating.

Upon the recommendation of the Children's Aid Society, a court order was issued committing the boy to a state institution. Now, however, Mr. and Mrs. Pirk insist that if the youth is doomed to die they want him to be with them for the remaining years of his life. They have retained counsel to fight the case in court. A hearing has been set before Supreme Court Justice Clinton T. Horton.

The Children's Aid Society claims that the youth would receive care and comfort unavailable in his parents' home. The Pirks, however, insist that the boy is as happy at home as he can be with his physical ailment and should not be deprived of his mother's love and attention during the remaining years of his life.

"Unless Norman is a menace to society, it seems to me the parents should have the deciding vote, and they want to keep their child with them until he dies," the Pirks attorney said. Although not affluent, the boy a comfortable existence, the attorney announced.
