

One is Drowned as Flood Sweeps San Antonio

SIX INCHES OF RAIN FALLS IN A FEW HOURS
 Property Damage Estimated At $1,000,000 In The Storm Area.
 SAN ANTONIO, May 10.—San Antonio counted one person dead, hundreds of families homeless and property damage expected to total $1,000,000 today after a 6.11-inch rain caused the San Antonio river to flood the city last night.
 The rainfall began at 8:15 p. m. and lasted six hours. It left the heaviest precipitation of any rain since 1921.
 Will Kearns, 30, prominent San Antonio citizen, was drowned.
 As water from the cloudburst rushed into the San Antonio river, which winds through the heart of the city, the stream swept out of its banks and routed hundreds of families from houses in low-lying districts.
 City officials said damage to streets alone would amount to more than $100,000. Stocks of goods in basements and on first floors of many business houses also were damaged by water. Foundations of building were weakened and plaster ruined. The full extent of the damage was not expected to be determined until the water receded.
 During the storm all firemen and policemen were called to duty as more than 500 distress calls were received from stranded motorists and frightened citizens, marooned by the water.
 Three bridges were swept away. Fruits and vegetable crops were damaged, the rain being accompanied by hail.

DEATH GIVEN FATHER FOR CHILD'S DEATH
 HOUSTON, May 10.—Elijah Stuart, 31-year-old former Oklahoma farmer, today was sentenced to die in the electric chair June 12 for the insurance murder of his blond, curly-haired twin daughter, Dorothy, 4.
 Stuart was calm as he asked District Judge Langston King, who pronounced sentence, to help him in his last attempt to obtain clemency from Gov. James Allred.
 Stuart admitted the murder in a statement. He told how he held the child under water until she ceased to struggle, in a stagnant pool of Cypress creek.

 Pupils were graded on each selection they played, it was explained by Mrs. Taylor.
 Miss Coffman was one of two of the 85 entered Thursday to receive a national honor, Mrs. Taylor said.

Next Week to Be "Hearing Week" at The State Capitol
 Next week will be "hearing week" at the state capitol. Highway commissioners will hold a two-day session May 13 and 14 to hear delegations from many counties seeking road work.
 On May 16 the state railroad commission will conduct its monthly oil prorating hearing. Testimony presented will be used by the commission in determining allowable oil production during June.
 Issuance of the production orders has become a major job. Lists are made up and printed giving the production in barrels per day for each of the 16,000 wells in East Texas, and for every field.
 Preparing the East Texas list is the biggest job because it is figured on a percentage of hourly potential production. The list for some other districts, however, is large. North Texas has more than 18,000 wells on which the commission must issue a production list every month.

SENATE MAY VOTE A NINE MONTH NRA
 WASHINGTON, May 10.—Democratic senators today decided to go ahead with a nine month extension of NRA despite the president's desire for a two year continuation.
 Majority Leader Joseph Robinson said the democrats in a conference had agreed that with only five weeks to go before the present act expired, it would be impractical to start an overhauling of NRA.
 Robinson said he believed the president would accept the shorter extension in view of the shortness of time.
 The conference also determined it would be impossible for the senate to conclude its work before July 1 to 15.

STOLEN STREET CAR IS PUZZLE TO POLICEMEN
 FORT WORTH, May 10.—It was 2 a. m. The police radio speaker blared, "Calling all cars. Stolen street car running wild. Be on lookout for stolen street car. That is all."
 Radio squad cars jumped to the chase. But the squads in the neighborhood could not find the car.
 Then Patrolmen Crane and McQueen, cruising over three miles from the scene of the theft, heard the trolley wires sing and the runaway car came screeching over a hill. They leaped to the middle of the track, waving a shotgun. The car ground to a halt.
 The slightly inebriated motor-man explained:
 "I work for the tram company. I'm a motor-man. I went to a party and I guess I had a few too many. I just borrowed the car to get home in."
 He was in jail today charged with malicious mischief and theft of a street car.

"CRACKED ICE"
By SEBE

One more week has made the rounds and it seems as if a certain group enjoyed a dancing party at the high school roof garden to the greatest extent. The boys: Billie Shoopman, W. E. Kellert, and Billy Martel Jones. The girls: Joy Coplen, Faye Tucker and Mildred Hughes. Mary Lou Ripley's car was there, but she wasn't dancing. Titch! Titch! Craft and Sanderson are no more. Could it be possible that a certain girl in Ranger wrote Hill and asked him for a date. That's Hill's story. Some people think Gray is crazy but on the whole I consider him a pretty smart man. Be it ever so humble there's no place like the driveway at the side of the Uttz residence. There comes the story about Jack Brown saying that Ditty Dobbis is no longer his love. He is interested in Cisco women. Well, Jack, there's Colium. To be Hart's motto? "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of Cisco women." List of the most prominent love affairs that are open to the public. These are submitted by Marshall Coleman so see him not me, if you don't agree: 1. Tanner vs. Ferguson. 2. Mike Williams vs. Hunter. 3. Tully vs. Garrett (we wonder.) 4. Brogden vs. Ewing. Flash—The Senior play, "It Happened In Hollywood," is to be presented Friday, May 10, and it promises to be quite an exciting production if John Hart doesn't learn his lines. Just think, what if they really did? There has been talk of the Seniors doing something to the Junior president. Lane, thy name is mud, or I believe they said they were gonna use dough. Juniors, there's a chance to show where your class spirit is. Do they or don't they? The friendly little game of "washers" has hit the dear institution at full blast, and everyone from Mr. Miller to Miss Reik is participating in the brutal game. Roger Arnold is the egg that seems to be falling for Olivia White at the present. There is one boy in school who can fix you up if you need a date. He has had Craft dated up to the Freshman dance, but when Craft really came out and asked "Cherry" the bottom fell through and another good plan went to the dogs. Bob White is the kind of guy that will go to sleep in math class and fall out of his chair and tell you he fainted. Frank Hatten is one guy in that math class who doesn't have time to go to sleep. He carries on some mighty heavy flirtation with Frances Metz. LOST—My technique on making love. Lost last Saturday night somewhere between the Uttz residence and South Seaman street. Finder will be given a liberal reward.—Rex Gray. FOR SALE—One good tennis racquet, practically new. Only three years old and is warped on both sides and has four broken strings, but in almost perfect condition. Cost when new, $1.98. Will sell for $1.50 cash or $1.75 on installment plan. W. P. Palm, (light commander of first, second and third floors at Eastland High school. Wanted—A good umpire. First period gym class. Wanted—A steady job washing model A Fords. Coupes are specialty. Boyd Tanner. You may not believe it, but Craft has been dating out with Joy Coplen, and when I say dating out I don't mean just one date. Carolyn is getting it but Doc's had it a long time. Get it? It looks as if Coleman might be returning to his old stomping grounds. We have at last decided that Frances Lane's theme song is a combination of two songs instead of just one. May we submit, Lone Lane until Johnny Comes Marching Home. Harris was tickled to death. She got to drive an Austin. If it tickles her that much when she drives an Austin I'd hate to be around after she got through driving a battleship around. Bill Harris has already started the midsummer styles. He arranged two typewriter covers over his knees, in order to be presentable to the public. "Peaches" Davis says her theme song is "Nobody's Sweetheart Now," and it had been ever since Christmas. So, until "Peaches" Davis gets a sweetheart so long. P. S.—Don't forget to support the Seniors in their play tonight. It's gonna be good.

New Trench Silo Protects the Fa

SHIRO, Tex.—J. E. N. Grimes county farmer of community, has designed a silo to prevent losses on underground. His method of construction provides a special drainage system to the silo and he predicts that farmers will save thousands of dollars if they copy it. Neason solved the problem by sealing the silo with 14-foot poles in four consecutive rows, forming three bins by tacking, netting along each row of poles. He covered the insilage with inches of soil and constructed dirt bank on the rim of the present surface water from coming into it. Wall spoilage reduced by this method. On feeding, he exposed on section of the silo at a time, reducing spoilage from exposure. Neason said the three-bin silo equal to the ordinary trench silo 120 feet long, 10 feet wide, seven feet deep. Capacity 121 tons. Total expense of the silo approximately $40.

Still Is Operated By Exact Time
By United Press
QUANAH, Tex.—Somewhere in the sand hills of cedar breaks of Hardeman county is a whiskey still "operated by the clock." The proprietor of the still sought out H. B. Warde, local jeweler, and asked him for a rush repair job on his pocket timepiece. Warde was busy but the stranger was in a hurry. To prove it, the latter admitted that he had a "batch on" and said: "I'm timing it and I gotta get back right away." A new spring was inserted and the ticking satisfied the customer.

Dime Chain Is Replica of a Greater Folly

These chain letters whereby honest souls make a few dimes for themselves at the price of overloading the postal system are a good deal like the kind of prosperity we had before 1929, when you stop to think about it.

In each case the idea is a good one as long as you can keep the ball rolling. Collapse comes only when the supply of suckers runs out.

Look at the dime thing, for instance. You get a letter with five names on it. You add your name to the bottom, scratch off the top name, and mail copies to five friends; and then you send a dime to the man whose name you scratch off. If the chain goes on unbroken, in the course of time several thousand people are sending you dimes; they, in turn, are recompensed by several times that many thousand other people, who in turn get dimes from an even larger number of perfect strangers, and so on.

Theoretically, there is no exact limit to the distance the thing could be carried. All that is necessary is that on any given date the number of new suckers being tapped is greater than the number of dimes in the mail. As long as it keeps on going upward, nobody can lose.

Perhaps it is unkind to see in all this a parallel to the frenzied prosperity of the boom years. But you can see it if you look for it, just the same.

In the booming 'twenties, our industrial production was keyed to a steadily rising mass of debts. Part of this came in installment-plan buying at home; the greater part came from foreign trade.

Each year we sold a greater quantity of goods abroad. Since we bought abroad much less than we sold, the customers overseas couldn't pay us. So—we lent them the money, flooding the domestic market with all manner of foreign bond issues.

The amount of sales and loans kept on going up, year after year. As long as the loans went up just a shade faster than the sales, everything was lovely.

But the whole business—like the dime letter chain—was due to crash the moment this progression was checked. The check finally came, the crash followed—and ever since we have been rubbing our heads and wondering what happened to us.

So we get back, again, to this dime letter business. It's a dizzy way to make money, to be sure; but there is a precedent for it. Individuals are simply trying, in a small way, what the nation as a whole tried in a big way a few years ago. The result, in each case, is a foregone conclusion.

Allred Is Pleased With Legislature

AUSTIN, May 10.—Governor James Allred does not share the belief that the 44th legislature was a do-nothing body. The legislature did not do all he wanted, but he said today it had done "much."

As outstanding accomplishments he listed an effective blue sky law to curb stock swindling; reorganization for war on crime; submission of repeal; appropriation for care of a dozen of crippled children.

Howard Pierson Is Indicted In Double Murder

AUSTIN, May 10.—Howard Pierson, 20, was indicted by the Travis county grand jury today charged with murdering his mother and father, the latter associate justice of the state supreme court, April 24, on a lonely road near Austin.

Pierson had first brought news of the shooting to Austin at dusk April 24.

He, his father and mother had been held up 20 miles from Austin, he said. All were shot.

Three Executed For Bank Robbery

JOLIET, Ill., May 10.—Three convicted bank bandits and killers died in the electric chair at the old state prison today, protesting their innocence and mumbling prayers. They were Fred Gerner, 27, Rockford, Ill.; Arthur Thielon, 42, his brother-in-law, from Rockford, and John Hauff, Chicago. They were convicted of killing the cashier of a state bank in a holdup Jan. 16.

Recovery Board Forms New NRA

WASHINGTON, May 10.—The recovery board today by its chairman, Donald Richberg, was busy behind the scenes on a "new NRA" to follow passage of legislation by congress and a ruling by the supreme court.

In the new code making period to follow expirations June 16 of the recovery act and the 60-odd codes, several questions of policy and procedure are being worked out to fit the codes more closely to American business.

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McElliot © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Katharine Strykurst, beautiful, 20, is discontented and restless because her wealthy father, Victor Strykurst, and her aristocratic stepmother, Bertine, refuse to let Katharine undertake any sort of work.

Katharine rides daily with Michael Heathcote, young westerner who runs a riding club. She assures herself she is not interested in Michael, but feels a pang of jealousy when Sally Moon, local coquette, enrolls at the club for less than Michael's price.

During a storm Michael and Katharine take shelter in a way-side cabin. Katharine provokes Michael into seizing her roughly. He apologizes later.

Now Go On With the Story CHAPTER II

Zoe Parker sat at the breakfast table in the new pseudo-Spanish house her parents had built on the very tip-end of Inlicoock Point. A wall built of blue stucco and studded at intervals with ornamental colored tiles bounded the grounds. There was a yacht landing and a pier, and several small boats floated at anchor at the foot of the steps. Zoe, wearing shorts and a midly-like white blouse which made her look like every small girl, drank iced orange juice from a glass decorated with lilies of the valley. The glass stood in the center of a bowl of the same delicate make. There were sheer linen mats, the texture of cobwebs, on the old oaken table. The maid who served Zoe was in pale yellow, with a musical comedy apron. Everything Mrs. Parker did or touched had this faintly unreal, theatrical air. Henry Parker had made his money in automobile tires and Lisa Parker knew how to spend it.

The one concern of this pair at the moment was their daughter. Zoe had been born to them late in life—Lisa had been 38 when Zoe's first faint scream was heard above the other hospital noises—and now Zoe, at 20, was everything lovely, but she was a silly little thing. Even Lisa acknowledged it. Lisa, who had cooked and scrubbed and washed dishes for 10 years in a little flat in Detroit before Henry came into the money, had a fund of "good, hard common sense." She said so herself. Zoe was frivolous as the wind, or as a butterfly set free over a bed of ageratum. And Zoe's mania at the moment was Gibbs Larkin, who was 35 and who had been correspondent in at least two divorce cases.

Lisa Parker told herself comfortably, coming into the breakfast room which fairly glittered with sunshine, that Zoe had probably "got all over that." Lisa wasn't absolutely sure, but she hoped for the best. Hadn't that nice young man on the boat—the Princeton boy—made a terrific fuss about Zoe? Never called her anything but "Beautiful" all the live-long day. And had sent flowers twice since they'd been back. Lisa hadn't asked about Gibbs—but she hadn't needed to. People had been careful to tell her that Gibbs was in Maine for the month of July, at least. So that was all right. How could Zoe care anything about him? Why, he was so dissipated looking—he fat, too, soon if he wasn't careful! But there was something—she didn't know—about a man in his middle thirties that seemed to attract young girls. They got tired of the boys they knew. All the boys had "lines." Maybe that was it. Well, Gibbs had a "line," too, although Zoe wouldn't admit it. Zoe insisted he'd been the victim of circumstance. Well, probably they were all through with that particular phase. By the time Gibbs came back to Inlicoock—if he did come back—Zoe would practically have forgotten him. Maybe she'd be engaged . . .

Thus Lisa Parker's thoughts on this fine morning. Her heart turned over once—twice. It thudded, and then righted itself again. "Mr. Gibbs Larkin is at the Pequot House at White Bay and will shortly depart with friends on a yachting party for Nova Scotia." So that was it. Would a note to the Pequot House—air mail—reach him in time? Gibbs—Gibbs, darling, didn't anyone tell you I was back? Didn't you get my note? "Will you have more coffee, Miss Zoe?" asked the black-haired maid, Gerda, at her elbow.

"No, I think not, Gerda, thank you." What did Gerda think about when she wasn't shining up the silver and making the beds? She had a young man who worked on boats over at the club, a stolid young German with a forelock which he touched in old-country fashion. Did Gerda's heart go pitty-pat whenever this young man passed by? Zoe wanted to know.

"Tell cook to order some more of that gluten bread," Mrs. Parker said. "And tell her to come to me in the morning room right after I have my manicure. We're having a dinner party tomorrow night. I've got to see to everything," she rumbled delightedly, once the maid had vanished behind the swinging door. It was delicious to be home again, back from the wilderness of boats and hotel and trains and taxis. Lisa Parker had had 15 years of running a flat on a budget of $10 a week. No wonder she exulted in the management of this big house with its background of blue water and its acre of colorful garden.

"Who's coming?" "Oh, the Strykursts and the Julians, and Captain Byrne and his fiancée. Two or three other people—I forget—your father has the list."

"Do I show up?" "You certainly do!" Mrs. Parker made her eyes very round. She was a plump, well-favored woman with a nice color and cheerful blue eyes behind nose glasses. You could see that she, too, had been a pretty girl; like Zoe, with all Zoe's animation and veer.

"Dad is having Mr. Cotaine from the office—very nice Englishman, rubber expert, to take you in," Mrs. Parker went on. "Son of a lord, Dad says."

Zoe made a not altogether complimentary sound with her pretty lips.

"Naughty girl," cooed Mrs. Parker. "What else did you have in mind?"

"There's a dance at the club," Zoe pointed. "Frank Corliss was coming out for it."

"The Princeton boy?" Mrs. Parker beamed. Zoe squirmed inwardly, hating the deception but not being able to do much about it. She knew very well her mother had welcomed the tall, blond, sophomore Corliss as an antidote to Gibbs. Might as well make Mother happy by kidding her along.

"Well," pondered Lisa Parker happily. "Dad can arrange that. We'll all go over to the club later, then. Wouldn't you like to ask Frank to dinner, too? Perhaps I can get Katharine Strykurst."

Zoe closed her eyes. Sometimes, That will make the table just right . . .

"No, don't," Zoe said hastily. "He's dining with some people from Scarsdale. The Williamses—Williams—something like that. He just said he'd see me there." It wouldn't do to get mother too excited about Frank Corliss. She'd be having them engaged before you knew it. Engagements were Mother's meat. She adored them—that is, if the man was suitably young and rich and decent-looking. She would never, never have consented to an engagement between Zoe and Gibbs . . .

"Not," admitted Zoe to herself, "that he ever asked me . . ."

"Katharine is busy, anyhow," she amended hastily. "There's some boy she knew at art school in New York now. He's coming out for the dance."

"Oh, very well, then. It's all settled," Mrs. Parker was perfectly happy this morning. Things seemed to be going unusually well. Zoe appeared to be contented; the trip had been a success.

Zoe ran out of the house and around to the garage. Waters was polishing the car in which her father drove to town every morning. "My car all right?"

The little chauffeur came around to the side of Zoe's roadster. "It was the gearshift lever sticking, miss. I fixed it."

"Thanks." She climbed in, with a flash of brown legs. Good thing Mother didn't see her start off in shorts. Mother was old-fashioned about such things. Oh, well, she wasn't going to get out and parade around Main Street in them, although some of the cottagers did that, buying their vegetables and groceries. Zoe wrinkled up her nose at the thought . . .

Katharine wasn't in, the maid at the Strykursts said. She would be back from the riding club in half an hour.

"Rising every day, h'm?" Zoe muttered, backing the little car and wheeling it about. Katharine Strykurst did everything that way, violently and intensively. She had gone to art school devotedly for several seasons, but nothing had come of it except a few rather clever black and white sketches which appeared in Katharine's big, old-fashioned dressing room. Katharine hated being a rich man's daughter, she often said. She envied girls who worked, the chorus girls you saw leaping and bounding in the numbers of a musical comedy or night club; the newspaper girls who covered the golf tournaments . . .

"We're just too stupid to earn our own livings, that's it," she often said mutinously to Zoe. "We couldn't, if we tried . . ."

Zoe decided to go out to Shady Ridge and see if she could pick up Katharine. They hadn't had a chance to talk the other day, with all that crowd around the club. And yesterday had been stormy and Katharine had called to say she didn't feel well. Had a headache or something. As if it weren't an unheard-of thing for Katharine to say she was ill . . .

Zoe drove into the door yard of the riding school. It was the old Rogers farm; this new man, whoever he was, rented it from Dan Rogers. There was nobody about but an elderly colored man who said Miss Strykurst was due back any minute.

Zoe shut off the engine and waited. It was very quiet here. A few chickens fluffed about in the yard, and occasionally a horse's inquiring head, with its big, mild eyes, would appear over the open door of the stall. There was a faint sound of switching and stamping, as flies tormented the beasts inside.

She hadn't slept well last night. Maybe that was why she dropped off into slumber as she waited for Katharine. That was why she didn't hear the horses and their riders had returned. Her car was drawn up alongside the dirt road, in the shadows of the drooping willow. Katharine didn't see her, either, for quite a little time. She was talking to the tall young man who dismounted from the big, nervous horse with the white star on his forehead. Zoe, awaking, stared at them curiously.

Why, whatever was the matter with Katharine? She had never seen her look that way—never before in all her life. Katharine was pale, but her eyes glittered as though she had an inward fever. She laughed vaguely and stripped off her gloves and put them on again, without seeming to know exactly what she was doing.

The young man was talking to her quietly; it seemed the most casual sort of conversation. Good, looking chap, Zoe told herself. He must be the young westerner who runs the place. But Katharine had never been interested in any man before. She (Zoe) must be imagining things . . .

Presently Katharine saw Zoe waiting for her. She flushed deeply and said something to the man in riding clothes. He turned toward Zoe's car and saluted her gravely. Then Katharine walked briskly toward the car.

"My dear, I believe you're in love!" Zoe said.

Katharine stared at her. "Nonsense," she said sharply. "I never heard anything so silly in my life!"

Southwestern Texas has one of the largest natural spring areas to be found in the world. Ten notable springs flow almost 1,000,000,000 gallons of cold spring water daily. The largest, Pecan Spring in Val Verde county, flows 245,000,000 gallons daily.

The original of the Constitution of Texas was lost in Tennessee. Only the newspaper reports were ever ratified, and in the archives of the state today, a copy of the document, as printed in the Texas Telegraph, reposes.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Text: Acts 2:41-45; Ephesians 4:1-7, 11-16
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for May 12.

OUT of faith and experience comes fellowship. Such was the origin of the Christian Church, and such has been the origin of every new movement and organization in the history of the Church.

Sometimes the faith and the experience are narrow, and the resulting movement and fellowship are sectional or sectarian. This, also, has been the history of the Christian Church.

But in the beginning the Church arose out of a very definite experience of repentance and salvation. The Church had no great temples. There was no organization with worldly strength which men might join for the sake of social prestige, or for the sake of power.

The Church consisted of small groups of those who had found the new experience of salvation and life in Christ Jesus. These groups met in a measure of seclusion with the threat of persecution constantly upon them.

One can hardly think of anyone joining the Church in those days except from strong conviction and because the Church represented a fellowship in something more precious than anything that the world offered. The marvel is that even under these conditions the members of this early church were not always ideal.

WE need only read Paul's epistles to see how even in this primitive church, where everything connected with it seemed to involve sacrifice, there were those whose lives were not proof against vice and whose spirits were not free from narrowness.

But here in our lesson, in the record of the first gathering and fellowship, we have the revelation of an ideal and practice so glorious that there seems little hope of humanity rising to it. So at moments like this, she thought it would be nice if she could get over Gibbs—get over wanting the queer excitement his presence always brought her. Maybe she could go away to some place simple and quiet, and forget about him. She had a feeling deep down that there were rough roads ahead of her. But she had fallen in love with Gibbs . . . She didn't know what to do about it. Europe had been a desert without him. Other men were just shadows . . .

She hadn't slept well last night. Maybe that was why she dropped off into slumber as she waited for Katharine. That was why she didn't hear the horses and their riders had returned. Her car was drawn up alongside the dirt road,

We, the Seniors, wish to say a few parting words now that our school days are numbered. No, we haven't much more time to be in school; that time is drawing near to which we have looked forward for so many years. We have dreamed and planned of the day when we would be free from school. No more working at difficult problems or wearisome studying for us, we said. But now, when we see this long-anticipated day just ahead of us we somehow seem to have lost the desire to be out of school. We begin to wonder if it will be so wonderful to be out on our own without the companionship of the old school friends we have known so long. Will we not feel rather lost without the old schedules, rules, kind teachers, and friends we know? We begin to realize what a great readjustment lies ahead of us. Will we be able to do the things we wish to do and be the things we wish to be?

We can see how we have wasted time in vain regrets and in many other ways and we wish we had used our time to more advantage for only now are we able to realize the value of time.

And so to the other classes we wish to say, "Use your time while you have it." What is lost can never be regained. You may think that your work is hard and wish that you were through with it, but later you will realize the value of it, see what it has done for you and then you will be glad that you spent your time wisely and only wish that you had more time to devote to your studies.

SOPHOMORE NEWS
At a meeting of the sophomore class Betty Gray Nix was chosen as the sophomore representative to attend the junior-senior banquet. The sophomores enjoyed a picnic at the Olden lake on Tuesday, April 30. Everyone reported a good time although Mr. Smith, our sponsor, says he ate too much for comfort.

FRESHMAN NEWS
We are glad to see Charles Young back at school again. We are sorry that Melvin Holt, our freshman reporter, is ill at this time. Wilbert Norton was elected by the freshman class to go to the junior-senior banquet as their representative.

SPORT NEWS
The track team who went to Denton brought back honors of fourth place. We are all proud of these boys and especially A. C. Gibson, Max Anderson and G. W. Curry, who brought back medals. A. C. won first in the half mile, Max won second in the 220 low hurdles, and G. W. won third in the 220 low hurdles. These boys made this good showing in spite of the downpour of rain and the muddy field.

The other members who went were: Howard Young, Charlie Butler, Johnny Jarrett, Lemar Whisenant, Elzo Gullett, Vernoh Patterson, and Bobbie Collins, manager. Every one of these boys responded nobly and with just a little bit of luck would have won the meet. Three close fifth comers were accompanied by CoachESSE firms this statement. Senior News
We have received our invitations and caps and gowns, but no one really wishes to receive them, for our school days are nearly over, and we will have to leave this grand old school, all our teachers and friends.

Our junior-senior banquet will be held Friday night at the roof garden of the Connellee hotel. We are all making preparations for a good time.

Junior News
The junior class is preparing for the annual banquet to be given by the juniors for the seniors. The banquet this year is to be given on the roof garden of the Connellee hotel. Outstanding Attractions For Second Week May Festival

"The Mark of the Vampire," "Laddie," and "Go Into Your Dance" Showing at the Lyric

The second week of the May Festival of Certified Entertainment will bring to the Lyric screen three outstanding attractions. In selecting this special month of pictures Mr. R. J. O'Donnelle, obtaining the co-operation of the distributing companies, and release dates to the Texas Consolidated theatres have been speeded up to make May the most interesting month of the year to theatre patrons. The current week's, which is the second week of this special month of pictures, bookings are as follows: "Your Dance" will be presented, starring Lionel Barrymore who plays the vampire, "The Mark of the Vampire," starring Lionel Barrymore who plays the vampire, "Laddie," starring John Beal, who plays the college bred farmer, and "Go Into Your Dance," starring Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler.

ing its three day run Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the outstanding musical film of the year "Go Into Your Dance" will be presented. Co-starring Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, who in real life are Mr. and Mrs. Jolson, this film is a mammoth musical spectacle but carries a well defined plot and fascinating romance with tense emotional scene, interspersed with hilarious comedy relief. Spectacular dance ensembles staged by the noted Bobby Connelly, with scores of Hollywood's most beautiful chorus girls. Seven new song hits are introduced in this production, and Patsy Kelly in the comedy roles is excellent.

On Wednesday and Thursday the attraction "Laddie" will be presented. This immortal story by Gene Stratton Porter brings to the screen one of the greatest of all romances of real life or fiction. In the leading roles are Gloria Stuart and John Beal, who is hailed as a worthy successor of "Little Women," another masterpiece by the same producers, RKO-Radio.

TWO LATINIS FROM MANHATTAN

Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler co-star for the first time in "Go Into Your Dance," the Warner Bros. musical-dramatic hit. They are supported by Helen Morgan, Glandia Farrell, Patsy Kelly, Benny Rubin and other notables. And Bobby Connelly has created and staged some glorious dance ensemble scenes. It opens at the Lyric Theatre Saturday night at 11 p. m.

"Laddie" Meets the Only Girl

John Beal, who plays "Laddie," the college bred farmer, meets the "Princess" on his way to church and a beautiful romance is born. The group includes Dorothy Peterson, Virginia Weidler, who is "Little Sister" and Gloria Stuart who plays Pamela in "Laddie," RKO-Radio picture at the Lyric Theatre Wednesday.

BROADWAY HIT CRIME DRAMA NOW IN MOVIES

Norman Krasna, author of "Small Miracle," current season's Broadway hit, also wrote the screen adaptation of the play which is now at the Lyric theatre, under the title, "Four Hours to Kill."

With Richard Barthelmess in the leading role, "Four Hours to Kill" shows how an escaped convict spends his precious moments of freedom to get the rat who squealed on him.

The entire action of the picture takes place within a theatre, where Barthelmess breaks away from the detective who had brought him there to while away the time between trains.

Lurking in a phone booth, Barthelmess makes the call that will lure his victim to the theatre. In the meantime, the life dramas of others in the theatre are rising to their climax. A cloakroom boy has stolen to get money; he faces exposure. A rich man's wife prepares to run away with a man she believes she loves.

While police search frantically and surround the area, Barthelmess emerges from his hiding place and coolly kills his victim before their eyes.

How he is caught while the other characters in the drama are permitted to go their separate ways, brings the picture to an effective climax.

PEPPY GLENDA FARRELL QUALIFIES AS CLIMBER

In making scenes for the First National musical spectacle, "Go Into Your Dance," at the Lyric theatre Saturday night, Glenda Farrell had to climb up and down the steps of a Pullman train 19 times. In addition she climbed in and out of a bus 17 times. All the climbing was done in one day. "Bring on your Matterhorn," Glenda remarked to bystanders. Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler co-star in the production.

HELEN MORGAN SINGS FOR HER CO-WORKERS

During the production of the First National musical spectacle, "Go Into Your Dance," which comes to the Lyric theatre next Saturday night, Helen Morgan frequently entertained her co-workers with torch songs, for which she is famous.

Those who were rapt listeners included Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler, Glenda Farrell, Patsy Kelly, Benny Rubin, Phil Regan and Gordon Westcott, all members of the cast. Miss Morgan sings in "Go Into Your Dance"—and also plays an important role.

GLENDA FARRELL TALKS TOO FAST FOR "MIKE"

Glenda Farrell continues to reign supreme as the fastest talking actress in Hollywood.

In the First National picture, "Go Into Your Dance," which comes to the Lyric theatre Saturday night, Miss Farrell had to re-take several scenes because her speech was too speedy for the microphone. While most players have to take
