Non-Resistance Policy Won't Prevent War

One of the strongest ways in which human nature has expressed itself since the war is the great wave of pacifism that has spread through the younger generation. Perhaps "strange" is not quite the word, at that. No young man who looks back thoughtfully on the monstrous horror of the World War and the almost insane things that were done during and after it can be blamed very greatly if he concludes that non-resistance is a sound doctrine.

But this spread of pacifism is relatively a new thing under the sun, even so. It has been especially noticeable in colleges. Over and over again we read stories of students banding together to swear that they will never answer a call to arms.

One of the results has been that the professional patriots have run quite a temperature about it all.

Newton D. Baker, who as secretary of war in 1917 put some 4,000,000 young Americans into the army, took occasion the other day to warn these idealistic young men that their anti-war pledges will mean precisely nothing if and when another war begins.

"God forbid that I should want anybody to go to war," he said, "but I'm too old to be otherwise than frank. The attitude of many youths and many churches in seeking to avoid war by having nothing to do with it is a flight from reality."

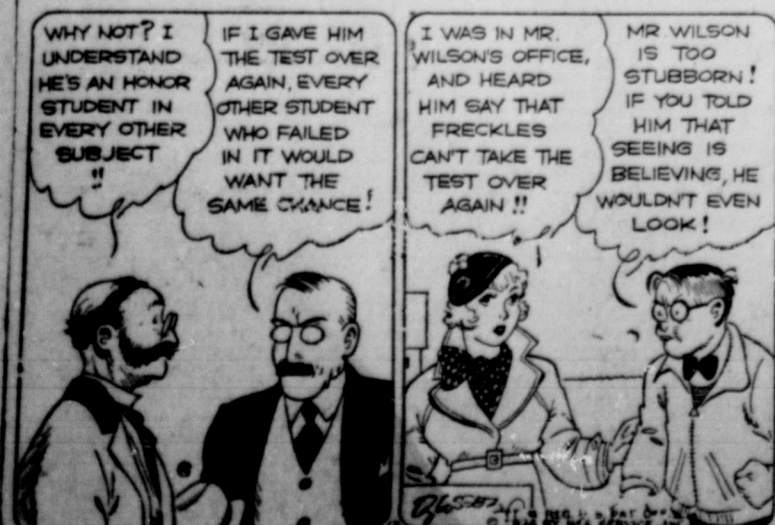

"It is just as foolish to say you won't have anything to do with war as it would be, if you were walking through the woods and were attacked by a lion, to say you wouldn't have anything to do with the lion."

These words, unpleasant as they may be to peace lovers, are nevertheless full of good sense.

We can't avoid war by shutting our eyes to it. War, when it comes, is an outgrowth of a previously pursued national policy. If we hate war, our only course is to work for such policies as will enable us to live at peace with our neighbors.

Once war comes, it turns loose a blind, over-powering force before which pledges to "renounce war" are utterly futile.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

"Mortals and Immortals" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, November 18th.

The Golden Text is: "The creature itself also shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God." (Romans 8:21).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "The Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away from off all the earth: for the Lord hath spoken it." (Isaiah 25:8).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"It is only by acknowledging the supremacy of Spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes man forever in the divine likeness, inseparable from his creator." (page 491).

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

BEGIN HERE TODAY. When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, is found dead...

GRIFF nodded to the lawyer. "You tell him," he said. "At the time the check was cashed..."

"The attorneys representing the Malone claim, whatever its nature would demand that the estate produce all documents and vouchers which were in its possession..."

"And what," asked Bleeker, "is the nature of this claim that Malone is to make?"

GRIFF stared in fixed concentration at the patterned carpet of the hotel hallway.

confirm your surmises, and I do not wish to. You can, however, appreciate the importance of getting Frank Bliss into custody and getting an interview with Mrs. Blanche Malone before Peter Malone is able to get in touch with her."

"Don't you think," Griff asked, "that Peter Malone has done all that he cares to do; that he has fully performed his part in the scheme of things and is now ready to vanish?"

"I think," Fisher said, "he already has vanished."

"Your plan?" asked Griff. "I think," Fisher said, "we should all upon Mrs. Blanche Malone."

"No," he said. "Why?"

"Only," Griff told him, "because she is mixed into the case in some way that is, the woman is mixed in the Morden murder case. She and a male companion by the name of Kenneth Boone were taken into custody today by the police and are now being interrogated. It is possible that she has already made some statements."

"You consider the murder of Morden connected with the plan of this Peter Malone?" the lawyer inquired.

"No gentlemen, while I think that theory is, perhaps, sound, I must refuse to be misled by it. I prefer to keep to the main trail."

a position to run down the conspiracy against Cathay. We have brought home to Frank Bliss a grave suspicion of having been implicated in the murder of Frank Cathay."

"You think it was a murder?" Griff asked.

"Beyond any doubt."

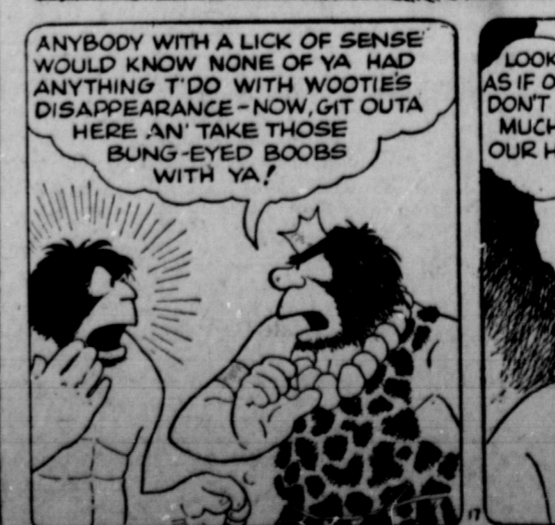

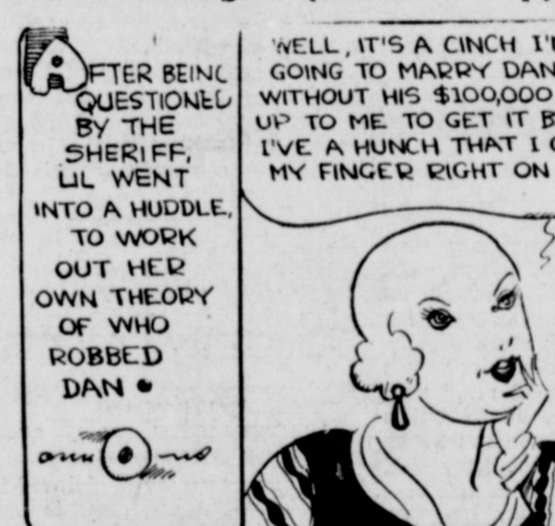

"We have," the lawyer went on, "secured the address of Blanche Malone and I say to you gentlemen that it is by no means improbable that it is the one who is to profit by the years of preparation which have been made by Peter Malone; that it is not inconceivable that Malone was prepared to make it appear that he and Cathay were one and the same person, and that Mrs. Malone, her marriage once having been established, is, in fact, the surviving wife of Frank Cathay."

BLEEKER'S eyes sparkled with sudden understanding.

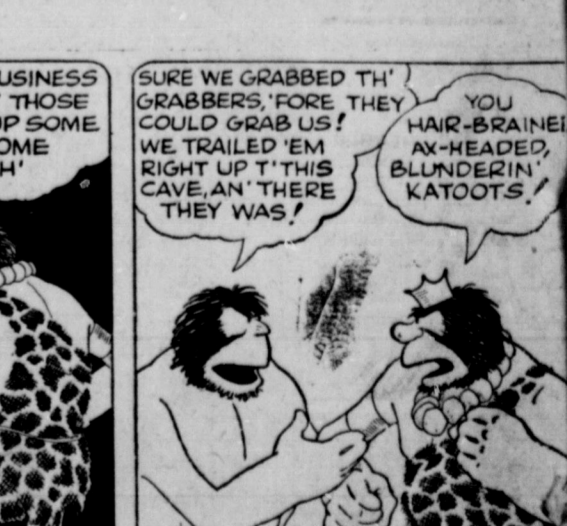

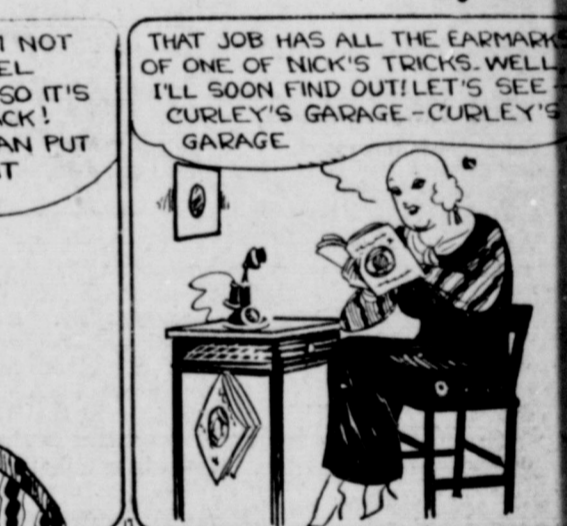

"Good heavens!" he said, "that must be it! But can it hold up in view of the testimony of this young woman?"

"That," Fisher said, "remains to be seen. But of course that is the thing I am trying to do—to thwart this conspiracy. I think gentlemen, it will be better if I go to see Mrs. Malone without having you along. The interests of my client are vitally involved. I pledge you to make a complete disclosure of whatever I find out. After I have talked with her you may talk with her, but I think you will agree it may be much more possible to get a complete statement from her if I talk with her alone than if I have an audience."

Mickle Hardware Company Celebrates Its 50th Anniversary In Business

JOE J. MICKLE, Sr.
President Mickle Hardware and Furniture Company

MRS. JOE J. MICKLE,
Vice President Mickle Hardware and Furniture Company

company of Fort Worth, Texas, manufacturers of saddles, harness and all classes of leather goods, also a tannery with a capital stock of $500,000 and $50,000 surplus, of which Mickle owned more than $100,000 of the capital stock. This institution did a large business, traveling many salesmen and selling only to dealers. This concern manufactured and sold to Sears & Roebuck for a long time all the saddles, harness and leather goods they sold through their southwestern division at Dallas, Texas, and sold them at identically same prices they sold to all their retail trade. Also had stores at Guyton, Okla., McAlester, Okla., Wilson, Okla., Greenwood, Ark., Benton, Ark., Weatherford, Texas, Breckenridge, Texas, Wolfe City, Texas, Celeste, Texas, Lakeview, Texas, Clarendon, Texas, and several other places.

The great deflation of 1920-22 caused them great loss, more than $300,000. Heavily engaged in cattle, wheat production and merchandising. Cattle values declined around 75 per cent, merchandising 50 per cent, and wheat dropped from $2.75 per bushel to about 90 cents per bushel.

Later they discontinued this business and moved to Memphis, Hall county, where they opened their headquarters and also opened a large branch store at Mangum, Okla., another at Hollis, Okla., another at Wellington, Texas, and one at Claude, Texas. They also engaged strongly in the ranching and farming business.

The little city of Ralls in Crosby county now stands one of their old ranches and within about one-half mile of their old ranch headquarters. They owned about 20,000 acres of that fine plains land and sold Mr. John Ralls about 8,000 acres of same, together with their cattle thereon and Mr. Ralls built the town of Ralls which was named for him. In this deal they purchased from Mr. Ralls a large stock of general merchandise and a large brick business house at Ryan, Okla., which they continued as a branch for some time.

About Jan. 1, 1919, they moved to Amarillo, Texas, where they continued the mercantile, ranching and farming interests and in which county they have considerable interest yet.

Some 10 years ago they purchased the elegant brick business house erected by the L. B. Wright Hardware company, and situated on West Main street of Eastland, Texas, which is the Broadway of America, and the Bankhead highway, which is the most traveled highway in all Texas. This building contains approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space and is one of the most modern and up-to-date store buildings between Fort Worth and El Paso.

About seven years ago these people, together with their eldest son, O. O. Mickle, and his family, moved to Eastland, Texas, and put in above mentioned building one of the largest stocks of hardware with its kindred lines in all West Texas under the corporation name of Mickle Hardware and Furniture company. Mr. Joe J. Mickle is president and chairman of the board, Mrs. Joe J. Mickle is vice president, Mr. O. O. Mickle is secretary-treasurer and general manager. This is a close corporation, with $50,000 capital, $25,000 surplus and all the stock owned by the Mickle family and each of the children on the board of directors. The above mentioned building is not included in said corporation's capital, but owned by a member of said Mickle family.

Joe J. Mickle has been constantly in the mercantile business for himself 50 years, Jan. 1, 1934. He and his good wife have been pulling together side by side enjoying their prosperity and bearing their adversities together for about 46 years and life is still bright and cheerful to them.

God blessed their home with two boys and three sweet girls, one of the daughters having been called to that better home, that house not made by hand, eternal in the heavens, in her infancy. The eldest son, O. O. Mickle, is secretary, treasurer and general manager of the Mickle Hardware and Furniture company, Eastland, Texas. The youngest son, Joe J. Mickle Jr. is a missionary in Japan, having been there 13 years, and is busier now than ever in making proper train connections and where they erected a family altar, to the Divine Godhead, in their hotel room before retiring, reconsecrating their lives to Him who created them and gave His only-begotten Son to die upon an ignominious cross, that they might have life eternal. That family altar has ever been maintained in their home since.

About Jan. 1, 1892, they moved to Texas and lived at Honey Grove, Fannin county, Texas, where they were engaged in the mercantile business and farming in that rich black waxy land country. Later they removed to Cleburne, Johnson county, Texas, where they again engaged in merchandising, having a large hardware store, a large dry goods store and a large grocery store, side by side.

About January, 1900, they moved to Fort Worth, Texas, where they engaged in the wholesale hardware business, where they occupied a building 100 feet by 140 feet, one-half being three story and one-half two story, under firm name of Mickle-Burghes Hardware company, of which Joe J. Mickle was president and general manager.

Joe J. Mickle was also a large stockholder and secretary-treasurer of the James Mickle School

NEW YORK—So he married the boss' daughter, and was kicked upstairs. One can't blame Clark Griffith for selling Joe Cronin, his son-in-law, for "far in excess of $125,000," and being the payee in the richest deal in the history of baseball.

The owner of the Washington club asked $250,000 for his manager and shortstop when Tom Yawkey, the Boston Red Sox magnate of many millions, opened negotiations during the world series. And one can't blame Griffith for enabling his son-in-law to accept the best manager's job in the game, for that is what the Boston assignment is, with Yawkey's unlimited resources and willingness to spend. Cronin gets a five-year contract at a "tremendous salary."

Hero of the Hub
THE Cronin deal figures to be the most satisfactory closed by Yawkey. When you are putting out $20,000 for players like Dusty Cooke and Lynn Lary, you scarcely can go wrong even when you cough up "far in excess of $125,000" for a Joe Cronin.

Baseball men declare that Cronin, who celebrated his 28th birthday on Oct. 12, is worth $150,000 as a shortstop alone, and his demonstrated leadership enhances his value.

Long highly regarded there, Cronin, a personable Irishman, will be the most popular individual in south Boston since Jim Maloney was shaking his fist at Jack Sharkey.

Blow to Babe
WITH all of Yawkey's money, Cronin will have his head aches in Boston.

Unless the old zing returns to the arms of Lefty Grove and Ruben Walberg, the Red Sox will need pitchers to go with Ferrell and Ostermuller. Eddie Morgan won't do at first base. Max Bishop is no longer able to perform regularly at second, and Bill Cassid is a step or two shy of being a first-rate major leaguer.

Roy Johnson really is the only acceptable outfielder. Julius Solters having yet to prove his worth, Carl Reynolds being bris-a-brac and the others little more than filler-inners.

The switch in Boston is another blow at Babe Ruth's chances of realizing his ambition to manage a major league entry. If there was one spot where the Bambino fitted better than in New York, it was Boston, where he started his big league career.

So Long, Stan
THE only regrettable thing in connection with Cronin's going to Boston is the apparent passing of gracious Stanley Harris, who will be succeeded.

The careers of Harris and Cronin are strangely parallel. Both came from nowhere to become big managers in Washington. It was Harris who had sufficient faith in Cronin to insert him into the Senators' lineup in mid-season, 1925, after the youngster had hit only 245 for Kansas City.

It would be nice of Griffith to take back the manager who won him his first two pennants in 1924 and 1925, but the Old Fox is looking for something besides brains.

You can't be a boy wonder at 35. Harris no longer can set in there and come up with those plays around second base.

So it is that Burky seems face to face with that time that comes to everybody in baseball—the finish.

many other new and improved mechanical features.

"On the other hand, our towns, cities and States have done much to lessen the hazards of driving, through the construction of new and wider roads, elimination of bad curves and grade crossings. They have installed improved 'go' and 'stop' signals, placed thousands of stop and warning signals, painted lines down the center of roads, and created traffic lanes on busy streets and thoroughfares.

"But in spite of all this, our death and personal injury rate still mounts and the only answer we have for it is that the automobile manufacturer and the road and highway engineers cannot guarantee the 'nut that holds the wheel.'

"While I do not suppose we will ever reach that stage of perfection, many things can and should be done to lessen that evil through the passage of strict drivers' license laws, uniform traffic laws, and laws governing the installation of standard warning and 'stop' and 'go' signals, and the peep-logical examination of the driver, as well as his automobile. And last but not least, of a sufficiently large enough police department to not only police our highways and streets, but most important of all, to investigate any and all collisions in order to arrive at a cause and then eliminate it, if it be either in the driver or in the road."

Judge Blaine told of the success he had in St. Louis with the traffic school he conducted while he served on the bench as Judge of City Court. Traffic violators were told to attend the school or go to jail in order to serve their sentence. A series of lectures was held, one on city ordinances on automobile driving, one on State laws on auto driving, another on safe highway driving, and another on minor violations resulting in major accidents.

Judge Blaine advocated accident prevention campaigns in cities as a means to educate the public and bring about decreases in traffic fatalities.

The speaker's address was illustrated by means of a board on which were placed miniature automobiles, street cars, street crossings and traffic signals. He used this to give graphic descriptions of the traffic laws violated unconsciously and the tragic wrecks that resulted.

"Most accidents are caused as a result of carelessness and thoughtlessness on the part of drivers," Judge Blaine said. "When you are on the street in your car, don't compare with the other fellow about the right-of-way; give it to him. Don't take a chance, for there may be another fool thinking of the same thing. Don't drive your car into pedestrians' safety zones.

"Use your influence in preventing accidents by continually talking the subject and then practicing what you preach. If you do this you will live a lot longer and be able to enjoy the pleasures and privileges of living on this earth."

George Arliss, Frank Albertson and Charlotte Henry in 20th Century's "The Last Gentleman" at the Lyric Sunday.

"LAST GENTLEMAN" UNUSUAL COMEDY Perhaps the most unusual comedy to reach the screen since the inception of talkies is "The Last Gentleman," George Arliss' new 20th Century starring vehicle, which plays today at the Lyric Theatre.

The story, which depicts the amusing and eventful efforts of an eccentric but lovable old millionaire to choose a worthy heir among his various and colorful relatives, offers Arliss another great role and the brilliant artist achieves another characterization as rich and complete as, if in a lighter vein than, his recent triumph as Nathan Rothschild in "The House of Rothschild."

"The Last Gentleman," which Leonard Praskins adapted from a play by Katharine Clugston, employs the talking screen in a unique manner which results in a tremendously effective surprise ending.

Edna May Oliver, Janet Beecher, Charlotte Henry and Ralph Morgan head the imposing supporting cast which includes Donald Meek, Frank Albertson, Edward Ellis and Joseph Cawthorn, while Sidney Lanfield directed the comedy in association with Maude T. Howell for United Artists release.

VISITED EASTLAND Twenty-four children were entertained in Eastland homes, on the recent visit of some of the Waco orphans who on their bus tour gave a program at the Methodist conference and stopped enroute in Eastland to favor the local Methodists.

An eighteen piece orchestra accompanied the choral club, which presented groups of songs and trios, concluding with "Sing Me to Sleep" with orchestral accompaniment.

At the conclusion of the program John Burke invited the entire crowd to the Lyric Theatre, where the children thoroughly enjoyed the offering of the screen.
