Presbyterians' New Moderator

New moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian church is Dr. Joseph A. Vance, 70, shown here after his election in Cincinnati. Dr. Vance, pastor of the First church, Detroit, now is president of the board of national missions and has held other high offices in the church. He defeated two opponents on the second ballot.

PREMIER ASKS FOR SUPPORT IN EMERGENCY

PARIS, May 28. — Premier Pierre Flandin appealed to the nation to support the currency today, as he staked his government life on a demand for emergency powers. As the cabinet met in preparation for submission of his demand to the chamber of deputies, the government issued a statement blaming speculators for the crisis and said: "Resolutely hostile to devaluation of the currency, the government calls for support of all Frenchmen to defend the nation's money."

Directing his fight from his official residence to which he is confined by a broken arm, Flandin sought a blanket mandate to strengthen the currency and finance it by extraordinary measures.

Rural Teachers to Get Federal Grant To Pay Salaries

County School Superintendent, Claiborne Eldridge today received a telegram from U. S. Senator Tom Connally at Washington, stating that relief money for paying the county's rural teachers in full for the recent school terms had been granted. The telegram, which was in response to a plea from Eastland county, reads: "Conferred again today with Harry Hopkins and he granted federal relief money to pay the teachers of schools."

Slum Clearance May Be Blocked By Speculators

WASHINGTON, May 28. — Housing officials today characterized announcement of 60 slum clearance and housing projects applications as premature, and expressed fear the programs totaling $221,507,000 had been jeopardized. The housing officials were alarmed when word was given out through the division of applications and information that application had been made for the fund. They feared the activity by land speculators would prevent out the program. Speculators were likely to raise the price of land so high to prevent construction of housing in slums, they said.

POLICY TO BE BASED UPON PLEA RESPONSE

WASHINGTON, May 28. — President Roosevelt today awaited in silence the public reaction to the supreme court ruling against NRA. Upon response to chairman Donald Richberg's plea for voluntary adherence to labor provisions of all codes depends the administration's course of action, now admittedly uncertain. Richberg's plea and an announcement that all compulsory enforcement will be suspended, followed a conference with the president and Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Among progressives in congress a move to curb the supreme court power grew rapidly. Senator Robert M. La Follette, Wisconsin, said he was considering introduction of a bill to deprive the nine justices of the power to void acts of congress.

The NRA organization, with its 5,500 employees, will continue to plan operations until June 16, its expiration date. The other bureau set up under the recovery act, including the National Emergency council, the alcohol administration and others intend to continue.

Meanwhile American industry "set tight" awaiting developments. A few industrial leaders warned against "hasty action." Others said they would continue as they had under the code, but most of them delayed action.

Labor meantime threatened strikes, if necessary, to maintain present hour and wage standards. Developments were anxiously awaited by employers and employees, a survey disclosed.

Labor leaders took an aggressive stand, warning of "strikes if necessary" being issued by President Thomas McMahon of the United Textile Workers. Emil Rieve, president of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and others.

Employees, except those who reassured workers there would be no immediate change in hours and wages, preferred to remain silent for the time being.

TULSA, May 28. — Executives of major oil companies speaking off the record said today there is better than an even chance the major portion of the oil industry will continue to operate under NRA regulations.

Traffic Resumed After Storms Over Kansas, Missouri

LUBBOCK, May 28. — Judge James Wilson today directed a jury to give an instructed verdict of acquittal for Dr. V. A. Hartman, Post, one of four charged with murder of Spencer Stafford, narcotic agent. The court overruled motion for instructed verdicts for Dr. Kitchen and Tom Morgan, two other defendants.

At the small railroad station an express train stopped for the first time since Christmas. Telegraphers were busy with congratulatory wires pouring in for the babies, their parents and Dr. Dafee.

Officers said he had sent extortion notes to the Christian family demanding $30,000.

Overton, Texas, May 28. — The body of Joe Friska lay in a morgue today and his woman companion was in jail, as officers investigated his lying story of having two wives and roving the country committing robberies.

He was wounded last night by officers who surprised him as he terrified Mrs. C. E. Christian and her two daughters and looted their home. Officers said he had sent extortion notes to the Christian family demanding $30,000.

THREE KILLED IN CAR-TRUCK CRASH TODAY

DENTON, May 28. — Three persons were injured fatally today in an automobile collision near Denton.

A man identified tentatively as Jim McCamey, St. Jo, Texas, and unidentified woman occupant of the car, died in the crash. E. G. Adams, who lives near St. Jo, died three hours afterwards in a hospital.

A marriage license in the car bearing the name of Elmer Donaldson, Fort Sill, Okla., and Minnie Cole, as well as a letter addressed to Mrs. Lena Cole, Taylor, Texas, led to believe that those were the name of Adam's man and woman companions in the car. Two occupants of the truck were not injured seriously.

FRIENDS PRAY FOR DIONNES ON BIRTHDAY

LUBBOCK, May 28. — Friends and neighbors plodded across a countryside fresh with rain and wound up a hill to the grey church today to pray for the Dionne quintuplets on their first birthday.

But not the famous babies' parents. They were summoned to church but the parents did not attend the high mass in honor of themselves and the babies' nor did they come here to pray as they had said they might.

Candles burned brightly at the altar. Father McNally wore his finest robes of purple and gold. The little chapel was beautiful in its simplicity.

Hope Makes Brighter Future Than Despair

A prophet may be without honor in his own country, but he generally has a good deal of fun. When you set out to tell what things are going to be like two or three centuries hence, no one can possibly prove that you are wrong, and to talk without fear of contradiction is one of the greatest pleasures known to man.

Rexford G. Tugwell apparently enjoyed himself very much when he told an audience at Albany, N. Y., the other day that the entire middlewest will be a trackless, treeless, waterless desert in 300 years unless something is done to conserve water levels and check erosion.

It put his prophecy in the form of some travel notes by a British explorer in the year 2235, and it made pleasantly shivery reading. He had his explorer poking about on the site of St. Louis, finding the Mississippi nearly dry, traversing a lifeless waste where the corn and wheat belt now lies, and meditating profoundly on the evils that arise from lack of national foresight.

However timely as a warning all this may be, it might be just as much fun to write a similar prophecy based on optimism rather than pessimism.

Let us suppose, for instance, that we heed all the warnings we have been getting in recent years--warnings about soil conservation, industrial waste, social injustice, the need for rehousing, and so on; let us suppose that we manage to do all the things which it is evident today that we need to do, and put our national house property in order.

What would the traveler of 2235 A. D. find then? It makes an enchanting picture. We can see him visiting great cities that are free from slums, with every family occupying a clean, decent home and every child having access to grassy parks and groves for play; cities which manage to get along without unemployment or soup kitchens or poverty, governed as efficiently and sensibly as a school of technology, say, is governed today.

Beyond these little our traveler would find the world's happiest and most prosperous farm lands. Where the land is tilled, it is green with growing crops, and the farmhouses and villages are both lovely to look at and comfortable to live in; where the land is not tilled it is park-like, reserved for enjoyment of all the people--who, by this time, have plenty of leisure to enjoy such things.

A prophecy built along these lines is quite a contrast with the one Mr. Tugwell put together; and the comforting part about it all is that it is quite as likely to come true as his.

And that, after all, is what makes the present, with all its problems, a good time to be alive. Our destiny is in our hands as never before.

If we run the risk, through blindness and greed, of making Mr. Tugwell's doleful forecast come true, we also have the chance--and, all in all, a better chance--of building a future brighter than anything we dream of today.

Gasoline Tax Costs Average Motorist $45 For Each Year

DALLAS.--If gasoline taxes should increase only one-tenth as rapidly in the next 15 years as they have since 1919, each motor car would pay $2,000 a year in gasoline taxes 15 years hence, Fred M. Lege Jr., vice president in charge of marketing for the Magnolia Petroleum company, said in discussing the need for reduction of gasoline taxes. "In 1933 the average American paid $55.39 in taxes exclusive of automobile taxes while the motorist paid $99.97 on an average, nearly twice as much. Because the tax is paid on a few gallons at a time, when purchased, the average motorist does not realize the unreasonable proportions which the tax has reached. Last year the average gasoline tax in the United States was approximately 5.4 cents a gallon."

The gasoline tax is scarcely more than 15 years old, Mr. Lege pointed out. After the war, the clamor for good roads became insistent and Oregon levied a one-cent tax on gasoline for highway construction and maintenance. Within 10 years all states had adopted the tax.

There was little opposition to the gasoline tax at first because it seemed logical that users of highways should pay for them. Reductions in the price of gasoline, made possible by improved refining methods and more efficient operation, offset tax increases. Then the original purpose of the tax was forgotten and highway funds were diverted for all sorts of expenditures. On July 1, 1932, a federal gasoline tax became effective as an emergency tax. In some states, cities and counties began to demand their share of the motorist's money as well. By the end of 1934, the amount collected in gasoline taxes had increased from one million dollars the first year of its existence, to 700 million dollars in spite of the fuel bootlegged, free of taxes.

"Because the retail purchaser pays the tax along with the purchase price, few motorists stop to think that they are paying from 50 to 100 per cent tax on each gallon," Mr. Lege said. "Since 1919, the retail price of gasoline has decreased about 50 per cent while the average tax per gallon has increased several thousand per cent. No other generally used, essential commodity is taxed as heavily as is gasoline."

"All Americans, whether they drive automobiles or not, have a four-fold interest in gasoline taxation. First, labor suffers from wage cuts and lay-offs whenever high taxes, by encouraging tax evasion, make legitimate oil operations unprofitable. Second, attempts to evade high gasoline taxes encourage a disrespect for all laws. Third, the livelihood of millions of workers depends on the prosperity of the automobile industry, yet if gasoline taxes increase even one-tenth as rapidly as they have in the past, the ruin of our great motor car industry is surely in sight.

"Finally, the public as well as the motorist has an interest in seeing that gasoline funds are not diverted from the highways. Not only is our 10 billion dollar investment in highways one of our greatest national assets by making communication and transportation rapid, convenient and economical, but every dollar withdrawn from highway construction and maintenance means less employment for road labor, less purchasing power in the hands of the workers."

HUMOR, ROMANCE TENSE DRAMA IN 'MARY JANE'S PA' Rollicking humor, pathos, fast and intense dramatic action, romance--all are said to be contained in the Warner Bros. production, "Mary Jane's Pa.," which comes to the Lyric Theatre on Wednesday with that inimitable team of screen players, Alene McMahon and Guy Kibbee in the stellar roles. The story is based on the fascinating stage play, "Mary Jane's Pa.," by Edith Ellis Furness and the novel version by Norman Way. Kibbee plays the part of a tramp printer, born with wanderlust in his heart. A small town publisher, he leaves what he thinks is a competence to his wife and two small children, hops a freight at night and disappears. Finally, after many years, he returns to his home town to find the printing office closed and his family gone, no one knows where. He goes from town to town searching for his wife and children and eventually comes on a little lost girl and takes her home to discover she is his own child. But his wife is running another paper and is interested in another man and in politics. Alene McMahon has the role of the wife. She permits her husband

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McElloit © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Katharine Strykhurst, daughter of the late Victor Strykhurst, is attracted by Michael Heath, who runs a riding school. She is discontented and restless because her stepmother's rule, which she has inherited from a horse, she is taken to task by Violet Mercer, who in love with Katharine's father, Violet is drawn to Michael and they become friends. The same night Michael is inveigled into taking Sally Moon to Europe, visits the Strykhursts. Zoe Parker, Katharine's closest friend, is in love with Gibbs Larkin, and persists in seeing him in spite of her parents' objections. Katharine asks Dr. Kaye to help her keep Zoe from eloping with Gibbs. They take Zoe to a night club where she sees Gibbs with a notorious woman. Zoe threatens to do away with herself. The same night Michael is inveigled into taking Sally Moon to the same club.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XVII
"Look," Sally coaxed brightly, "if you come along with me to the club for a bit probably Father will be home by the time we get back. Then you can see him and talk to him."
"I don't like to see you in a place of that sort," Michael Heath argued.
"Michael, that's terribly sweet of you." Sally's dimples faded. In their place a grave wistfulness brooded. "I do—I mean it! I think that's terribly sweet. But don't you see I'll be perfectly all right with you, there? You're so very strong, Michael..."

Her voice was soft. Her brown, liquid eyes were luminous. For the moment Sally was all woman. She was Circe in a pink lace dress.
"All right," Michael said grudgingly. "But I'm against it, don't forget that."
"You're a lamb." She laid a fluttering, warm hand on his wrist. "I'll do something for you some time. Beside, Father will be pleased. He said you were such a sterling young man. Honestly, that was what he said."
"Thanks," said Michael, getting red and feeling a fool. But it was all right if Sally said such things to him when there was no one else to hear. She was, really, a sweet little thing. She said the first thing that came into her head.
So it was that, as Katharine's car turned out of the driveway of the Bath Club, Sally's drove in. Michael saw Katharine. He caught a glimpse of Dr. Kaye beside her, his thin, aristocratic face sharply cut above the black and white of his dinner clothes. Sally, driving rather intently, did not see them. "Here we are," she cried gaily, jumping out. "Michael, we'll let the man park it, shall we? I don't know exactly where..."
But the doorman was not in sight. A waiter, looking rather wild-eyed, ran to the door, inspected them and ran back again. "Isn't he queer?" Sally marveled.

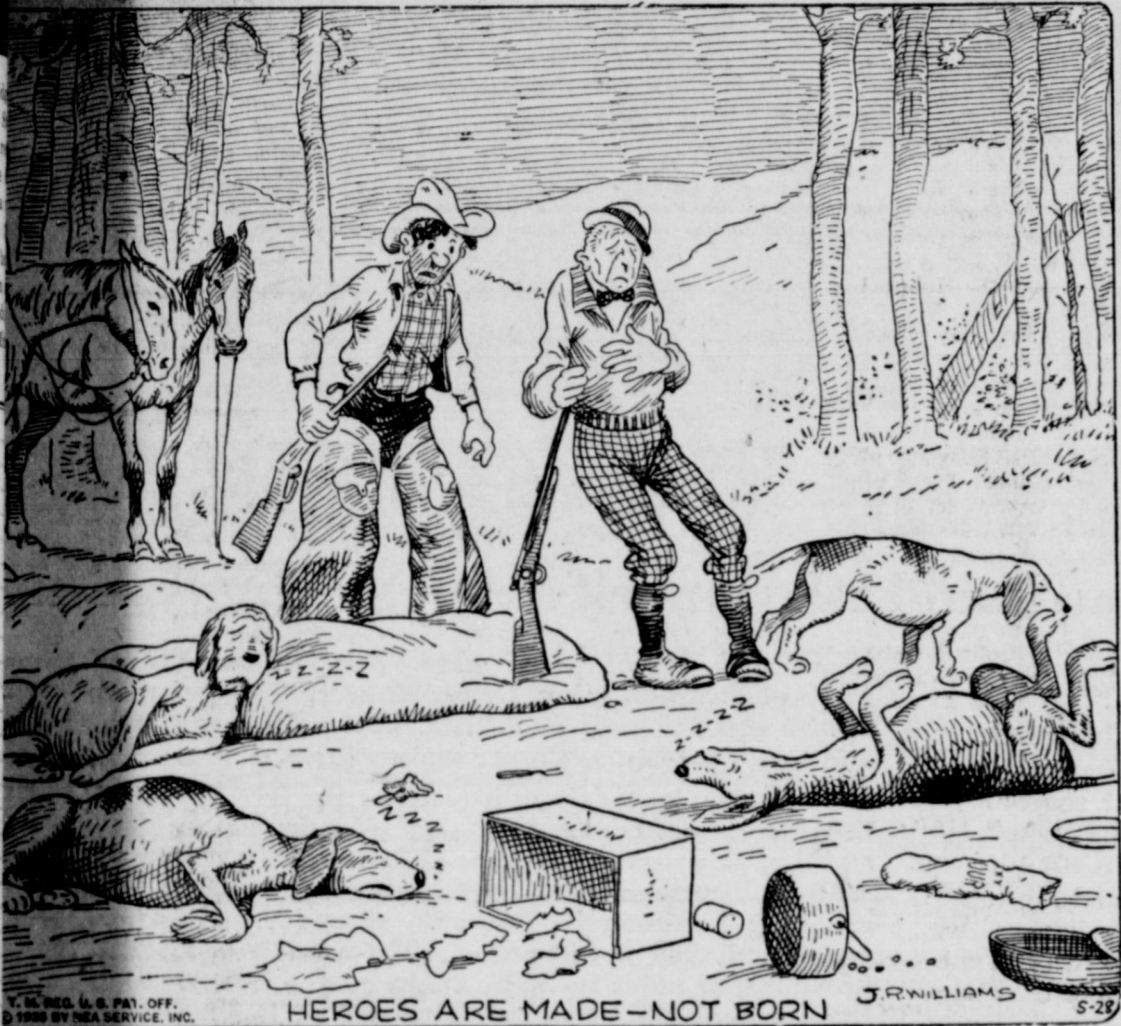

"I reckon maybe not," he drawled. She clapped her hands and one or two people at adjacent tables turned to stare at her in some curiosity. A pretty girl with big eyes and a rounded figure in a pink lace frock.
"Michael, when you say that you sound exactly like Gary Cooper. That's the way they all talk out in God's Country, isn't it? Oh, I adore the west. I've always said I'd love to live there some day. It's my dream—my ideal."
She was enjoying the little stir she had made, enjoying the glances of the curious. Maybe that fat man in the linen suit was a theatrical producer, looking for "types." Maybe he would notice her nerve and animation and send a note over to their table, asking her if she had ever thought of going on the stage. She had heard that the Blue Sky Club was absolutely dripping with celebrities, but nobody here looked particularly exciting.
"Who's that girl over there by the door?" she demanded of Michael suddenly. "The one talking to the captain. I've seen her picture some place..."
Michael turned and glanced at the newcomer. She was a tall girl with a sinuous, beautiful body draped in transparent black. Her magnificent bosom was bare and there were glittering bangles on both her arms. Her black hair grew in a widow's peak on her white forehead.

"She's a stunner," Michael conceded, after a brief survey.
"Yes, but who is she?" Sally repeated. "Oh, I'll have her name in a minute—it's on the tip of my tongue. I saw her in that show last winter."
The drinks and dainty little tidbits of toast and fish paste were set down before them. Sally took a bite of caviar with a child's greediness and sipped the burning liquid.
"Good," she murmured. "You don't know what you're missing."
Her color mounted and her tongue tripped along to a merrier tune. She assumed a possessive attitude toward the man at her side. Her glances were frankly amorous now and her interest in him more boldly displayed.
"I must have another cocktail, Michael. One's only the starter, you know. Really just a sip..."
The tall young man in the gray suit frowned to himself. It was a desperately uncomfortable position to be in. Sally was his hostess; a guest did not protest at the conduct of his hostess.
Sally had her second cocktail.
"Do you mind if we push along?" Michael asked rather awkwardly. "I have to get back—I'm sorry..."
The place was filling up. The girl in black had stood in the doorway only a moment, her eyes raking the crowd. Then she had vanished.

"All right," Sally said. "We'll go. But I do think you're being very stuffy, Michael, darling."
When they arrived at her front door Joseph Moon was just rising from the swing couch on the veranda.
"Ah, Heatheroe, Sally said you wanted to see me." He stared with some surprise and distance at his daughter, who was swaying oddly on her feet.
"Sally, what on earth does this mean?" His eye darted to her escort's dark, troubled face.
"It's perfectly all right, Father," Sally said, very carefully. "You see, Michael and I are going to be married."

state's total farm area.
- Out of Texas' land area of 169,326,465 acres, the survey showed only 38,596,844 acres where there was little or no erosion. This is about 22.8 per cent of Texas total land area.
On 11.6 per cent of the area, or 19,724,668 acres, made up of rocky ground, mountainous areas, scab lands and shallow soils, soil erosion conditions were not considered.
Dust storms alone have damaged 21,105,624 acres, in Texas (12.6 per cent of the total area) of which 1,263,736 acres have been totally destroyed. More than six million acres have been severely eroded by winds and 13 million acres show some damage.
"In the high plains district of the Western Panhandle," Glenn L. Fuller, chief erosion specialist and director of the service, said, "wind erosion is quite general. Annual rainfall is less than 20 inches and the loose, friable soils blow easily if vegetation is removed."
"Both sheet and gully erosion are serious in the extreme western part of Texas. The Edwards plateau is subject to considerable sheet erosion and gullying. The West Cross Timber section is seriously eroded and has some gullies."
"The East Texas timber section has both sheet and gully erosion and in many places fields have been completely devastated."

OUT OUR WAY" By Williams

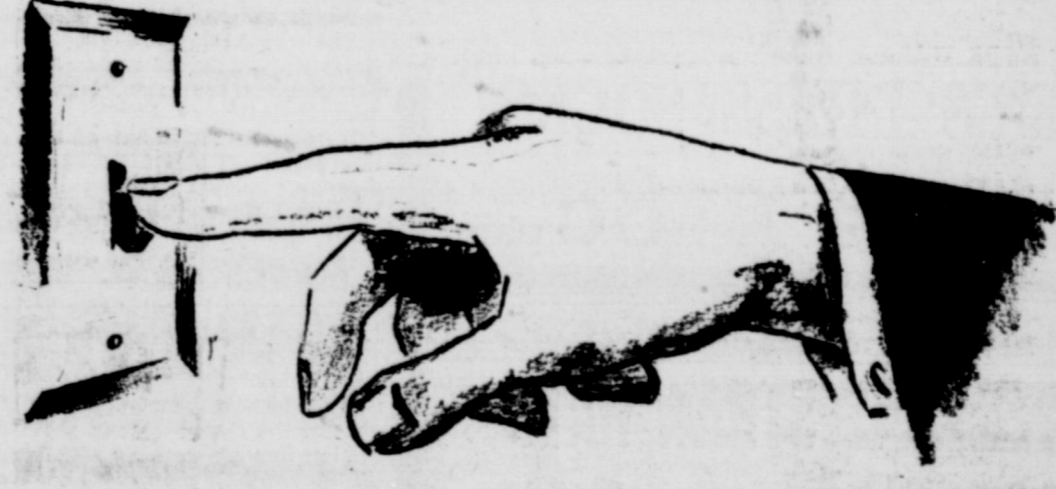

Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pop) By Cowen

Michael pushed open the big, grilled door and went in. The marble-floored hall was empty. A hat check girl appeared from nowhere. She, too, looked rather disheveled. She viewed the newcomers with something like suspicion.
"Will someone find me a table, please?" Sally demanded with hauteur. "Miss Moon!"
There was a doorman, after all. He came on the run.
"What goes on here, anyhow?" Sally wanted to know.
The doorman looked blank. It was, she knew, one of the best things doormen did. But Sally was curious. There was about the place a curious air of tenseness. The few groups of people at the tables around the pool, to which they were presently escorted, seemed excited about something. The captain of waiters eyed Michael with suspicion, but purred when he heard Sally's name. It was well, the employees of Bath Club had been told, to "stand in" with the local fathers. Joseph Moon was a prominent local father. He ran the bank; he was a village trustee; he bossed the school board.
"This isn't so much," observed Sally in a dissatisfied tone, Michael grinned.
"What did you expect? People hanging from the walls?"
She giggled. "I thought it would be—more exciting."
"Oh, well, it's early for this kind of place," Michael told her. "Most of the people who come here are still catching a little shut-eye. It won't wake up, really, till midnight..."
"Michael!" burst Sally. "How do you know all these things? I mean you're from the woolly west and all that, and yet sometimes you talk so—so like a man of the world."
His eyes darkened subtly. "Oh, I've been around."
"You're a man of mystery," cried Sally, widening her eyes. "That's what you are. I know you ran a ranch—dude ranch, wasn't it?—out in Montana. Your partner cheated you and you came down here with what was left... Father told me that."
"Oh, he did?" murmured Michael. "You know a lot, don't you?"
"Don't be stuffy," pouted the girl. "I like you. You're a grand person. Why won't you tell me all about yourself?"
"There's nothing to tell," persisted Michael. Red had crept up into his face.
"You're not just an ordinary—well, cowboy," said Sally thoughtfully.
"Thanks." The little laughter lines showed now, around the corners of his eyes.
A waiter hovered at Sally's elbow. A sleek, oily, foxy-faced waiter with a cast in one eye.
"Oh, I'll have a Martini, waiter," Sally said airily. "Bring some canapes with it. Caviar and anchovy paste and things like that. And have you got some of those little sausages?"
The waiter said yes, they had some of the little sausages.
"Then that's fine, Sally nodded. "Oh, Michael, I forgot—what are you going to have?"
"I'll have some ginger ale—plain," Michael said dryly.
"Oh, you big stick! You'll have a Martini with me and like it," pouted Sally, tossing her head and making her opaque brown eyes very large and winning.
"No, thanks."
"Spoil-sport!"
"I'm sorry," said Michael very quietly.
"Oh, now don't be a donkey. I was only teasing. You mustn't mind that. I tease everybody. Everybody knows that," cried Sally, warming to her subject. "I'm just a kid—I guess I'll never grow up."

More Power at your finger-tip than in all the world's horses

Unfailing Electric Service is the Result of Unified Management

If you had 10,000 electric light bulbs in your home or business, you could turn them all on at once. "Of course," you say.
But 30 years ago you couldn't.
If you wanted to build a factory here today to use heavy electrically-driven machinery, you wouldn't have to worry about power. There's more at your fingertip than you ever would need.
When manufacturers come here looking for factory sites, you can tell them this: "We can offer you unlimited power, at low cost. We are served by interconnected system power under unified management." No manufacturer can ask a better guarantee of efficient and limitless service than that.
In the past thirty years, unified management has developed the electric utility business from feeble beginnings to what it is today. Unified management was responsible for bringing together scattered and isolated plants into systems, for furnishing them with the money to make improvements, for advising them on better ways to serve you. To the holding company, unified management, should go the credit for today's unlimited power at low cost.
Yet the holding company, and in fact the whole electric utility industry, is in danger now. A bill known as the "Wheeler-Rayburn" bill, now in Congress, proposes to destroy the industry as you know it, and toss the remainder into the lap of political control. It would wipe the holding company out of existence, and strip your company of the present connections it has for giving you dependable service.
If government can do this to the utility business, it can do likewise to all business. Such an attitude retards Recovery. For Recovery, business must have confidence in government, instead of fear as to its future because of government.

Eastland County Federation
Recreation under the guidance

The formal business meeting was opened by Mrs. Louis Pitcock of Ranger, and annual reports of the officers presented. Twelve town clubs and 16 rural clubs are members of the organization including one club, DeLeon, from Comanche county.

The report of the president, which won for the Eastland County Federation at the recent sixth district convention at Alpine, reviewed the year's work.

Their main objective has been co-operation between rural and town clubs.

The sale of centennial seals was carried on as requested by the State Federation; inter-racial work with the negroes and Mexicans has been carried on in co-operation with adult schools; supplies have been furnished students; Americanization work among the Mexicans; traveling art exhibits in the rural schools, and circulating library work in the rural communities has been stressed.

Beautification of highways and American home projects has been included in the programs, and speakers have included prominent state officials and Miss Ewin Sue Goyne, field librarian, organized with the Eastland County Fair. Miss Ruth Ramey outlined the canny projects in the county, and girls club work.

The installation of the new officers was conducted by Mrs. William Reagan, and named Mrs. Andrew Mehaffey of Gorman, president; Mrs. H. G. Bailey of Cisco, vice president; Mrs. Ed Sutton of Gorman, secretary; Mrs. Louis Pitcock of Ranger, recording secretary; Mrs. E. C. Satterwhite of Eastland, treasurer, and Mrs. M. H. Hagaman of Ranger, parliamentarian.

secretary, Mrs. S. D. Phillips, taking the minutes.

Miss Virginia Gibson was introduced to the class, who pledged her support in securing a scholarship.

The lesson, "The Lord's Supper," from the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew was brought by Mrs. Ray Larner, their teacher, in her usual interesting manner.

She stated the theme of the lesson was a very sacred memorial and brought out the very gentle treatment that Jesus accorded to Judas.

There were two visitors, Miss Virginia Gibson, and Mrs. Muston of Durango, Colo., and 16 members present.

Bring a Picnic Lunch.
Miss Wallbraun of Cisco was introduced as a visitor.

Judge W. P. Leslie gave a lesson on the "Meaning of the Lord's Supper," taken from the twenty-sixth chapter of Matthew.

Those present, Mr. and Mrs. Ed P. Willman, Misses T. M. Collier, P. L. Crossley, C. M. Heald, W. E. Brashier, Guy Patterson, F. H. Lemmertz, Misses Opal Morris, and Wallbraun, Messrs. C. W. Price, T. J. Haley, and Judge W. P. Leslie.

Milwaukee Woman's Cake Won a Title

OREGON CITY, Ore.—Mrs. R. B. Eckenberger, Milwaukee, claimed a moral victory when the folks around here got to comparing antique pieces of wedding cakes.

She brought forth a piece of the cake that P. T. Barnum ordered for the wedding of Tom Thumb, the famous midget, to Lavinia Warren, 67 years ago. George Warren, Lavinia's brother, had given it to Mr. Eckenberger in 1880, when it was then 17 years old.

Tribute to the memory of the late Phoebe K. Warner of Claude, Texas, the originator of the County Federation movement in the world, was eloquently presented by Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins of Eastland and Mrs. M. H. Hagaman of Ranger.

A poem written by Mrs. Nora Heffley Mahon of Eastland, in memory of "The Little Brown Wren of Texas," was incorporated in the minutes of the meeting as a fitting memorial of the contribution Mrs. Warner made to life.

It was voted to add to the money awarded at Alpine convention and pay $10 on pledge to permanent headquarters.

Mrs. William Reagan, W. A. Martin, and M. H. Hagaman were appointed as a constitutional revision committee.

Twenty dollars was allowed towards the expenses of delegates from the rural clubs to the short course at A. & M.

Mrs. N. A. Brown of Cisco, Fred Drenthofer of Ranger, and Ellen Oldham of Gorman, were named as a committee to cooperate with the Eastland County Fair. Miss Ruth Ramey outlined the canny projects in the county, and girls club work.

PROTECT YOUR LIFE AND THE LIVES OF OTHERS
THERE are three questions you should ask yourself about the tires you

- 1 "Will the non-skid tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"
 - 2 "Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"
 - 3 "Without sacrificing these two important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"
- Answer No. 1—Harvey S. Firestone early realized the value of tire traction and safety and was the first to design an All Rubber Non-Skid Tire. Through the years Firestone has led the way in the design and development of tires with most effective non-skid treads.
- Firestone does not depend solely on traction and non-skid tests made by its own engineers—it employs a leading University to make impartial tests for non-skid efficiency of its tires, and their most recent report shows that Firestone High Speed Tires stop the car 15% quicker than the best of all popular makes of tires.
- Answer No. 2—Blowout protection must be built into a tire. Friction and heat within the tire is the greatest cause of blowouts. Firestone protects its tires from friction and heat by a patented process which soaks every cord and insulates every
