EXPERT SAYS BRUNO DID NOT WRITE NOTES

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Feb. 1. Letter-by-letter, a defense hand writing expert compared the Lindbergh ransom notes with the known hand-writing of Bruno Hauptmann and declared that the accused did not write them.

Disputing the testimony of eight government experts, J. M. Trendley of East St. Louis, Ill., gave it as his considered opinion from the witness stand that Hauptmann was guiltless of writing the messages.

His theory, he told the jury, was that the ransom notes were written in a disguised hand, undoubtedly by a person using his left Hauptmann, it was pointed out, is right handed.

Trendley established his theory through "negative" arguments through the letters the state's experts failed to include in their charts. He showed how entire lines of the ransom notes were omitted from the magnified writings displayed by the government and declared those lines contained characters which would prove to him Charles A. Last Only Until Tenth of February.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1. -Emergency Relief Administrator Hopkins warned today that the federal government must cease allotments after Feb. 10 to care for nation's unemployed unless congress appropriates more money. He said he was distributing his last $50,000,000, only one-third of the estimated amount needed this month on a "day-to-day" and 'week-to-week" basis. That sum must take care of the 20,000,000 estimated on relief rolls at the start of this month. The $50,000,000 will last only 10 more days and the relief administration, he said, cannot obligate itself after that period unless congress passes the relief bill. Within a few hours after Hopkins' warning the senate appropriations committee concluded hearings on the bill, carrying the $880,000,000, as well as $4,000,-000,000 for the new Public Works

Hope For Republicans In Future Conflict!

One of the most entertaining of indoor games for cold winter evenings is trying to figure out what is going to happen to the Republican party.

Is it dead, waiting only the services of coroner and mortician? Is it just sick, waiting for the services of a doctor? Or is it beginning a slow but sure recovery which will presently carrying it back to full health and national power?

Dr. Charles A. Beard, historian, suggests that one way to answer these questions is to look at history. In the current issue of Scribner's Magazine he takes such a look, and from it he concludes that the G. O. P. is a long way from dead, in spite of the merciless shellacking it has had to Twice before, he says, there has been a great upheaval of forgotten men at the polls. The first took place in 1800 and put Thomas Jefferson in the White House; ;the second occurred in 1928 and resulted in the election of Andrew Jackson.

Each time the party of wealth and power was snowed under and the "revolution" looked like a permanent thing. But each time war and the development of business enterprise put the rich and powerful back in the saddle.

The Jeffersonian revolution went along swimmingly until we got into the war of 1912. The war's end found American industry, stimulated by war expenditures, a giant in comparison with its previous status; it also found an immense public debt in the hands of bankers and business men.

So the forgotten man had to gather his forces for a new assault. This came in the election of Jackson; and this time the revolution looked even more like a solid and everlasting affair. But once again business enterprise went sons living together and for heads ahead at an unforeseen pace. And once again there came a war-the Civil War, this time-to upset the balance still pendent, defined by income tax

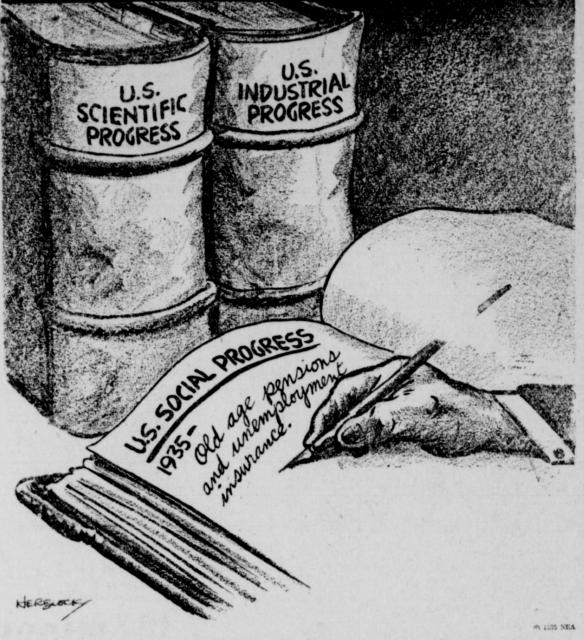

When the dust had cleared away, the elements Jackson had overthrown were firmly re-established.

Now we have the "Roosevelt revolution," with the Republican party taking an awful beating. Is the new state of affairs to be permanent?

Dr. Beard sees no reason for thinking so. The economic base has not shifted. The New Deal has not taken the instrumentalities of economic power from their former possessors. And dark on the horizon lies the shadow of a new possible war-a Pacific war, this time, dimly seen but threatening.

Studying all this in the light of history, Dr. Beard sees

WARDROBE

Mrs. W. B. Peeples, wardrobe demonstrator for the Morton Valwork with the cooperators in her club in studying line, color, construction and selection of garments needed to have a more harmonious and economical wardrobe. Along with these points, Mrs. Peeples will make a foundation pattern, an individually fitted pattern and make her garments using the same. No person is a perfect size and because of this the women are working on the pated. With the foundation pattern a person can take any commercial pattern and fit it to herself and have the perfect fitting garment.

The state planing board will be an "uncalaried lobby," the Texas legislature has been told frankly by advocates.

To a House committee it was explained this way: "Uncle Sam has a lot of money he wants to use putting people to work. In suggesting state planning boards, the national administration is saying: 'Here it is. Come and get it.' Washington is showing us how to get the most quickest. If the money is not used here, it will be used somewhere. Texas is going to help pay it back. It might as well get

Governor Allred is considering methods to cut the cost of the state's war on criminals as well as methods to make the war successful. He is much impressed with a suggestion from a clerk in the state comptroller's office. This After having been cast with a clerk points out that money can be nounced at Huntsville when the convict comes there to serve the penalty for another crime.

Under present law, to put a suspended sentence in effect, it is necessary to take the convict back to the county where he was tried. This adds cost. It also adds another chance to escape.

A House member recently asked postponement of action upon a bill untli he could read it and "vote intelligently." This brought a laugh. Most of the voting in the legislature is done without read-
