ROOSEVELT SCORED FOR TALK TO FARMERS

that reminds me...

Oh Lord—everybody has been praying for rains but it's time it all seemed to come at once. It's like the negro that was saying for something to eat—a "barrel" this and a barrel of that. When he asked for a barrel of apples, he caught himself right up and said, "Oh Lord, that's a barrel of apples for one time." So anyway, we certainly haven't got any gripe coming now, and within fifteen minutes it had rained 1.60 inches which was a whole lot of water. The result was that several folks were marooned for several hours on account of high water—in the instance of this columnist it was two and a half feet deep in the neighborhood and everything around the house and garage was gracefully floating away. Streams came down in torrents as a result of the sudden downpour. The sheets of rain came mixed with hail and lots of lightning and thunder added to the excitement. For two hours we were jammed on the front porch sinking every minute that the water would get higher and begin to float some of the furniture around the rooms. But thank goodness just about the time it looked that way the waters began to recede. Unfortunately one of my neighbors lost seventy-five chickens. Considerable damage was the result of the terrific rain.

And now that we did have so much rain, as an aftermath there will be lots of pools of water left standing, which means that the mosquitoes will get in their work and not taken care of at the outset city officials should take a look over the city and community and see that stagnant pools are taken care of along that line. Tin cans should be hauled away and rubbish in general burned. Mosquitoes are disease carriers and dangerous to health.

Citizens of North Texas were jubilant today as rains continued to fall for the third day. Heavy downpours as much as some cases as 2 inches, were reported. Other reports showed light rains and overcast skies. Thunderstorms, however, were limited to the northern half of the state.

Austin, San Antonio and Del Rio reported only traces of rain. The heaviest rainfall was at Fort Worth where a 50-mile gale was reported by the weather bureau today. Abilene reported 1.76 inches and a hard rain continued today. Amarillo and the Panhandle reported .18 of an inch and promise of additional showers.

MONEY SPEECH GAVE NATIONS AN OPENING

WASHINGTON, May 15.—The Morgenthau money speech gave foreign nations an opening to initiate international currency negotiations if they desire, but committed the United States to nothing. International significance of the speech must be judged in the light of President Roosevelt's first experience with world monetary discussions. The first home reaction to the Morgenthau speech was a resolution offered the senate by Senator Elmer Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, authorizing the President to call an international monetary conference. New dealers do not desire to take the initiative now. They learned about premature stabilization negotiations in the summer of 1933 when American delegates attending the London conference, to which the Hoover administration had committed the United States.

Cotton Farmers Must Decide Upon Future Policies

JACKSON, Miss., May 15.—Salvation of the cotton industry lies with cotton farmers who must decide if they want the government to continue its crop loans, E. F. Creekmore, general manager of the American Cotton Cooperative Association said today. Creekmore said he believed the question before the industry was whether the South wants to let the price of cotton drop to the present world price, where the export trade can be regained, or whether they want to reduce production and grow only for American consumption. These special representatives will report to the administrator and the county board the names of all cases found to be ineligible and will recommend the closing of these cases. The regular case work department will carry out the mechanics of closing the cases, and the county boards and administrators to support the case work department in its decision. Cases reported ineligible are to be dropped immediately. In those counties where no special representatives are assigned, the investigation will be carried and which should be closed. In such counties, the administrator and county board are instructed to close cases determined ineligible by the county social service staff in the same manner as in counties where special representatives are assigned. The state board of control believes a material reduction in case load throughout the state can and should be effected, and expects not only the administrators but also all county board members to support the social service division in their task of eliminating from relief rolls all cases wherein ineligibility is established.

AMARILLO TO ENTERTAIN THE WTCC IN 1936

PLAINVIEW, Texas, May 15.—The West Texas Chamber of Commerce today selected Amarillo as the 1936 convention city. Directors today elected Ray Nichols of Vernon as president, to succeed J. D. Martin, Farwell. Nichols was nominated and elected without opposition. C. M. Caldwell, Abilene, was elected first vice president; Van Zandt Jarvis, Fort Worth, second vice president; C. M. Stamford, treasurer, and D. A. Bandy, secretary. Nichols, in accepting the presidency, pledged his undivided attention to the position and stressed the necessity of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce maintaining leadership regardless of controversy. Emphasis should be given, he said, to development of the resources of West Texas.

Relief Clients to Be Re-examined Over Entire State

The Federal Emergency Relief Administration has ordered a re-examination of the entire case load in all states. This is to be accomplished in Texas under procedure and regulations which will shortly be announced and will be carried on under the immediate supervision of the social service division. The purpose of the re-examination is to determine validity of cases, in order that relief officers may assure the FERA they have been carrying out the purposes for which the relief administration was organized, namely to grant relief to persons in need. In many counties case loads apparently are excessive due possibly to misunderstanding of objectives, to pressure from persons wanting jobs but not needing relief, or from political and other interests, to inadequate or poorly equipped personnel, and to zealous civic and political interests fostering certain projects. It is expected the re-examination will eliminate from the relief rolls all families not legitimately entitled to relief. Special representatives of the social service division will be assigned to certain counties in which the load appears to be excessive. These special representatives go with full authority to study case records, determine methods of re-examination, to direct the county case work staff in the re-examination, and to recommend the closing of cases wherein ineligibility is discovered. These special representatives will report to the administrator and the county board the names of all cases found to be ineligible and will recommend the closing of these cases. The regular case work department will carry out the mechanics of closing the cases, and the county boards and administrators to support the case work department in its decision. Cases reported ineligible are to be dropped immediately. In those counties where no special representatives are assigned, the investigation will be carried and which should be closed. In such counties, the administrator and county board are instructed to close cases determined ineligible by the county social service staff in the same manner as in counties where special representatives are assigned.

Marriage of Relief Clients a Problem

SHERMAN, Tex.—Marion Wilson, county relief administrator, is faced with a new kind of relief problem. An increasing number of men in the county who are on relief rolls are getting married, Wilson said, and the situation is getting serious. "Men on relief rolls have no right to assume new responsibilities when they can't handle what they already have," Wilson said.

GARNER SAID TO BE FOR A BONUS VOTE

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Vice President John Garner was reported today to have suggested to certain senators it would be "good politics" to vote to override a presidential veto of the Patman inflationary bonus bill. The general Texan thus placed himself in open disagreement with Mr. Roosevelt over the question. It was learned that several senators who are undecided how to vote have been advised by Garner a ballot passed against the president would have no harmful effects. Garner, whose 32 years' experience have made him a good politician, declined to confirm or deny the reports. His political philosophy was represented in this manner: "A veto will please business interests fearful of the $2,000,000,000 currency expansion provision of the Patman measure. Passage over a veto will please the veterans and leave both groups friendly to the administration when elections are held."

Adult Education Program Employed Many Teachers

AUSTIN.—Emergency adult education in Texas gave employment to 162 teachers during the month of April, it was revealed by statistics compiled by the rural department of Texas Relief Commission. These teachers gave vocational instruction to 29,495 persons during the month, and 8,023 visits to sustenance plots or farms to give special agricultural instruction. "Emergency vocational education teachers working in connection with rural rehabilitation clients are employed to give instruction to subjects related directly to the problems and practices involved in the rural rehabilitation program," said C. W. Huser, superintendent of vocational training. "Vocational education teachers fall in three distinct categories, namely: agricultural teachers, homemaking teachers, and work center teachers. "Every vocational agriculture teachers' duties are to work on sustenance plots making surveys on what to plant, how much to plant, and to direct the planting and farming practices of our clients. They also work with the feeding of livestock care and management of poultry, hogs, and other farm animals. "Vocational homemaking teachers' duties are working in the home giving instruction in home planning, home sanitation, home beautification, food production, preparation and preservation. "Work center teachers' duties are to set up instruction in certain activities of the work center such as canning fruits and vegetables and meats; hide tanning; leather work; wood work; blacksmithing; mattress making; and sewing room activities."

FAIRFIELD, Ill., May 15.—The chain letter craze was blamed today for the suicide of Cecil Beadle, 39, father of five children, who shot and killed himself because he thought a "mob was going to get him for breaking the chain."

Asks 'Chain' Fans for Hay; Gets It

A chain letter horse is all Dr. H. E. Coakley of Denver needs to branch into a new sideline. He has the hay for the steed, as result of a joke he played after he opened a give-a-dime chain letter. Changing the wording to ask for a bale of hay, two pairs of old socks, and used razor blades, he mailed it on. Imagine his surprise when this express truck pulled up to his door and unloaded the first of 15,000 bales of hay he'll get if the chain promise holds goods.

2.50 Inches of Rain in Eastland In Past Two Days

Rain that had fallen in Eastland since Tuesday measured 2.50 inches, J. A. Beard, official weather observer, reported Wednesday. Measurement taken Tuesday showed 1.60 inches of rain. The rain brought reminiscences of another several years ago when the creeks ran out of their banks, as the precipitation Wednesday threatened. "The gully washer" downpouring rain caused water to overrun curbs onto sidewalks. The Leon river was watched anxiously Wednesday morning by residents whose homes are near that section.

The gunfight followed partial mobilization of southeast Kansas officers who sought Henderson and his confederates since Saturday when they robbed a store of $250 and a number of guns. ### CALLED 'BULLY' BY REPUBLICAN AFTER SPEECH

Senator Hastings Denunciation Came As Farmers Were Adjourning

WASHINGTON, May 15.—Senator Daniel Hastings, chairman of the republican campaign committee, asserted today President Roosevelt acted like a "small-town bully" in his address to farmers. Hastings was particularly incensed by his statement before 4,000 farmers yesterday that "a great many of the high and mighty have been lying about the new deal farm program." "The president's speech," said Hastings, "reminds me of the small-town bully who boldly calls his opponents foul names when he has his own crowd about him to protect him." The republican denunciation came as the farmers closed the business part of the meeting by adopting resolutions calling on congress to continue and strengthen the AAA. The resolution denounced "powerful groups attempting to destroy the AAA."

Reason Has Retained George V as King

Not the least instructive event of the year 1935 is the great jubilee celebration which the British people are holding on the 25th anniversary of King George's accession to the throne.

The affair is notable for its contrasts. When George V came to the throne he was just one among many great monarchs. There were Nicholas II in Russia, Wilhelm II in Germany and Francis Joseph in Austria-Hungary, for instance, all of them reigning over great empires and all of them, to all outward indications, occupying thrones that were quite as secure as his.

But today, as enormous crowds throng London's streets to cheer the British king, where are these others? Francis Joseph is dead, his empire is in fragments, and his dynasty is broken.

Wilhelm is in Holland, chopping wood, while a man who would not have been allowed in the palace at a Hohenzollern reception rules Germany with a tighter rein than Wilhelm ever dreamed of using.

And Nicholas lies underground somewhere in a Russian forest, one of the first victims of the catastrophe that swept his country.

The contrast between what happened to these three monarchs and what happened to George V of England is amazing, and it is not the result of mere chance. It is not even the result of the difference between winning and losing a great war.

The fundamental reason why 2,000,000 people stayed up all night in London to hail the opening of their king's jubilee, while the other three realms are broken and kingless, can be found in the different ways in which the ruling classes of these countries met change.

In Russia, in Germany, and in Austria-Hungary there was only a blind inflexibility. The hammering of war and social discontent could not bend the rulers of those lands; so, finally, it broke them completely. The ruling classes there could learn nothing, not even in the face of catastrophe, and so they were swept away.

In England, on the other hand, there was flexibility. The war and its aftermath brought far-reaching changes; instead of resisting them blindly, the nation's rulers—from the king on down to the industrial magnates and the politicians—had the sense to meet them halfway, adapt themselves to them, and help the nation follow a new course.

As a result, George V still has his throne, and his 25th anniversary finds a tremendous outpouring of national enthusiasm for his person and for the things which he represents.

At a time when change is upon the whole world, this study in contrasts is a useful and instructive thing.

Indulgence of Talent Is Highest Reward

In John T. Flynn's recent discussion of the plan to control the profits of munitions makers in war time, there was an extremely significant little story.

Mr. Flynn contrasted the war service, an dthe monetary rewards, of two Americans—Eugene G. Grace and Beno T. Wirth.

Mr. Grace, as head of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, made ships and steel for Uncle Sam's fighting forces. In the year 1918 he was paid a bonus of slightly more than $1,300,000.

Mr. Wirth was a metallurgist in the Philadelphia mint. The government needed to learn how to make a platinum gauze, essential in the manufacture of up-to-date shells, and this was a German secret which our munitions makers could not discover.

So the problem was handed to Mr. Wirth, and he proceeded to solve it—thereby rendering to both government and industry a service of incalculable value.

For this service he received a pay of $60 a week, without bonuses. Furthermore, he worked so hard that he undermined his health and died, and the government did not even pay a death benefit to his family.

The story points its own moral, as far as the rewards to which munitions makers are entitled are concerned. It points it so clearly that nothing further needs to be said.

But it also has a peace-time application. It is a simple and obvious refutation of one of the hoariest lies in human annals—the assertion that self-interest is the only thing that will make a talented man exercise his abilities to the fullest.

There are a good many things that can make a man give every ounce of his energy and ability to the job at hand, but the most compelling motive of all is one we usually forget about—the simple fact that he does it because he likes to.

To possess some special ability in any form of human activity is not merely to enjoy a privilege; it is to feel the urge of duty, also—the blind but inescapable duty to exercise that ability to its fullest.

There is a queer quirk in human nature which keeps a man from being contented unless he is kept busy at the kind of thing he can do best.

Unfortunate Result of the Flood of Chain Letters

ON TEXAS FARMS

Pecan budding is under way in Texas. Thousands of native pecans up and down the creeks and rivers are serving as kindly foster mothers to buds of highly improved varieties of this popular nut.

Whenever people start to do things they start to planning ways to do what they have on hand for the dual purpose of doing it better and doing it cheaper. Now comes a man named Joe Shin who lives in Collin county and buds pecan trees with the help of five-inch strips—one-fourth inch wide—cut from discarded inner tubes.

No wax is used with the rubber strips which are put on in an overlapping spiral tightly enough to exclude the air, and self sealing at the end of the strip is slipped under the last lap.

BEAUMONT—Lack of enough space for a garden failed to interfere with the gardening plans of Mrs. C. D. Williams, member of the Groves Home Demonstration Club in Jefferson county, according to Miss Jessie V. Murdock, home demonstration agent. Mrs.

Williams was so determined that she would have a plot of growing vegetables that she arranged to garden on shares with a neighbor for the use of the neighbor's land. She has already canned greens from her garden to supply her family's needs. Nineteen varieties of vegetables are growing in the garden.

J. F. Rosborough, extension horticulturist, points out that last year when small native pecans were selling at seven and eight cents a pound the improved nuts were being in 20 and 25 cents a pound.

BEAUMONT—Seven Bell county 4-H club girls and their sponsor each constructed hotbeds this spring to start slow maturing plants such as tomatoes, peppers, and cabbage for their spring gardens, according to Miss Lorena Dry, home demonstration agent.

Margaret Malacoot, 4-H club girl, reports making a hotbed six by six feet and covering it with a white duck top. The pit was dug the dimensions of the hotbed and 18 inches deep. Manure was thrown into the pit and tramped down well. Then about four inches of soil was placed over the manure. The cover was put on and the manure allowed to heat for a day or two before the seeds were sown.

He thinks the difference in price makes it worth the farmer's while to take time in May to bud that young striping pecan that came up "volunteer" out in the middle of the field.

He says that budding is no slight of hand affair of great skill. The first person known to have budded a pecan tree was a negro slave in Louisiana. All that is needed is care and patience.

JASPER—In a three month campaign ending March 30, Jasper county farmers immunized 4,000 pigs against hog cholera and checked in approximately 10 communities for six months, according to S. W. Monroe, county agricultural agent.

Seventeen practical farmers trained in the work participated in this campaign. According to reliable estimates of farmers, 3,500 pigs died with the disease before it was brought under control. The campaign was conducted in connection with the farm meat supply program, the purpose of which is to insure an adequate meat supply for every farm home.

SEGUIN—Forty-two terraces, which if strung out would measure more than 10 miles in length, have been constructed this spring on the farm of Walter Dreibrudt, Guadalupe county farmer, according to S. Whitsett, county agricultural agent. Dreibrudt started terracing three years ago and has utilized his spare time and the spare time of his men and teams in this construction. The terraces have been built in heavy black flint rock land with a grader, ditcher, fressno, and riding plow.

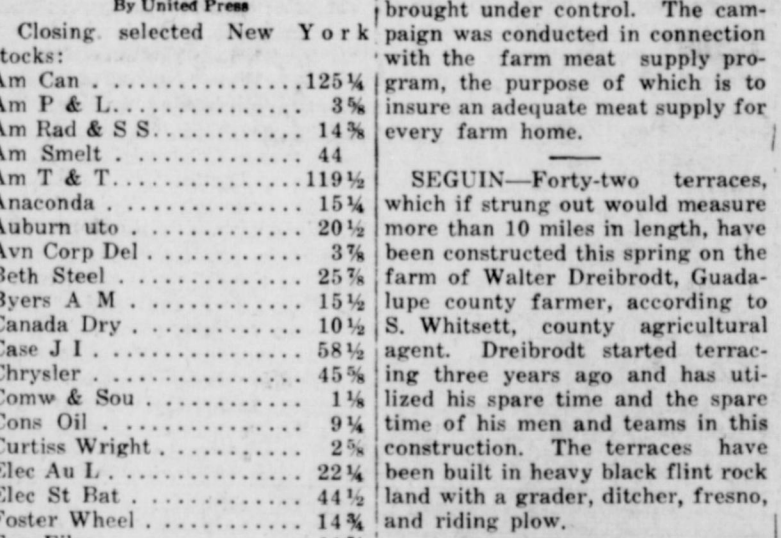

CROCKETT—Twenty Houston county farmers have blocked 1,700 acres of land west of Crockett in a co-operative war on gophers, according to C. E. Bowles, county agricultural agent. Gullies across fields, broken terraces, ruined orchards, and damaged pastures and crops are among the injuries caused by these gophers. More and more farms have been added to the block, as every farmer who cleans his own premises is anxious to have his neighbors join in the fight.

After the first poisoning, the block will be covered a second time and wherever a new mound is found, fresh poison bait will be put out.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Katharine Strykhurst, beautiful, disconcerted with the useless and of social activities that make her life. Her father and aristocratic mother, Bertine, refuse to let Katharine undertake any of these rides daily with Michael, a young westerner. Part of her riding club. Sally House, a coquette, also enrolls in the club for riding lessons. Lisa Parker, Katharine's friend, came from Europe where she had a love affair with a certain crude way. "Oh, Katharine's all right," Lisa Parker said comfortably, watching Zoe's brown curls bob against young Corliss' black-coated shoulder. "She is so serene. Nothing ever seems to trouble her." Bertine started to reply, but thought better of it. People misunderstand so, if she said a single word about Katharine! That was what it was to be a stepmother. Nobody gave you the least bit of credit. Katharine sneered John out on the terrace. "Noisy!" she observed, drooping against a pillar. "And hot?" "John, you see what I mean about father and Bertine? I haven't had a chance to talk to you all day." He nodded. "I see. They want to keep you wrapped in cotton wool. Your father doesn't know you've grown up." Her eyes glittered feverishly in the half light. "How—how can I escape from it?" He laughed, and something of the wholesome quality of his own good, gentle personality touched her with a sort of healing, releasing her from the mutinous tensions which had bound her all day. "Well, the Victorians used to marry to get out from under parental supervision. But that didn't work so well. Maybe it does nowadays. Women seem to rule the roost."

"Don't be vulgar." But she was laughing, too. "However," she pursued, with relish. "You don't just marry—like that, I mean. You've got to be—well, at least, think you're in love." "Plenty of boys have been loping around after you tonight," said Dr. Kaye quietly. In the light from the flare of his match, cupped against the breeze, she could see his lean, almost ascetic face. Thirty, John was; he was already a fine doctor and a man everyone respected. The woman who married him would be a lucky person, Katharine thought, innocently. "Oh, boys!" she rejoined on a note of contempt. "Don't like 'em, eh?" "Not—not much" she confessed. There was a wicker couch here, with deep square cushions. She sank into it and John Kaye sat down beside her. "There somebody else?" "Not—not really." She sighed. John would be a perfect person to confide in. She needed a confidante; it was hard, always keeping things to yourself. And there was no one she could talk to, really. Bertine didn't understand... oh, she meant to, but she never really heard what you said; or if she did you were certain she would use it as a lunch table topic next day. No, she wouldn't confide in Bertine. Besides, there was really nothing to tell about Michael Heathereoe. Katharine had had, on arriving at the club tonight, the strangest feeling that she might see him among the guests. Obviously that was absurd. "Nobody else," she said, quite firmly. Zoe came out with her Princeton boy, and Captain Byrne and his handsome blond fiancée joined them for a cigaret. Captain Altheus Byrne was an army man, home from Fort Sill on vacation. He and the plump, graceful widow from Innick Hills were to be married the following spring. Gracia Mc-

Irvine was 35, just four years younger than the erect bronzed soldier who was to be her third husband. Gracia had been twice "lawfully widowed," Zoe said gleefully. She did not like Gracia, who insisted on being the center of every group she joined. Gracia had a penetrating voice; she told endless stories of dramatic incidents of which she was the center. There was always an amused male or two to listen. She held them by sheer force of personality.

Katharine said to herself that she did not mind Gracia, and yet tonight when the gushing Mrs. McIlvaine took possession of Dr. Kaye she was conscious of a distinct sense of annoyance. John seemed to like it. Of course he had met her half a dozen times before, but that was before he had gone abroad to study. His two years in the European capitals had robbed him of much of his former diffidence. He had an easy manner, an air of authority which Gracia was quick to recognize.

"... now tell me all about this marvelous facial surgery," Katharine heard her coo. John's gentle, deliberate voice answered. "Dance?" Captain Byrne was at her elbow. "Love to." Well, if John Kaye "fell for" Gracia McIlvaine as easily as that, Katharine told herself later that night, she was afraid she wouldn't have much respect for him. Gracia had kept him at her side with quiet insistence all the remainder of the evening. It was Gracia's well-rounded but still charming figure, eased in ice-blue satin, that you saw beside Dr. Kaye when the orchestra played "The Continental." It was Gracia's well-massaged face that smiled coquettishly up at him during supper.

"Men are all fools," said Katharine to herself, as she undressed. Even Johnny, whom she had thought above such things. She fell asleep congratulating herself that she had not confided any of her innermost feelings to him. Moonlight streamed over the floor and lay in barred squares on the broad mahogany four-poster where she slept, uneasily turning in her dreams. A red-haired rider on a roan horse galloped through her dream; and there was a lean, asretid-looking man in evening clothes somewhere in it, too. Kay argued with him, she was angry, she wept. She woke to an uneasy feeling.

But over the breakfast table Johnny Kaye was his usual pleasant self. He sprang to pull out Katharine's chair for her. His dark blue suit, his striped shirt, his scrubbed-looking surgeon's hands were good solid facts in the foggy morning. An unearthly dripping mist brooded over the gardens. The girl felt heavy-eyed and listless.

"Sleep well?" "Not so very." As she unfolded her napkin he observed that she shadows under her eyes were deeper. "The foghorn blew all night long," Katharine contributed a roll with precision. "Bertine said to tell you she'd be back before lunch. She had to go to some Garden Club meeting. And your father's off for early golf."

She lifted heavy eyes. Nothing seemed to matter very much this morning. She had missed her hour for riding. But did she want to ride any more? Wasn't Michael Heathereoe becoming a far too important factor in her life? Wouldn't it, perhaps, be wise to make a clean cut of the matter? Oh, but it was her one great outlet; she needed it. It kept her going... "I thought perhaps you might come in and lunch with me," John Kaye was saying. "Oh, I'm so sorry. I'm afraid I didn't hear what you said before," she said in contrition. "I'm moving in Monday. Found a place," Dr. Kaye said. "It's furnished, so Bertine won't have any fun." His eyes twinkled behind the rimless glasses. "But I thought I'd sugaring her grapefruit. "You're going into town?" "On the 8:53, yes." He buttered like to see you again before I settle down to work in earnest. There won't be any more week-ends for me when I get under way." "I'd love to come for lunch," Katharine said. "Could I see the apartment, perhaps? That would be fun." It was arranged that she was to meet him at the Ritz at 1. Later they would go over to the building on the East River where Dr. Kaye was to live, in two rooms high above the turbid stream with its tugs and doughty steamers plying their way to New England. After John had left Katharine called the number of the riding club. "That you tips? It's Miss Strykhurst. Tell Michael I won't be riding today. I didn't want him to keep Fury for me..." unaccountably as she waited. The colored boy's voice came to her faintly over the phone. "That's all right, Mis' Strykhurst. Mis' Michael, he went off with Miss Moon on Fury 10-15 minutes ago." Katharine put the telephone in its cradle with hands that shook a little. She scarcely recognized the white face that stared back at her from the mirror. Sally Moon—on her own little horse. Sally there at her hour! Ellen went by, with a drift of dresses over her arm. "I pressed your pink shanting, Miss Katharine." "Thanks." But she didn't really hear it. She wasn't thinking of the frock she would wear to town to lunch with John Kaye. Her mind burned with the vision of two riders drifting along the green lanes together. Was this jealousy? Was she really in love with Michael Heathereoe? (To Be Continued)

You have to give Sally Rand credit. Other celebrities need an army of fans to make a living.

SHE CALLS IT A COOKS TOUR

NOBODY thought Katherine would make a very good wife. She seemed too frivolous. Always made a game out of everything. Hadn't a practical thought in her head—so it seemed.

Maybe that's why she DOES make Ed such a good wife. You still wouldn't think she was serious about a thing. Yet she must be. Because you've never seen a house kept better in your life. Or a budget balanced more neatly.

Most women come home from shopping all tired out. Not Katherine! She makes a grand game of it... calls it her weekly "Cook's Tour." She pores over her newspaper like a travel map... charts a course that takes her to bargain ports... and gets there without one wasted step.

How? She follows the advertisements... Watches them as closely as a sailor watches his compass. And she gets fun out of it all... But who wouldn't, with a happy home like hers and her knack for saving up money!

Special Display of 1935 Buicks Opens Here

Auto Show Reveals Improvements in New Cars

The 1935 automobile show, at least the Buick Motor Company's part of that brilliant display which each year presents the automobile industry's new models to the public, has opened here for the benefit of motor-minded residents of this city. Under auspices of the factory, in co-operation with the local Buick retail organization, a special exhibit of models representing the complete line of Buick motor cars for 1935 is on display in the Buick showrooms. Here will be seen what is new in the automobile industry for 1935. On view are four groups of cars covering one of the widest ranges of any manufacturer in the automobile business, with models in four distinct price groups from the low medium to the high medium or de luxe field.

The new cars, featuring advances in engineering, construction and details of comfort and performance, have been brought here at the request of the local Buick retailer who expressed the wish to stage a factory-sponsored showing of cars, such as were featured at the major automobile shows of the country, for the benefit of those who have not had an opportunity to see the show models.

Special arrangements have been made to have factory experts on hand who will discuss the new models and describe the changes that have been effected in Buick manufacture for 1935. According to these experts, more than 67 improvements and refinements have been made in the Buick engines and chassis alone.

In connection with the display, models of the new cars will be made available to residents of this city who wish to ride in them. Trained men will act as drivers or will turn the wheel over to those who wish to drive themselves. They likewise will explain such features as Knee-Action front wheels, the torque tube drive, the ride stabilizer, center-point steering and other details of engineering that provide the smooth Buick ride and easy control.

All four lines of Buick motor cars are represented in the display.
