that reminds me...

Talk about blue Mondays, that's nothing compared to blue Tuesdays after a two day holiday. Most folks are more tired than if they had been working. Good times in play always make folks sleepy and tired, but anyway lots of working people were glad of the opportunity to break the monotony of a daily grind at their work. Ranger was host to thousands at the Cisco-Ranger football game and incidentally Cisco went down in defeat, but they were a bunch of scrappers even though they did get beat. Next year may tell a different story. The events during the game were made more exciting by several fisticuffs in the crowd, which kept folks running from one end to the other in order to have a ringside seat of what it was all about. Reports are that nobody got hurt in the melee so that's that.

Support Urged By Theatre's Chief

By JUDGE O. C. FUNDERBURK
It is the hope of the Eastland Little Theatre organization that the people of the town and vicinity will look upon it as a worthy civic enterprise and lend it wholehearted support. Haven't we enough people who, for a change, love a good play now and then to get behind this move and assure it the necessary financial success?

Two hundred of the choicest seats at 50 cents each will constitute the patrons' section.

On behalf of the organization, I make this appeal for patrons of the Little Theatre. We want this section completely filled. Phone or send in your name to Mr. Ken B. Tanner, secretary, phone 173, and call for the number of tickets desired. You will be placed on the permanent roll of patrons and hereafter receive advance notice of plays, etc., with opportunity for making reservations for yourself and friends. It is hoped that patrons will make up parties and play host to a number of friends thereby enlisting their interest.

U. S. Aviation Scores Brilliant Triumph

The famous air race from England to Australia was won by two Englishmen, Scott and Black, in an English-made plane; but an examination of London newspapers demonstrates that the race was nevertheless a triumph for the American aircraft industry.

For if the Englishmen won, second and third places were taken by American ships—a Douglas airliner piloted by a Dutch crew, and a Boeing cruiser flown by Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn.

And the point that has impressed commentators in London is this: Whereas the winning British ship was a sleek, streamlined racing plane, constructed for speed and for speed alone, the Douglas and Boeing planes were regular transport ships, precisely like those now in service on American Commercial airlines.

The Douglas plane, as a matter of fact, carried nine persons on the long jaunt. If it had been stripped down to fighting trim, relieved of all unnecessary weight, and stocked with extra fuel instead of passengers, it might well have taken first place.

So the race has brought little pride to the British aviation industry.

The London Evening News says of the Douglas plane's performance:

"It gives irrefutable, tragic proof that we are miles behind other countries in commercial air transport. The race was an ordinary trip for the Douglas. The efficiency of American engines and aircraft is such that at no point did it have to stay long on the ground."

"Only one Royal Air Force fighting plane is as fast as this 'flying train.' Comparison with our civil aircraft is too degrading."

Nor is this the only testimonial to American planes. Dutch authorities were so pleased by the Douglas plane's performance that they promptly ordered ten more like it, for service on the 9000-mile route from Holland to the Dutch East Indies.

All this is a pretty clear indication that in the field of commercial aviation we have a perfect right to indulge in a good deal of old-fashioned American pride.

It also suggests that one way to regain our lost foreign trade may be to follow aviation's lead—make an article so much better than all competitors that customers can't resist it.

So many new regulations and new taxes on business are just putting new clogs on the wheels of trade, which are already so hampered with clogs that they can hardly hobble along.

Feed Man Closes Out Business After Many Years Service

By United Press ABILENE.—After 36 years in the feed and grain business here, J. L. Andrews, known as the "hot cutter," is closing out. Although Andrews is 78, it is not old age, but rather the machine age, that is forcing him to close his shop. "People don't buy much grain and feed any more," he explained. "They buy gasoline." He acquired the title of "hot cutter" during the panic of 1907 when he sold 20 cars of car corn. "That year I made more money

The Claw of the Forgotten Murder

BEGIN HERE TODAY When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for The Blade, is found dead in BLEEKER, publisher, criminologist, to solve the murder. Mordens and been investigating the affairs of FRANK B. CATHAY, wealthy and prominent. Following the arrest of an impostor claiming to be Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS, they are arrested. The day following Mordens' death, Griff dies of poisoning. Griff learns Mordens had visited the apartment of ALICE LOH-TON, pretty and unassuming. He confronts Alice with KENNETH BOONE, accuses the post of killing Mordens, and they are arrested. MRS. BLANCHIE MALONE, for whom MRS. CATHAY and ALICE RACINE, detective employed by her, have been searching, is located. Griff and Bleeker interview a conference between the three. Later they go to the hotel where Mary Briggs, now known as STELLA MCKEY, is staying. They had CHARLES MORDEN, Cathay's "swyer, talking to the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXV CHARLES FISHER twisted his lips in a sheepish smile. "Gentlemen," he said, "may I congratulate you upon your perspicacity. Griff met his gaze steadily. "I want to congratulate you," he said, "upon your quick presence of mind. I wasn't certain that you had seen us in the lobby when we entered the hotel."

"Will you please," said the young woman in tones of icy dignity, "explain to me the meaning of this—all three of you?" Fisher's smile faded from his face. He glanced significantly at the criminologist. "Gentlemen," he said, "I had, as you know, just entered the room when you knocked. I had not had an opportunity to state the purpose of my errand to Miss Mckley. I think that you will, perhaps, benefit far more if you let me ask the questions. After I have finished you are, of course, at liberty, to ask any questions that you wish." Griff nodded. "I'm not so certain," Bleeker said, "but what..." "Naturally," Griff broke in, "Mr. Fisher knows more about the matter than we do. He's in a position to ask more intelligent questions."

"Thank you," said Fisher with dignity. "I am still waiting," said the young woman. "To know what this is all about." Fisher faced her and stared accusingly into her alert black eyes. "When you gave the name of Mary Briggs to the police," he said, "and insisted that you were a hitch-hiker, you must have known that eventually you were going to be called upon to make a more complete explanation."

"You don't know whether you were guilty of anything or not," Fisher boomed. "You made yourself an accomplice. You were an accessory after the fact. You lied to the police when they were making an investigation. Therefore, in the eyes of the law you are equally guilty with the man whom you were assisting. You assisted him to escape, unscathed, from a police net. You doubtless realize now that this man was not Frank B. Cathay at all but was an impostor. I may further tell you that this man who is helplessly trapped before the examination even starts. "Just how we found out about you," he said, "doesn't matter. What we are primarily interested in is the reason for your falsehood to the police."

"Need you ask?" she inquired. "Naturally I didn't want to get mixed up in a crime. Ify rather suspected I was a female bandit who had been holding up service stations. After that they got the idea that my companion was on the dodge and had been driving a car while intoxicated. You can imagine how sweet a position I'd have been in to have had my picture on the front pages of the news papers as the woman who was held under suspicion of being the bobbed haired bandit who had been robbing service stations and who had been picked up while driving with a man who was intoxicated."

"The name then," he said, "that you gave the police was false?" "Of course it was false." Fisher suddenly grew accusing. He stood with his feet spread apart. His big frame seemed to crouch, as though ready to spring. His right arm was extended, flexed at the elbow. His right forefinger pointed accusingly at the girl and was held less than a foot from her face. "I'm going to give you one opportunity, and only one opportunity, to show your good faith in this matter. Do you know anything about prison, young woman?"

HER eyes lost their glittering assurance. She was no longer sure of herself. She spoke with a voice that quavered. "Why," she asked, "should I know about prison?" "Because," he said, "that is where you are going unless you are very, very careful. It happens, young woman, that I am an attorney, I am an attorney who is representing the estate of Frank B. Cathay. Frank B. Cathay is the man who was impersonated by this companion who was with you."

"Yes," she said in a weak voice. "I am going to give you one opportunity, and only one opportunity," Fisher boomed. "I want the truth and the whole truth. You gave the police a false name. You also gave the police a false story about being a hitch-hiker." She nodded mutely. "I want you," Fisher said, "to tell the whole story. I don't want you to spare yourself. I want the story from beginning to end." "I wasn't guilty of anything," she said. "I only..." "You don't know whether you were guilty of anything or not," Fisher boomed. "You made yourself an accomplice. You were an accessory after the fact. You lied to the police when they were making an investigation. Therefore, in the eyes of the law you are equally guilty with the man whom you were assisting. You assisted him to escape, unscathed, from a police net. You doubtless realize now that this man was not Frank B. Cathay at all but was an impostor. I may further tell you that this man cached a large check at the hotel where he was staying. The check was drawn upon the bank in River view where Mr. Cathay keeps his account. The check was signed, apparently, with the signature of Frank B. Cathay. It was a clever forgery, an excellent forgery—a forgery which had been long rehearsed.

"This impersonation was no casual matter, no idle vagary of a common crook. It was a thing which had long been planned in this man's mind, something that had been carefully thought out. We know of that check which was cashed. We do not know what else was done. There may have been other checks cashed. There may have been other frauds perpetrated. It is even possible that this man had on previous occasions, represented himself as being Frank B. Cathay and sowed the seeds of crime which have yet to make themselves manifest. Therefore, young woman, you have definitely placed yourself beyond the pale of the law."

FISHER glowered at her. "But," she said, "I was entirely innocent."

"You were not innocent," the lawyer interrupted. "You were technically guilty. You were both an accomplice and accessory after the fact. You assisted a felon to violate the law. Therefore, the law says you yourself are guilty."

"But I didn't know that about the law," she said. "Ignorance of the law excuses no one," Fisher told her. "Now, under those circumstances and with a complete knowledge of that which has happened, I am going to call upon you to make a complete and accurate statement of that which occurred. There can be no ignorance on your part of the law now. You understand what it is, do you not?" "Yes," she said. "You understand if you tell any lies now you are making yourself an accessory after the fact and that that is just as serious as though you had committed the crime yourself."

"Yes," she said, "if you say so." "I do say so," he said. "I am a lawyer and I know. Here, I will give you one of my cards." He pulled a card case from his pocket, fished out a card, whipped it about in a flourishing half circle and presented it to her, holding it in front of her face. "Take it," he said. His booming voice filled the room. He was not shouting. It was rather as though ordinary conversation coming in over a radio had been so amplified by a dynamic speaker that sound filled every nook and corner of the room. The girl took the card with a quivering hand. She stared at it steadily for several seconds. "What is it you want?" she asked. (To Be Continued)

Stella Mckley continues her story—and makes some revelations in the next installment.

HAS TREE AS MONUMENT

By United Press SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—There is a living monument to a bit of hallowed tradition of the War of 1776 growing here. It is a tree that has sprung from a shoot of the famous elm in Cambridge that formed a canopy over the head of George Washington when he took command of the Continental Army. U. S. Aviation Scores Brilliant Triumph

The famous air race from England to Australia was won by two Englishmen, Scott and Black, in an English-made plane; but an examination of London newspapers demonstrates that the race was nevertheless a triumph for the American aircraft industry.

For if the Englishmen won, second and third places were taken by American ships—a Douglas airliner piloted by a Dutch crew, and a Boeing cruiser flown by Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn.

And the point that has impressed commentators in London is this: Whereas the winning British ship was a sleek, streamlined racing plane, constructed for speed and for speed alone, the Douglas and Boeing planes were regular transport ships, precisely like those now in service on American Commercial airlines.

The Douglas plane, as a matter of fact, carried nine persons on the long jaunt. If it had been stripped down to fighting trim, relieved of all unnecessary weight, and stocked with extra fuel instead of passengers, it might well have taken first place.

So the race has brought little pride to the British aviation industry.

The London Evening News says of the Douglas plane's performance:

"It gives irrefutable, tragic proof that we are miles behind other countries in commercial air transport. The race was an ordinary trip for the Douglas. The efficiency of American engines and aircraft is such that at no point did it have to stay long on the ground.

"Only one Royal Air Force fighting plane is as fast as this 'flying train.' Comparison with our civil aircraft is too degrading."

Nor is this the only testimonial to American planes. Dutch authorities were so pleased by the Douglas plane's performance that they promptly ordered ten more like it, for service on the 9000-mile route from Holland to the Dutch East Indies.

All this is a pretty clear indication that in the field of commercial aviation we have a perfect right to indulge in a good deal of old-fashioned American pride.

It also suggests that one way to regain our lost foreign trade may be to follow aviation's lead—make an article so much better than all competitors that customers can't resist it.

So many new regulations and new taxes on business are just putting new clogs on the wheels of trade, which are already so hampered with clogs that they can hardly hobble along.

'Dusting the Covers of Texas History' for The Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

Fray Damina Manzanet, chaplain of Captain Alonso de Leon's group of explorers from Mexico paused in the midst of broken household furniture, dirty papers and rags, plundered homes and broken armor, to bow his head in prayer and commit to God the souls of the three dead people found lying in the debris. A sad sight greeted the Spaniards who had come from Soahula in March, 1689, to investigate rumors of French settlements somewhere on the coast of Texas. Near the Guadalupe the party had found a deserted village, with the bodies of the three people—one a woman—lying among the wreckage. They found broken chests, torn books, broken palisades, an old wooden fort almost demolished, and scattered furniture and furnishings.

July 24, 1684, the adventurous young Frenchman, LaSalle, had passed with his three shiploads of artisans, seamen, women and soldiers, through the narrow Matagorda peninsula, to land on the Bay. There, with exuberant spirits and glorious plans for the future, they established Fort Saint Louis, LaSalle and several others were to make trips overland to find the Mississippi River, then the entire land would be claimed for the king of France.

Three attempts were made by LaSalle to reach the great river. He never returned from the third trip, for one of his own men killed him. The few old men and women who were left at the fort soon died of starvation or illness. Rumors of the settlement reached the Spanish in Mexico, and Father Manzanet, anxious to begin missionary work, went with the soldiers to find the settlement, if there was one. The company crossed over the prairies of western Texas, past the roving herds of buffalo, pausing occasionally to rest beneath the shade of the mesquite trees, then going onward toward the gulf. They passed large rivers, naming them Nueces, Sarcos, Hondo, Medina, and Leon (San Antonio). When they reached Guadalupe April 14, a few scouts

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blosser

FAMOUS FOOTBALL FEATS!

COLUMBIA had pointed for the Cornell game all year in 1930, and when Ralph Hewitt stepped back 10 yards from the scrimmage line, with the ball at midfield, and booted a 60-yard drop kick that crossed between the goal posts, cohorts of the Lions were jubilant.

But not for long! Cornell came back with a terrific drive that soon pushed over seven points—and the poor Lion was due to take its annual sock on the chin.

Then occurred one of the most dramatic plays of the season. Hewitt, on his own 10-yard line, caught the Cornell kickoff. On the dead run he sidestepped and stiff-armed his way down the field 90 yards for the Columbia touchdown that won the game, 10-7.

GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

● "Cliff" Montgomery, football's famous hero who led the East to victory over the West last year in the sensational Rose Bowl game, is now starring with the Brooklyn Dodgers. Like all athletes, "Cliff" knows how important it is to keep his energy at its natural level. He says: "Football is tough—tense—tiring—enough to exhaust anybody's energy. After a game, I light up a Camel—get a swell 'lift'—and in a short time I feel 100% again. I like Camel's mellow taste...and am seldom without one. And I find that Camels don't interfere with healthy nerves."

 passed both Houses of the Legislature and will not go to the Governor's office for her approval.

The Bill as passed will not become effective until February 8, 1935, because it failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote in the Senate to put it into immediate effect. Under this law all interest and penalties that have accrued on all ad valorem and poll taxes which were delinquent on or before August 1, 1934, are released city and school district taxes, as well as county and State.

Such taxes may be paid after March 15, and before April 1, 1935 with an addition of two per cent penalty on said taxes, and may be paid during the month of April, 1935, with an addition of three per cent. If paid during the month of May, four per cent penalty is added, and if paid in June a penalty of five per cent. If such taxes are paid after June 30, 1935, eight per cent penalty is added thereto, together with interest on said taxes at the rate of six per cent per annum on and from July 1, 1935.

Under this Act is such delinquent taxes are not paid on or before March 15, 1935, the provisions of this Act shall not apply to cities, towns and independent school districts, unless and until the governing body thereof shall adopt a resolution, or ordinance adopting the provision of this Act.

The Act does not delay, or extend the time for payment or delinquent taxes, nor prevent suits for collection of same; but remits penalty and interest as above set out.
 The Act provides that no additional cost shall be charged against anyone who shall pay his taxes under the terms of this Act.

The Act further provides that any person shall have the right to pay any of such taxes for any one year, or for any number of years without at the same time paying other taxes that may be then delinquent.

Feed Man Closes Out Business After Many Years Service

By United Press
ABILENE.—After 36 years in the feed and grain business here, J. L. Andrews, known as the "hot cutter," is closing out.

Although Andrews is 78, it is not old age, but rather the ma-

"People don't buy much grain

 "They buy gasoline."
 He acquired the title of "hot

"That year I made more money

The Claw of the Forgotten Murder

By CARLETON KENDRAKE
 ©1934 NEA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 When CHARLES MORDEN, reporter for "The Blade," found dead DAN BLEEKER, publisher, employe SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder.
 Morden had been investigating the affairs of FRANK B. CATHAY, a wealthy and powerful man
 following the arrest of an impostor claiming to be Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS.

The day following Morden's death Cathay dies of poisoning.
 Griff leaves Morden had visited the apartment of ALICE MOR-TON, pretty and unemployed. He confronts Alice with KENNETH MOORE, accused of the murder of Morden, and they are arrested.
 MRS. BRYAN, the wife of the man whom MRS. CATHAY and MARI RAYNE, detective employed by her, have been searching is located. Griff and Bleeker interrupt a conference between the three.
 Later they go to the hotel where Mary Briggs, now known as Stella Mockley, is staying. They find CHARLES FISHER, Cathay's lawyer, talking to the girl.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXV
 CHARLES FISHER twisted his lips in a sheepish smile. "Gentlemen," he said, "may I congratulate you upon your perspicacity."
 Griff met his gaze steadily.

"I want to congratulate you," he said, "upon your quick presence of mind. I wasn't certain that you had seen us in the lobby when we entered the hotel."
 "Will you please," said the young woman in tones of icy dignity, "explain to me the meaning of this—all three of you?"

Fisher's smile faded from his face. He glanced significantly at the criminologist.

who is helplessly trapped before the examination even starts.

"Just how we found out about you," he said, "doesn't matter.
 What we are primarily interested in
 is the reason for your falsehood to the police."

"Need you ask?" she inquired.
 "Naturally I didn't want to get mixed up in a crime. They rather suspected I was a female bandit who had been holding up service stations. After that they got the idea that my companion was on the dodge and had been driving a car while intoxicated. You can imagine how sweet a position I'd have been in to have had my picture on the front pages of the newspapers as the woman who was held under suspicion of being the bobbed haired bandit who had been robbing service stations and who had been picked up while driving with a man who was intoxicated."

"The name then," he said, "that you gave the police was false?"
 "Of course it was false."
 Fisher suddenly grew accusing.
 He stood with his feet spread apart.
 His big frame seemed to crouch, as though ready to spring. His right arm was extended, flexed at the elbow. His right forefinger pointed accusingly at the girl and was held less than a foot from her face.

"I am going to give you one chance," he said, "and one chance only to show your good faith in this matter. Do you know anything about prison, young woman?"

The New WATERLESS WAY

While the New Utility Cooker brings to you the possibilities of enjoying old-fashioned meals in addition, it permits you to prepare foods by the newer methods of cooking without water.

Science has discovered that there is so much natural moisture in all meats, vegetables and fruits that it is entirely feasible to cook them with little or no water.

About the only reason why we have cooked with water was to avoid burning. Water distributes the heat evenly, conducting it away from the point nearest the fire.

However, after we have cooked our foods we have poured off the excess water and with it we have poured the bone-forming, teeth-building minerals; the iron, calcium and phosphorus that constitute the essential elements which the human system must have. With the new perfected Utility Cooker you can prepare foods deliciously tender and full of these health-building elements. The Utility Cooker is ideal for the housewife who wishes to practice this modern, more healthful and more economical way of cooking.

Bridge and "42" Tourney Pleasant Affair

The Ladies Auxiliary of Firemen's Association were hostesses to a delightful bridge and "42" tourney Friday night, entertaining in the big hallway of city hall, with many tables arranged for the two games, in the color motif of the evening, red and silver, with playing appointments in firemen's red helmets with silver ribbons.

Wall brackets the length of the hall held vases filled with a variety of garden flowers.

Favors for high score in bridge, an embroidered tea towel and an ash tray, were awarded Mrs. Ben E. Hamner and Charles Fields, and similar favors in "42" went to Mrs. Mack O'Neal and Frank Roberson.

Registration was presided over by Mrs. Aubrey Yeager, and guests were greeted at the door by the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. M. B. Griffin, and general chairman of entertainment, Mrs. Johnny Hart.
Refreshments were served of delicious cakes, coffee and home-candies.

subject, "Prayer for the Kingdom," and will be presented in a series of explanatory Bible questions, poems, and prayers with comments by the leader, Mrs. McGlamery.

Truth Seekers Class

Mrs. L. G. Rogers, president, opened the meeting of the Truth Seekers class of the Baptist church Sunday morning, with business session when arrangements were made for a class social Thursday evening at 7 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Rogers.

The lesson was brought by Mrs. Clyde L. Garrett on the current topic of the day in the Sunday schools, "Christian Citizens," in which the speaker stressed that in the life of a good citizen, we become servants one to the other and that serving our fellowman should be our highest aim.

That people who serve with a sincere purpose, and nations, are not quarrelsome, and do not become involved in trouble or wars.

Young Peoples Epworth League

The subject of the Young Peoples Epworth League meeting Sunday night in Methodist church, "Peace on the March," was presided over by the chairman, Clyde Chaney, who gave an interesting preface to the topic, "Is Peace Popular," handled by Miss Kathleen Cottingham.

The argument was that it was popular in the sense that no one wants war but for a variety of reasons war is held to be inevitable.

Ralph Mahon Jr. spoke on the economic imperialism, and wondered if loans, oil wells or manufactured articles had anything to do with preserving peace.

Parker Brown spoke of merchants of death, manufacturers and dealers in munitions and supplying war materials to foreign nations. The cause of war and the war system must be attacked, and the desire to fight wars must be turned to a desire to preserve peace were the concluding arguments.

"Whispering Bill," a poem, was read by Tom Harrison.

Impressive Service At Memorial Fountain

Promptly at the stroke of 11, the impressive memorial service for Eastland county soldiers who lost their lives in the World war, was held at the soldiers' memorial fountain, erected by the Civic league in their memory and placed on the southwest corner of the courthouse square.

At the rear of the fountain a flag standard floated gently in the breeze, and the base of the fountain, wreathed in the colors, encircled the names of those Eastland county soldiers who died before the armistice was signed, and whose names are chiseled in the granite.

The service was held for all soldiers who had gone over the Great Divide and was a solemn and impressive occasion.

Following the placing of an immense wreath, fastened to the fountain with the national colors, and adjusted by the memorial fountain committee for the league, Mrs. Bula B. Connelley and Mrs.

A Conspiracy Afoot?

Can it be that these four young diplomats are planning something to surprise the world? It must be so, because this is a scene from "British Agent," First National hit playing at the Lyric Wednesday, and the four young men are Cesar Romero, Leslie Howard, Phillip Reed, and Bill Gargan. Kay Francis is the lovely romantic interest.

Earl Conner Sr., prayer was offered by Judge J. E. Hickman and a short and touching talk closed with the hymn, "America," by the members of the Men's 9:49 Bible class, who attended the service in a body, and others, relatives of those who had passed on, many of whom were in their cars that lined that side of the square.

Taps were sounded by Clyde Chaney and Wesley Lane, as men stood with bare heads in the solemn silence.

The league is grateful to Mrs. T. M. Wilson, who, from her sick bed, contributed the lovely flowers that filled the wreath.

State Federation Convention Program
The annual convention of State Federation of Women's Clubs opened Monday morning at the permanent headquarters in Austin with the presidents conference due this afternoon, with discussion led by the district presidents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed F. Willman had as their guests this week-end Mr. Willman's sister, Miss Emma Willman of Austin, and friends, Misses Malissa Smith and Bessie Smith of Austin; Miss Agnes Boran, freshman of University of Texas and niece of Mrs. Willman.

Mrs. J. F. Boren of Carthage is spending several weeks with the Willmans.

POWERFUL DRAMA OF "BRITISH AGENT" AT THE LYRIC WEDNESDAY

"British Agent," the story of great love vying with almost fanatical patriotism, set in the mad, chaotic background of the Russian Revolution, opens at the Lyric Theatre Wednesday, with two brilliant screen stars, Leslie Howard and the beautiful Kay Francis, heading a large and talented cast.

Inspired by the best selling novel of the internationally famous author, R. H. Bruce Lockhart, the drama is the stark, realistic story of the writer's own experiences in Petrograd in the days when the streets ran red with blood.

Leslie Howard plays the part of the author himself while Kay Francis, a beautiful and aristocratic Russian lady dedicated to the Red cause, is his beloved.

Because the aims of the countries were the same, they plotted against each other, the woman going so far as to inform the dreaded Cheka, Russia's secret police of her lover's whereabouts so that they could assassinate him, yet her love made her go to him so that they might die in each other's arms.

The roles of unofficial observers for the American, the Italian and French governments, are played respectively by William Gargan, Cesar Romero and Phillip Reed. These four carried on their negotiations in secret, meeting in hidden attics, until one by one they were caught by the Cheka with the exception of the author.

Hundreds of players will be seen in the great mob scenes. Among those in more important roles are Irving Pichel, Walter Byron, Ivan Simpson, Halliwell Hobbes, Arthur Aylesworth and J. Carrol Nash. Michael Curtiz directed the picture from the screen play by Laird Doyle.
