Success Lies In Hopes That Are Fulfilled

Representative John S. McGroarty of California, preparing to do legislative battle for the Townsend old age pension plan, is warned by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that this plan is raising false hopes. To which he replies, somewhat caustically, that the whole New Deal program "has raised a hell of a lot of false hopes."

In this one sentence the gentleman seems to have put his finger on the distinguishing feature of the present era — that thing which makes it both a more encouraging and a more potentially dangerous time than any in recent years.

It is an era of hope; of high hopes, some of them, held by people in all classes of society. The course that our society will take in the next generation may easily depend very largely on the extent to which these hopes can be satisfied.

It is no disparagement of Mr. Hoover to say that the final year of his administration was a time of discouragement. That happened because of the inexorable march of events. Everything seemed to be sliding down hill.

We actually got so that we took a kind of morbid delight in pessimistic forecasts. No one dared look to the future with true confidence.

Then, for one reason or another, our mental attitude changed. The greatest gain made in the last two years has been based on that change. We became hopeful again.

We stopped expecting everything to go to pieces day after tomorrow, and started to comfort ourselves with fine dreams in the old American tradition — dreams about the great things that were about to be done in our country.

But if this has been a great gain, it has also carried with it the seeds of great risk. When many hopes are aroused, it is inevitable that some of them must be false ones. Not everything can be set right overnight.

Not all the schemes for self-betterment can be sound. Someone has to be disappointed.

And in this inevitable disillusionment lies danger. The greatest responsibility that lies upon the administration today is to see that there is as little disillusionment as possible; to fulfill, wholly or in part, as many of the new hopes as may be humanly attainable.

Which is just another way of saying that the government, now as never before, must be responsive to the desires of the people. Its success or failure will be judged, eventually, by the percentage of these hopes that it has been able to satisfy.

Advertising is profitable for a community or state as well as for an individual or private corporation.

Advertisement titled 'WHAT IS HOME WITHOUT A GARDEN?' featuring a map of the United States.

The map above, prepared by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, shows the eastern half of the U. S. divided into zones according to average date of the last killing frost in the spring.

Christmas is a festival of spring. It is celebrated when the sun starts north from the equator. Newspaper headlines often proclaim that the shortest day of the year is the beginning of winter, but gardeners know better.

Once the days begin to lengthen, signs of spring appear in the garden. Buds swell, bark changes color, mysterious growth processes unfold even in coldest weather.

With many hardy plants, the period of freezing is as necessary to their development, as the warmth which follows.

Spring is near at hand and it is time to make plans for sowing seeds just as soon as it is safe. How can the safe date be determined?

"Beating" the weather is a gamble which many a backyard tiller is willing to take on the chance that he may have his first crop of lettuce or radishes a few days before his neighbor. It is still a gamble, however, and the gardener who would rather be reasonably sure of his crop had best make some inquiries of his local weather station.

The date of the latest recorded killing frost in your neighborhood is an important factor. It will give you a basis for figuring just when you can take a gambling chance on any early garden with a good chance of winning. The latest killing frost on record is about a month later than the average date and so it is usually safe to plant the hardiest seeds a month ahead of it.

The period of time between the latest and the average killing frost date increases as we move away from the seashore. In New York there is a margin of 20 days in St. Louis the average date is 28 days earlier than the average freezing date. Cleveland has a day difference and Chicago about the same as Cleveland, but about 30 days is playing your odds safe. Plan to start your garden a month before the latest recorded killing frost.

There are many vegetables which frost will not injure, provided it is not freezing weather general all the root crops are freezing weather. In general the root crops are hardy and not mind frosts so long as they are not frozen; most of the crops for greens are in the same category. But only one crop, the mature seeds of which furnish delicious food, can be called hard and that is the pea, and only certain varieties of the pea.

So while it is freezing or snowing outside gather up weather data and figure the date for the earliest possible start this year. If a waste of seed to start too early and a waste of time to start too late. The frost records will give you a reliable basis of giving just the right time.

If the plants should be sown you are not out much but if they are not you are just that much ahead with the garden and odds are greatly in favor of escaping a killing frost.

If the Townsend plan was adopted, the fast life we're living today wouldn't be half fast now.

Double Burden On Taxpayers Is Subject of Study

By United Press
CHICAGO.—The most obvious form of double taxation—collection of revenue from the same source by two separate agencies, such as federal and state or two states—is but one of the methods which collectors "get the taxpayer coming and going."

There are four other tax collections, each more serious, according to James W. Martin, research director of the Interstate Commission on Conflicting Taxation.

The general definition of double taxation, Martin said, is a duplicate tax levy that discriminates between certain types of taxpayers, whether it is levied by one jurisdiction or more than one.

Thus, double taxation may arise in a single taxing district in the case of a general property tax which defines as taxable property both the stock of a corporation and the realty it owns.

Another taxation conflict reported by Martin is technical difficulty arising from indifference of one taxing jurisdiction to the levies of another. If a corporation does business in several states, it is likely to encounter several bases for computing capital gains or depreciation. Varying local interpretations of the same statutory provisions present another aspect to this difficulty.

On the other hand there are at least two constitutional provisions which deprive revenue collectors of tax funds, Martin said.

One prohibits state taxation of interstate commerce. If, for example, a shipment is made from Cincinnati, O., to Cleveland, O., freight tariff receipts of the railroad company are taxable. However, if the same shipment originates in Ludlow, Ky., a mile across the Ohio border, and travels exactly the same line, Ohio cannot levy the tax.

The second may be the outgrowth of competition between various commonwealths for economic advantage—as seen in the recent Florida constitutional provision exempting movie producers from income tax, Martin said.

Texas Goats Provide Material For New "Third Dimension" Art

Texas Angora goats supplied the materials with which Russell Patterson made this unique "third dimension" picture, "Beauty in Mohair." He used the new mohair velvet fabrics used on Fisher Bodies on the new General Motors cars—practically all of which comes from Texas Angora goats—for his artistic experiment, which is being displayed at the current automobile shows. Patterson is seen showing the picture to Miss Constance Carpenter, musical comedy dancer and his model for the picture.

Non-Freeze Lake Water Failed to Work In Radiator

By United Press
GENEVA, N. Y.—Farmer Dell ad a great idea.

The more he thought of the idea, the better it seemed—to Farmer Dell. He confided in no one. He wanted to test it first.

The farmer's inspiration came from a peculiarity of Seneca Lake, one of the state's most famous beauty spots.

The lake very seldom freezes, despite the fact that surrounding waters are sheets of ice. Only in the most severe cold spells will the lake develop more than a skin of ice. There are various scientific explanations, including the great depth of the lake and its uniform year-round temperature. That didn't interest Farmer Dell. All he cared about was that the lake didn't freeze.

Farmer Dell's idea, as he later admitted, was to fill the radiator of his automobile with Lake Seneca water, and save the cost of purchasing no-freezing agents.

To his surprise, the water would not freeze in Lake Seneca turned to ice so quickly during a zero cold wave that the radiator burst in several places.

Peanuts Are Jinx For Racing Ace

By United Press
WASHINGTON.—"Wild Bill" Cummings, national automobile racing champion, believes peanuts are his jinx.

No less an authority than Mrs. Cummings, the racer's wife, is responsible for this disclosure.

Mrs. Cummings said "Wild Bill" won't let her eat peanuts. She said that every time someone has eaten them around him before a race he has been jinxed.

Cummings is so superstitious about the nuts, his wife added, that she doesn't dare eat them even when she is watching him from the stands.

She revealed also that Bill isn't fond of meeting cross-eyed people before a race. And once when he lost his daughter's baby shoes he threatened to quit racing.

Mrs. Cummings said her husband drove well in traffic. She said "he doesn't drive fast, but he weaves around everything."

Cummings, who set a new record while winning the Indianapolis Speedway 500-mile race last year, also like airplanes and motorcycles.

Girl Soldier Is Buried By Lover

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The body of a girl soldier who apparently died at the side of her Union sweetheart has been uncovered on the battlefield of Shiloh by CWA workers.

While excavating old Indian mounds on the banks of the Tennessee river, CWA men accidentally drove their picks into a grave of nine unknown Union soldiers. Only skeletons and uniform buttons remained.

Eight of the Northerners were men. The other was a girl, about 17 or 18 years old.

Buttons of the infantryman's coat rested on the fleshless chest of the girl. The Confederate bullet which killed her was found inside the skeleton.

There was no clue to the identity of the men or the girl. They apparently had been found by Northern burial squads and dumped into an unmarked grave. That one of the nine was a girl evidently was not discovered.

The grave was so far from the center of fighting that it had been overlooked when Shiloh's national cemetery was established.

It was believed the girl was a native of Illinois, Indiana or Ohio. Bodies of soldiers of an Illinois regiment were found near the scene of the girl's death.

She was believed to have been in the group of frightened midwest recruits who marched up the Tennessee river from Pittsburg Landing to face their baptism of fire.

Her body now rests with her eight companions in a new grave in Shiloh cemetery. Above the grave is the inscription, "Nine Unknown Union Soldiers."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

GALE HENDERSON works in a silk mill. She and her brother, PHIL, in support their invalid father.

STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days.

That night Gale goes skating on the river. The ice breaks and she is rescued by BRIAN WEST.

BRIAN, whose father, now dead, built the mill, Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car but when he returns she is gone.

Meanwhile VICKY THATCHER, daughter of ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, hears that Brian has come home. Vicky changes her mind about taking a trip to Havana.

Next day at the mill Gale enters the women's cloakroom and hears a snatched cry. Gale asks "What's the matter?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

A GROUP had formed in the cloakroom near the corner window. There were half a dozen girls and women and in the center rocking with sobs head bent so that Gale could not see her face, was a woman's figure. The sobbing that had been muffled suddenly became high pitched, hysterical.

"What's the matter?" Gale asked again.

A woman she had seen often but whose name she did not know answered. "It's Mary Cassidy. They told her not to come back tomorrow. Poor thing—she's got two children and her husband gone. I don't know what's to become of her—"

Gale moved toward the group by the window. A plump girl with red hair had one arm around the sobbing woman. The red haired girl was speaking, low voiced and comforting.

"You can say what you want to, another of the group cut in, 'but I think it's a dirty shame! Mary's worked in this mill for four years. Just because old Thatcher sees a way to squeeze out more money for the company, make the rest of us work harder and pay us less, he's willing for her to starve! Her and her children. But what does Thatcher care? I think—"

"Mary isn't going to starve," Gale cut in. "Don't say such things. Wilma. Maybe it's only for a day or two—maybe Mary'll be back at work next week."

"That's what they told her," the red haired girl agreed. "They said when there's an opening they'll send her word."

"Oh, sure! Haven't they told plenty of others the same thing?" the girl called Wilma demanded. "How about Jeff Neils—and Sarah Boller—and Daisy Shultzman? They were going to take them back as soon as there was an opening, too, weren't they? That's what they always say. After that they forget about you. They make the rest of us work harder, speed up the machines and cut our pay—"

SILKEN SPINDLES

by Laura Lu Brookman © 1935 NEA SERVICE, INC.

Gale said, "Mary, you can't stay here like this—without heat or anything to eat and that baby sick."

"Sh!" an older woman said warningly. "Do you want everybody to hear you?"

"I don't care who hears me!" the other insisted, but her voice dropped.

"There's no use talking that way, Wilma Claridge," the red haired girl spoke up. "What are you trying to do—make Mary feel worse than she does?"

Gale Henderson had edged her way into the group. The woman who had been weeping hysterically was quieter now. Gale put a hand on the woman's arm. "Listen, Mary," she said, "you mustn't feel so dreadfully."

MARY CASSIDY raised her head, dabbed at her eyes. "It's the kids," she gulped. "It wouldn't be so bad if it was only me. How'm I going to get anything for the kids to eat if I can't work? Where'll they stay? Her eyes filled with tears again. "The rent's back two months now," she went on. "They'll put us out—"

Gale interrupted. "No," she said. "They won't put you out. Maybe next week you'll be back working again. If there's anything you want to do—come over to our house. Or no—I'll drop in to see you. Right after dinner, and remember it doesn't help to worry."

Others spoke up encouragingly, over-cheerfully. The false note of confidence in their voices was obvious, but Mary Cassidy dried her red-rimmed eyes. Sure, they told her, more than likely she'd be back at the mill in a few days. Not more than a week. In the meantime there were others similar to Gale's. No one had much to give;

like this—without heat or anything to eat and that baby sick."

The other woman turned. "Where else can I go?" she said. "What'll I do?"

"My brother's bringing some coal," Gale told her, "and there are potatoes and t-cad and canned tomatoes in that basket. But Mary, I think you should have a doctor. The way that baby coughs—"

Mary Cassidy folded the blanket closer about the child. "He's all right," she said. "I don't see anything wrong. He's just a little cold. He'll be all right in a few days. No, he couldn't come because I don't work at the mill no more."

There was a knock at the door and Gale opened it. A short stout woman in a rusty black coat stood on the threshold. She had tied a strip of red cloth about her head in place of a hat.

"How's the baby?" the woman asked.

"I don't think he's any better," Mrs. Nicoletti. Gale said, "I wish we could get a doctor. He's been coughing—"

The child's body made a spasmodic movement and the harsh wheezing cough broke out again. The woman who had just entered started forward. "Croup!" she said emphatically. "That's what it is. My Esther used to have it every winter."

SHE turned and saw the older child standing wide-eyed in the corner of the room.

"Ruthie," Mrs. Nicoletti went on, "run down to my house and tell Esther to give you the bottle of ipecac. She knows where it is. And hurry right back! Your brother's awful sick—"

The little girl said, "Yes'm," plucked up a coat and disappeared through the door.

"Have you got hot water?" Mrs. Nicoletti went on. She had taken her own coat off, was moving about energetically.

"I'll have in about a minute," Gale said. "I've just got the fire to burning."

Mrs. Nicoletti bent over the child in Mary Cassidy's arms. She pursed her lips together, shook her head sagely. "Croup!" she repeated. "That's what it is. Listen to him!"

The mother held the baby closer. Fear shone in her eyes, making the pupils tiny, dark points. "He's—he's had, ain't he?" Her voice was husky. She spoke as though the words were being torn from her. "We got to have a doctor. I got to get one somehow!"

Gale was working at the stove, trying to make the flames rise higher, turned. "I'll go," she said. "There are other doctors in town besides Doc Sommers. I'll find one—"

Mrs. Nicoletti shook her head. "No," she said. "It ain't a doctor we need; it's ipecac. I know what to do for croup—ipecac. I bring my Esther through it every winter for four years straight." She leaned toward the child. "Let me take him, Mary—"

"The water's boiling," Gale announced. "Good."

The outer door opened and Ruthie Cassidy reappeared. "Here it is," the little girl said eagerly, holding a bottle forward.

"That's it," Mrs. Nicoletti agreed. "Now then, we can get to work!"

SHUNS COMFORTS

By United Press
MILFORD, Ill.—Mrs. Martha Scott, 100-year-old resident of this town, shunning modern comforts in heating, maintains a tract of virgin timber to supply her home with fuel. Mrs. Scott recently celebrated her 100th birthday anniversary and she is unusually physically well despite her advanced age. She has lived in her present home since 1856. The tract of 10 acres of woods originally belonging to her father, is the only piece of virgin timber in this section of the state.

The dwarf bedding dahlias will be worth adding to your list of annuals. Sow them in the house in March for July bloom.

Mrs. Dan Childress Entertains Church Class
Mrs. Dan Childress put her home at the disposal of the ladies of the Church of Christ last Monday afternoon, who were rather daunted by the frightfully cold day, and the chilly look of out of doors.

The session was opened with hymns, and prayer by Mrs. Percy Harris.
Mrs. Otho Barton presented a most interesting study of Peter, and led the class in a round-table talk on incidents in the life of Peter.

The class decided their long debated course of study, and selected volume 3, of "Sound Doctrine."
The pastor, Rev. John G. Bills, dismissed the session with prayer.
A social half hour followed and hostess served a dainty refreshment of tea with open face sandwiches, to Mrs. Loreta Herring, W. A. Teasorth, John G. Bills, Percy Harris, Otho Barton, J. R. Crowley, B. B. Reagan, B. E. Robinson, Dan Childress, and Rev. John G. Bills.

Cold Weather Interferes With Church Societies
Due to the extreme cold of Monday, several church societies failed to meet. Those that did hold their sessions were the Church of Christ, Women's Missionary society of the Baptist church, and Women's Missionary society of the Methodist church.

Rummage Sale
Everybody who is interested in the work of the Methodist church and who wants to assist the Martha Dorcas class of the church to put on a rummage sale on Friday and Saturday all day in Eastland, in the May Harrison building, east side of square, is requested to bring their articles to one of the ladies mentioned or, if more convenient to mail it.
The sale days will be Feb. 1 and 2.

Every member of the class is asked to begin now soliciting for the sale, and to ask relatives and friends in nearby towns to get in touch with them and arouse their interest to the extent of sending anything available for the sale.

Women's Missionary Society Presents Fine Reader
Mrs. Frank Lovett, president, opened the business meeting of the W. M. S. of the Baptist church with prayer by Mrs. Hannah Lindsey, and a devotional that brought to mind the new things in spiritual achievement, for the members.

Mrs. L. J. Lambert closed the discussion with prayer. Mrs. Crossland interestingly described the mission field in Palestine, and told of how the Jews were returning in flocks.
The hymn, "Majestic Sweetness Sits Enthroned," was sung by the gathering with Mrs. Kinnaird at the piano, and closed with prayer by Mrs. Ray Larner.

Miss Roberta Kinnaird sang "Something for Thee," with Mrs. D. L. Kinnaird at the piano.
Mrs. Lovett then very graciously presented Mrs. Larner, chairman of the program, who in turn presented Mrs. J. M. Perkins, the reader.

Mrs. Perkins' work is intuitive, with the power of entering into a character's feeling, with the most earnest sympathy. Insensibly you feel it is the character itself speaking and not the woman reader.

Mrs. Perkins has reviewed this book, "Joseph and His Brothers," written by an orthodox Jew, Thomasmann, in Cisco before the City Federation, and before the Thursday Afternoon club in Eastland. The author of this work is considered the most eminent living novelist in this year.

After the review the program was closed with prayer offered by Mrs. D. J. Fiensy of the Christian church.

Entering guests were received by Mrs. Lovett, Mrs. Lambert and Mrs. Carl Springer. There was a large and appreciative attendance.

Lions Hear Jim Horton at Meet Held On Tuesday

Projects the chamber of commerce might profitably undertake the current year were discussed Tuesday by Jim Horton before the Eastland Lions club.

Horton made mention of the desirability of attracting tourists to travel the Broadway of America route through the county. Its importance, steps to undertake and the desirability were brought out by him.

J. O. Earnest was program chairman for the meet. John Burke will serve as program chairman for the next week's meet.

Horton was the only visitor. Nineteen Lions were present.

The Connellee Hotel, now under the personal direction of Mr. and Mrs. Ben S. Scott, is constantly gaining patronage. They have proven that they know the hotel business from A to Z. The Connellee is one of the best hotels in West Texas and with the interest that these popular hotel operators are taking to see that guests get every comfort and consideration as well as interest in the civic movement of the community there is no question but that in the near future Eastland will be the stopping place for the traveling public as well as many local people making their permanent home there. The coffee shop has undergone many changes and the meals are reasonable in price and the food and service is par-excellent.

MIRAGE FOOLED TRAVELER

Kidding Around for Treasure

The lonesome keys of Southern Florida are reputed to have been the last stronghold of buccanniers, so the "Pieces of Eight" Club has been started at Miami to provide a night-time rendezvous for would-be treasure hunters. Nancy Johnstone and a one-eyed member are shown in costume making merry at the pirate stockade. The idea seems to be to kid the ghost of Captain Kidd into thinking they are members of his crew.

Million Dollar Flower Exhibit

By United Press
OMAHA, Neb.—Total value of exhibits at the annual National Flower show to be held here March 30 to April 7, is expected to be in excess of $1,000,000 and plant exhibits alone probably will be valued at more than $10,000.

Fred L. Lainson, Council Bluffs, Ia., chairman of the florist growers' committee, already has received applications from 22 exhibitors in all parts of the country.

His is assured, he said, applications already received constitute only a small part of those that will be received.

"We are sure to get a large percentage of exhibitors who will enter at the last minute, because whether or not they enter depends upon the condition of their plants at the time the show opens," Lainson said.

In an address to heads of local committees working on the show, Dr. B. W. Murphy, St. Joseph, Mo., member of the executive committee, said the show was expected to compare favorably with the 1934 exhibit held at the Century of Progress.

Arrangements already have been made to install special heating apparatus in the Ak-Sar-Ben pavilion where the exhibits will be presented.

Such precautions are necessary to forestall damage to many rare plants which will be exhibited. The entrance committee has been assured of at least two orchid species, most of them seldom open to public view will be a part of the show.

Cold Kitten Turned On Furnace Heat

By United Press
TAPPENISH, Wash.—Behavior of George Allen's gas furnace puzzled him for many weeks. He would go to the basement to turn off the heat nightly before going to bed, then suddenly the furnace would be burning full blast.

Finally he found the reason. A kitten that slept in the basement would climb the wall to the furnace lever when the floor got cold, but the switch with its paws, and go to bed again.

Advertisements are a guide to value

Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it all means something to their trained eyes and fingers.

But no one person can be an expert on steel saws, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the materials that make up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch... knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or the use of shoddy materials.

This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The product that is advertised is worthy of your confidence.

Woman Has Daughter And Her Grandson Arrested for Trespass

By United Press
PAINESVILLE, O.—An 83-year-old grandmother, Mrs. Bridget Creedon, had her daughter and grandson arrested on a charge of trespass here.

"I'll say nothing against my daughter," she said in court, "but I want to be alone in my home." Judge Marvin H. Helter, after hearing testimony in the case, withheld judgment until later.

The court was told that the aged woman had requested her daughter, Mrs. Jane Gorman, and her grandson, 17, to leave her home.

SCHOOL ENROLLMENT UP

By United Press
HARRISBURG, Pa.—Pennsylvania's public school enrollment increased approximately one per cent in 1934 as compared with the previous year. The enrollment figures last year were 1,031,601. In 1933 they were 2,028,441.

Dr. Townsend inspired a change in that old song, "Everybody works at our house but my old man," to "Everybody lives at our house on my old man."

And doctors use a liquid laxative

There's a very good reason why doctors and hospitals have always used liquid laxatives! You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. It's the ideal family laxative because it's a family doctor's prescription, and perfectly safe and effective for family use.

If you are seeking something that will relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. Give regulated doses until Nature restores regularity.
