How to Have A Game Supply

Sportsmen of Texas, both those who wish to hunt and those who enjoy fishing, have come to the choice of avoiding a modest license fee and having no game, or of paying it and having splendid hunting and fishing.

The state's game and game fish resources no longer are adequate, except by carefully-planned protection and propagation. Limited efforts so far, with about one-eighth the money per capita spent in some states, deer and turkey hunting has been improved until steadily growing throngs of hunters again are getting ahead of the supply.

So the state game department has asked that a universal hunting license of $1.50 or $2 a year, and a universal fishing license of a modest sum be levied upon all adults who hunt or fish.

In this way, hatcheries, game preserves and sanctuaries and breeding grounds may be maintained, and a steady supply of game produced and the sparse regions stocked or re-stocked with appropriate game.

Without such license, existing hatcheries and breeding grounds cannot be kept up properly, and cannot serve existing or future needs.

Game conservation and development has many true friends in the legislature.

There have been arguments against requiring a license of those who hunt or fish as a harsh invasion of personal right and freedom. But the choice is one for the sportsmen—whether he shall have game or not. It is unquestionably true the great majority prefer to pay the small license fee—unimportant in comparison with his season's hunting or fishing expenses—greatly to develop the game supply. Many barren regions could be given all the advantages of the best sport of the finest hunting regions now. Not only in pleasure and recreation, but in an economic sense, such resources are immensely valuable.

The licensing bills now before the legislature call for vigorous efforts of all advocates of more and better resources in Texas.

The Chambers of Commerce of every city are entitled to the cooperation and support of not only every business man, but of other citizens of their community in every walk of life, because everything which is done to aid the growth of the community reflects itself in improved conditions of that community.

This generation seems to be able to do little in advancing the cause of peace, but the youngster now growing up can do a lot, and the least we can do is to see to it that their feet are planted firmly on the right path.

THAT BUBBLE DANCE AGAIN

'Dusting the Covers of Texas History' for The Texas Centennial Celebrations of 1936

The "Three Hundred" in Austin's Colony were afluster with excitement. There was to be a wedding! Jesse Cartwright's daughter was to be married that evening to Nicholas McNutt, son of the Widow McNutt, who was one of the first arrivals in Texas. The alcalde, Thomas Duke, recently elected over Ira Ingram by ten votes, was to preside at the ceremony, since there was no priest in the neighborhood. Cartwright was a member of that first town government, the ayuntamiento, in which Duke had been elected, and government established from the Lavaca to the watershed between the Trinity and San Jacinto and from the sea to the old San Antonio Road.

the bride and groom were required to sign in order that a priest might make their marriage more legal.

Jesse Thompson's negro fiddler, Mose, brought his fiddlers for the dancing that came after the supper. Canobottom chairs were pushed back against the wall, and the young folks danced for hours, "shuffling," "double shuffling," "cutting the pigeon's wing," and "cakewalking." At the end of each set, boys with shoes on exchanged places with boys with moccasins, letting the unfortunate ones wear the shoes in order that they might enjoy the evening. By morning there was hardly a splinter left in the floor. Long before the dancing ended, an iron hook and pin had been added to the "orchestra" for even Mose's fiddling could not be heard above the din of scraping and beating feet. Life was not all dullness in those early days. It was remarkably pleasant for one resident, who remarked that there were "no mosquitoes or horseflies of any consequence."

More people from the United States were coming into the colonies. It was being rumored by some that some day not far off Texas might be a sister State. Stephen F. Austin, however, was still holding his people in strict observance of their motto: "Fidelity and gratitude to Mexico... true and faithful to her interests..."

Negro Gets a Kick Out of Being In Court On Trial

HOUSTON, Tex.—Joseph Phillips, Negro, has been hailed into court so many times that he enjoys court procedure. He was charged with snatching the purse containing $50 and pistol from Mary Sue Lewis, New woman. Assistant District Attorney Joe Maniscalco finished questioning and asked Phillips he had any questions to ask. The Negro said, "Yas, suh!" then began firing queries. Mary Lue, interspersed with "A it a fact?" "Tell de co't!" "Ans ma greshun!" Mary Lue was in a tight spot when Justice J. M. Ray held Phillips and ordered him hail the grand jury.

Under The Dome At Austin

AUSTIN.—Robert A. Lukor, Comanche county farmer, is the only member of a House committee of 21 that will pass upon revision of criminal court procedure.

"Uncle Bob," as he is known to his colleagues, is no novice about law matters though he is not an attorney. He has been county judge and studied law without seeking admittance to the bar.

"Dumb judges" and over-eager prosecutors are blamed by members of the committee for most of the case reversals. One member said that as long as he is in the district, he could get cases of clients reversed.

It would not be fair to name him for the judges might "soak" him when he goes back home to practice. Some district attorneys were blamed for being more interested in convictions than in convictions that will stand up.

Race track fans and professional gamblers do not plan to give up the parimutuels without a stiff fight. Threats to repeal the amended racing law have been numerous and a repeal bill has been offered. J. E. McDonald, state agricultural commissioner, and ex-officio member of the racing commission, expects racing with track betting to be continued.

There is a real demand among farmers, he said, for the breeding stock which the state is buying with its share of racing profits.

Former Lieut. Gov. Edgar E. Witt of Waco will steer the legislative course of Texas Centennial plans. He was selected unanimously by the Centennial Commission to take the wheel.

They hope he will successfully get by some of the obstacles encountered at previous sessions. "I feel that this is a cause in which I can act without being subjected to criticism because of my recent connection with the legislature," Witt said.

"Pay-off men" are around the legislature. They work openly. They hand out crisp bills to members of the legislature without a tremor. They are not bribe takers. They are men willing to cash the state warrants which legislators and legislative employees receive for their services. The pay-off men exact a small discount.

If the warrants are held by the employees and legislators they may not be able to cash them at the treasury for several months. So big has the business grown that an office has been set up convenient to the capital.

Wives of House members recently took possession of the hall of the House of Representatives and held a session of their own. They organized the Legislature's Ladies club. It has 40 members. They will arrange social affairs to while away the time while husbands legislate. Mrs. Hugh Jones of Center is president; Mrs. Albert Walker of Vernon, vice president; Mrs. Otis Dunagan of Big Sandy, secretary; Mrs. Franklin Spears, San Antonio, treasurer; and Mrs. H. I. McKee, Port Arthur, reporter.

Co-operation with the recovery plans of the national administration has been the call of legislators. Now they are having a taste of the New Deal that comes home. They have to pay for their photographs to go in the official group of House members to be hung on the walls of House and Senate. In past years photographers have furnished the pictures gladly. They got a profit from reorders for extra pictures. The national photographers' code prohibits it this year.

Little Carrin Mauritz, age 3, will have her picture among those of the Representatives. She has been designated queen of mascots for the House. She is the daughter of Rep. Fred Mauritz of Canada.

"Will Rogers" now is a permanent guest at the governor's mansion. "Will" is a dog. He was presented to Rogers here by boy admirers. Rogers, flying to California, could not take the dog along and transferred title and care of the dog to "Jimmie, Jr." son of Gov. Allred.

Rep. Franklin Spears of San Antonio is a rapid and avid reader. He has read every one of 264 bills offered in the House of Representatives at this session of the state legislature.

How Texas Cities Got Their Names

A camp of Texas Rangers, located about two miles from the present townsite gave the town of Ranger its name. When the railroad was built through about 1875, the tent city moved to its present location. Lumber and building materials were sent over the railroad, and soon the first buildings were erected. The town remained unincorporated, however, for many years. In 1917 the first oil well in the district was brought in and the town experienced a sudden growth. A charter was granted the town in 1919 and since then Ranger has become a thriving city.

BEGIN HERE TODAY GALE HENDERSON, pretty, 23, works in a silk mill. She and her brother, PHIL, 19, support their invalid father. STEVE MEYERS, who also works in the mill, asks Gale to marry him. She promises to give him an answer in a few days. That night Gale goes skating on the river. The ice breaks and she is rescued by BRIAN WESTMORE, whose father, now dead, built the mill. Brian asks Gale to wait while he gets his car when he returns, she is gone. Brian arrived home only that day, after spending two years in Paris, studying art. Convinced he can never be an artist, he has come home to work in the mill. Brian has been assured by ROBERT THATCHER, general manager of the mill, that mill employees are well paid. The exact opposite is true but Thatcher schemes to keep Brian from discovering this. On a tour of the mill Brian sees Gale and recognizes her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER X BRIAN WESTMORE sat before the shining new desk with its fresh green blotter, its calendar pad with a place for memoranda, the chunky, flat rectangle in which pens stood poised. He touched the mimeographed sheets before him, moved them with restless fingers. There was everything on that desk, everything in the pleasant, sunlit office that the well-appointed office should boast. A cradle telephone stood conveniently at Brian's left; a copper ash tray on the right.

Over against the wall stood a filing cabinet—with barren files. Brian knew because he had examined them. There were two chairs in the room beside the one he was sitting in, both pushed stiffly against the wall. There was a large, framed photograph of the silk mill on the wall which Brian was facing and a map of the United States directly opposite.

In the top desk drawer on the right was a supply of fresh stationery bearing the mill letterhead. There were pencils there, too freshly sharpened. And the telephone did not ring. No one knocked on the door. There was no one to sit in the chairs. Even the memorandum pad was completely blank.

Brian pushed the mimeographed pages from him. He stood up and walked to one of the two windows, stared out at the broad, brownish space between the buildings and the high wall surrounding the mill property. A truck was moving along the paved road beyond. A small truck. It might belong to a grocer or a dry cleaning place, or even a florist. Was there a florist in the town? Yes, of course—

Brian turned his back on the truck and forgot it. He stared at the photograph of the mill and saw instead, a girl with gray eyes and dark, wide-curving brows. "She looked pretty," he thought, "even in that blue apron-thing."

Not quite as pretty as she had the other night, standing in the sunlight, with the wind blowing her hair where it had escaped from her cap, and the blue putting color into her cheeks. And yet she was the same girl! Oh—no doubt of it! He'd remembered her the minute he

Brian hadn't been sure whether or not she'd recognized him, because she'd looked just as quickly at him. Presently she was as much surprised, seeing him, as he had been to see her, there in the silk mill. "I wonder," he asked himself for the dozenth time, "what her name is?"

THERE were ways to find out, of course. There must be. Why couldn't he just go up to that big fellow in the room where she worked and say, "That girl there—yes, the second one from the aisle. What's her name?"

That would be the simple, direct way, but he couldn't do it. He couldn't because he was Brian Westmore, whose father had built the mill, who would one day own it, and she was a mill girl.

He could scarcely believe it, even yet. There were dozens of moderately well-to-do families in the town. They lived in attractive homes out on Wells Avenue or Livingston Street. He had supposed the girl skating on the river that night was one of them. Sooner or later, he'd been sure, he'd run into her at the Country Club or on a downtown street, or out with some crowd. He hadn't dreamed he'd find her here—in the mill.

Was that why she'd run away the other night—before he got back with the car? Brian wondered about that. And again he wondered what her name was—this girl with the gray eyes and dark brows and the head set so proudly on her shoulders. She'd been plucky. Kept her head and her nerve and he'd never been able to keep her from going under the ice. Yes, she'd been game.

She was out there now, in that huge, gray room with the roaring, groaning machines and the whirling spindles and the girls whose arms moved like machines, too—up and down, up and down. Brian had seen her, bending forward, doing hockey, although there is no inter-scholastic competition. A six-hole golf course, archery range, and fine clay tennis courts complete the outdoor sports set-up.

Report Is Denied Courthouse Sinking HOUSTON—A report which has persisted for 20 years that the Harris county courthouse is sinking into the ground has been taken up by Building Superintendent John Schellang. He said the building had settled evenly three inches into the ground the past two years, and blamed water seepage. Schellang's report was discredited by County Auditor H. L. Washburn. "The courthouse has been sinking, according to rumors, for 20 years, but it is not sunk yet," he said.

guess, on that long hill this side of Pikeville. There's a turn at the bottom and—well, instead of turning I hit a tree. "Are you hurt?" "No!" she said. "But there's something wrong with the car. They're working on it here at the garage. Some people came along and towed me this far. It's going to take hours and hours before the car's ready—maybe not tonight. What I want to know, Brian, is can you come out and get me?" "Of course." "Angel! But don't say anything to Father about it. He'd be terribly unreasonable. How soon can you get here?" Brian looked at his watch. "I'm a working man now," he reminded her. "It's a little after 4 o'clock—"

"Now don't tell me you're doing anything so important you can't get away! This is a terrible place—cold and dirty and dismal. Please come right away, Brian!" He looked at the bare desk before him. "I guess I can leave," he said hesitantly. "Be right out." It took almost an hour to find the garage on the Surrey Road. Vicky, wrapped in her brown fur coat, a green hat slanting over one eye, was sitting on a high bench, swinging her feet, when Brian strode into the place.

SHE jumped down, smiling. "My S—!" she said. "What would I ever do without you? They're sending the car in tomorrow. It won't be ready tonight. And Brian, I'm simply starved!" "Well, then, I guess you'd better have something to eat, hadn't you? Where'll we go?" "There's a place up the road," she told him. "It's just a barbecue. And there's that nice little place near Millerville—"

"The nice little place near Millerville wins," Brian announced. They drove to their roadside restaurant. Vicky was in gay spirits—an excellent antidote for the long, uneventful afternoon Brian had spent. The restaurant was warm, pleasantly furnished and the food was well-cooked.

They lingered over coffee and cigars. Brian talked about Paris, told amusing anecdotes. Vicky was an appreciative audience. At length she said, "This has been fun, hasn't it? But I suppose we'll have to go—"

It was dark as they drove back to Westmore. Lights shone here and there in farm house windows. Ahead the roadway stretched like an endless ribbon, straight, unswerving. Brian pressed on the gas and the noise of the wind, whipping against the coupe, grew louder. Vicky said, "I'm glad I didn't go to Havana."

"So am I." The car rose to an elevation and below them the lights of the town spread out. Now they were near the mill village, which the main thoroughfare cut neatly in two. A traffic light flashed red and Brian halted the car just in time. There was a group of men gathered together on the street corner. Loud voices were raised. Angry voices. Someone pushed forward and the crowd swerved. Brian leaned over the wheel, trying to see what was happening.

There was a shout and two men went sprawling into the street. (To Be Continued)

Co-Eds Are Shapely Because of Their Athletic Activities

AUSTIN, Tex.—Shapely University of Texas co-eds get that way through sports activities, according to Miss Anna Hiss, director of physical training for 1,200 of them. In a $450,000 gymnasium that combines advantages of a country estate and a debutante's boudoir, girls take their exercise. The structure really is three gymnasiums—containing all equipment from punching bag to swimming pool—but with a definite feminine touch.

How important its purpose is, few men ever discover. But from a careful array of statistics Miss Hiss can tell you that of 600 freshmen girls accepted last fall only four were physically perfect. The rest had faulty feet, posture or general health. The most general was protruding abdomens. In three years, Miss Hiss says, these girls—or most of them—will have the physical training classes, in most of these faults corrected.

When the newcomer enters a class she undergoes complete examination, including a silhouette portrait to find defects in posture. After two months of learning how to stand correctly, the students go to classes in swimming, tennis, deck tennis, field hockey, ping pong, archery, basketball, baseball, golf, horseback riding or dancing. Field hockey has 600 enthusiasts—enthusiasts although it is a new sport. Most of 21 colleges in the Texas Athletic Federation of College Women now offer classes in

Ladies Auxiliary

Sponsoring Dinner Series

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Firemen's Association are sponsoring a series of evening dinners, at the homes of members, when different groups are entertained by a different hostess each time. Of the twenty arranged for, two dinners have been given, and the third will be at home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Webb tomorrow night at 7 o'clock.

The midweek affair, hosted by Mrs. Aubrey Yeager for the Auxiliary, was a pretty event with green crystal table service and damask surface centered in a bowl of growing fruits, flanked with green tapers in crystal sticks.

The menu of delicious roast with brown gravy, creamed potatoes, turnips, beets, a French broiled steak, had hot waffles, hot rolls, baked apples and coffee.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Steele Hill; Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sneed, host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Yeager.

Mr. and Mrs. Coates arrange these dinners and Mr. Coates gives an interesting lecture on food values, and new ways of cooking.

The second of these dinners was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Griffin, arranged for two tables seating four each.

The red and white color motif was carried out in lovely linen covers and red bud vases, filled with white blossoms.

The menu of beef roast, gravy, carrots and potatoes, buttered beets, hot rolls, baked apple, and hot cakes, with coffee, was followed by an informal evening.

Those present, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Noble Harkrider, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Crossley, and Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Griffin.

The dinners are given for the benefit of the work of the Auxiliary and Firemen's Association.

How's Your Stomach?

IF you're troubled with stomach distress, gas, heartburn, why not try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery? Mr. J. L. Morris of 521 Rose St., Waco, Texas, said: "I couldn't do a tap of work for nearly two years on account of my digestive organs. I had no strength and my stomach seemed to be completely upset. I had heartburn badly at times, too, but I felt better after I had used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery only a short while, so I continued to use it and was soon able to resume my work. I have not had any stomach trouble since that was some years ago. All druggists sell Dr. Pierce's Clinic, Buffalo, N. Y., for free medical advice."

THIS AREA SHOWS WHITE SPOT ON BUSINESS MAP

This map represents business conditions in every state of the Union as shown in February, 1935, issue of "Nation's Business," official publication of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

December, stimulated by heavy holiday trade, growing steel production, active coal output, large automobile orders and active business in other lines "stepped out" with confidence unequalled since late spring. Textile manufacturing was active after the cotton mill strike ended. Business failures and liabilities were the smallest in 14 years.

The year 1934 was one of extremes. Drought reduced most crops to 40 years ago size. Commodity prices rose to a four-year peak in Dun's and Bradstreet's indexes. Farm income rose a billion dollars with predictions of a like rise in 1935.

The railroads gained in gross though not in net earnings. Passenger earnings made the first gain in a decade. Export trade expanded, mainly in manufactured goods. Steel production exceeded recent years after a hesitating start. Cigarette output reached a new high. Stock market sales reached the largest, in a decade. Stock prices were irregular, utilities going lower and high grade bonds were at long time peak. Savings bank deposits grew. New life insurance and building increased. Idle ship tonnage declined. Additions to steel plants were announced. Department store and chain and mail order trade increased throughout the year.

The Map

Further improvement in business conditions and an even more decidedly cheerful sentiment are reflected in this month's map.

The Barometer

The December barometer about equals the June, 1934, and July, 1933, high points, and on this, the third wave of improvement may reach a new three-year peak.

FAMILIES MOVE TO DAM PROJECT

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O.—Hunting jobs on the new Tappan dam of the Muskingum conservancy flood control project, 100 families have moved into this county from West Virginia. Only bona fide residents of the county will be hired first, said Donald Gray, U. S. employment chief.

CHECK GOES BEGGING

SALEM, Ore.—A check for $1,013.67 gave Oregon's state treasurer and adjutant general a headache. Neither knew what to do with it. The money was part of a 32-year-old fund sent to Oregon by the government to pay Oregon Volunteers of the Spanish-American War. For 15 years the rightful recipients have eluded search, so the adjutant general sent in the check to the treasury.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with Article No. 2544 and all amendments thereto, the Commissioners' Court of Eastland County, Texas, will on February 11th, 1935, receive proposals or bids by any institution or individual banker in said County which may desire to be selected as the depository of funds of Eastland County, School funds of Eastland County and Trust Funds in the hands of the District and County Clerks of Eastland County; that said proposals shall be made in compliance with Article 2545 and amendments thereto and said proposals shall be opened and depository selected in accordance with Art. 2546 and amendments thereto. The Court will not accept personal bond but will require approved securities to be pledged to secure all of the funds above mentioned and reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Former Senator Fess is writing a book upholding the two party system. Yet in congress he was one of the foremost opponents of the second party.

AUTOIST TO REBUILD WALL

NEWBURYPORT, Mass.—Richard Goodhue, 22-year-old odd job man was accused of leaving the scene of an accident and wrecking a private stone wall when the automobile crashed into it. He pleaded guilty and was fined $60, but leniency was asked and only $2.20 in costs was assessed. The court ordered Goodhue to rebuild the 20-foot gap in the wall.

HUNT NETTED A HOLE

COLUMBIA, Mo.—A hole 80 feet deep on the A. J. Bass farm is what resulted when Dr. Lynes Miles, self-styled West Indies negro treasure hunter, dug for gold. Dr. Miles appeared at the farm one day to ask permission to dig for a chest of gold and silver at the bottom of an old well. After three weeks of work he disappeared, leaving the 80-foot shaft.

annulment of her marriage. She said that while out riding Bookout—who she said she knew only casually—threatened to drive his car over an embankment unless she consented to marry him.

"IMITATION OF LIFE" A MAGNIFICENT PRODUCTION

"Magnificent" may be a much abused word, even in Hollywood, but nothing else will adequately describe "Imitation of Life," the Fannie Hurst novel which John M. Stahl made into a picture for Universal, starring Claudette Colbert and Warren William, now showing at the Lyric theatre.

It is a magnificent production. Some notion of the scale on which this film has been produced can be gained from the fact that one single setting cost $10,000. Nothing about this set was extraordinary. The cost came about merely to make the set perfect and authentic.

In all, 48 sets were built for "Imitation of Life." One of these was a complete town house in New York city, containing 15 rooms, a real kitchen and a garden behind it. This garden was sodded with actual grass and flowers were planted there. From the garden a view of the East River was seen in the distance. Model vessels capable of operating under their own power were made for this scene and a small scale replica of the Fifty-ninth Street bridge was erected in the background. A system of tiny moving electric lights in procession across the bridge indicating traffic in the night scene shot in the garden was effective.

not be Mr. Driscoll's fault. He is for all communities equally and alike, and the reason that other communities in the county, particularly Ranger and Cisco are mentioned in larger figures is because the citizenship of those communities are alert and place the projects in Mr. Driscoll's hands in the right form, for approval from the state. He is there, ready to give Eastland all the breaks necessary for approval that any other community receives, but it's up to Eastland to look up the projects, and give them to him for action. Wonder if we are not sleeping on the job?

COLORED MAMMY DEAD

WASHINGTON.—Mrs. Mary Hill, 103-year-old colored mammy born in slavery 30 years before the Civil War, no longer will ramble through the tobacco fields of Madison County, Va. The aged woman died recently at the home of her son here. Until 30 days before her death she had spent her entire life in the tobacco fields. Mrs. Hill delighted in relating tales of the days before the war.

CHANGED COLOR OF EYES

BATTLE CREEK.—The normally clear red eyes of Albino rats can be changed to a dead white.

Dr. Helen S. Mitchell and W. N. Dodge have discovered in experiments at Battle Creek College. The change is made by feeding the rats a diet of high milk-sugar content, which provokes cataracts and eventually blindness. The experiments at the college laboratory tend to corroborate a medical theory that diabetes and senility are associated with growth of cataracts in the human eye.

How Do You CHOOSE?

Every time you make a purchase you make a choice. Buying a certain product may be so much a matter of habit that you don't realize you are choosing. But the fact remains that in accepting one brand of goods you are always rejecting others; and the satisfaction you get from what you buy depends on the knowledge of quality and values that guides your selection.

How do you know which bed-sheets, or which roofing materials, or which radio will give you service you require? You can't personally test everything you buy and compare it with all the other products in its class. But there is a way to find out which brand fits your needs.

The people who are most successful in their buying—who achieve the highest percentage of satisfaction from the things they own and use—are those who consistently read the advertising columns, and buy consistently advertised goods.

Choosing isn't just "guessing" when you follow the guidance of the advertisements.

You can depend on advertised goods. It pays to read the advertisements.
