Will Business Realize It's Opportunities?

Virtually everybody has been a little surprised at the signs of some degree of business revival for this fall. Even some of the more optimistic business prophets have seen their predictions undone by a series of unexpected developments.

Auto production, instead of falling off, held up well into late July, despite imminence of new models. Steel production hasn't fallen off to the usual seasonal extent. Electric power production stays around the high point achieved in 1929.

Private building construction has risen steadily since last February. It is still low, but the improvement is marked and unwavering.

There is even evidence that the "strike of capita!" may be breaking, as security issues have been mounting, and not all of them for paying off old issues with money borrowed at today's low rates. A small dribble is beginning to go into new enterprises.

To cap all this, the stock market has been rising steadily for many weeks to the highest point of the year, and in many cases the highest points in several years.

Rising stock market prices in themselves won't feed anybody. But they are a barometer of a more hopeful feeling on the part of the scores of thousands of people who invest in the country's enterprises. So many people feeling hopeful all at once has in itself a stimulating effect. Such people spend money.

The stock market rise does not seem attributable to fears of inflation, but to a remarkable series of reports from large companies whose profits are rising. Definitely better statements have just been issued by such firms as General Mills, Westinghouse, Chrysler, General Motors, Radio Corporation, U. S. Steel, and General Refractories, to name only a few.

Speaking broadly, scores of these big businesses are right now either increasing profits or climbing out of the red for the first time in several years.

Business leaders have chorused "let us alone." Many of them are getting this fall the first opportunity to demonstrate the business statesmanship they claimed to have learned during the depression years.

They will have opportunity to see that wages and hours in their plants keep pace with advancing cost of living, which is admittedly causing concern.

BOSS HERE HOW COME I AM BECAUSE I ALREADY HAVE RESIGNED

But the buxom Davis girl shook her head stubbornly. "Not a word remember I sat down at the table with one of these motion pictures, and he told me about my picture."

"Oh, that was Silas Drann," he said. "Peter Fragonet is like that."

"Nevertheless I'll take my chances," Tubby insisted. "You can skip along downstairs, and you tell Mr. Fragonet I forgot to bring you a morning suit and vest, my bacon and eggs and coffee."

Jo knew better than to argue further, and when she met Fragonet in the lobby of the inn it was without the comfort of her friend's aid. She dressed in stockings and heavy sweater, hurried forward and gave Fuller a quick kiss.

"It's good to see you again, curred skull while..."

"I don't know whether I am or not," Jo laughed. "You've proved either shall I say disturbing?"

"It won't happen again," he promised. "Thank Heaven we won't be under scrutiny this time."

At the breakfast table he told her of his doings in Hollywood and how he'd arranged for the film at Crest Lake. He asked how she liked the movie row, and when she confessed he knew them very little he promised to make her better acquainted.

"You simply must introduce Tubby to Lolita Montez," Jo told him.

"Lolita's a good egg," Fragonet said. "She works hard, so when he gets away like this she tries to rest."

Over the coffee and morning cigarettes, Fragonet ceased talking of impersonal matters.

Lowering his voice he said, "I've been lost without you Jo. It was hard to leave without seeing you. The nurse delivered my notes?"

"What have you decided?" "I haven't decided anything," Jo told him.

"Fragonet looked relieved. "That's fine! I was afraid you might say you'd made up your mind not to return to Hollywood with me. But if you've made no decision then I've still hope."

"But you see, I—"

"Now!" he held up a restraining hand. "Don't try to decide over the breakfast table. We'll be filming scenes here for two or three weeks, and perhaps by then I'll have persuaded you." His tone grew serious. "You don't have to think about Edna now. That's over... definitely."

Jo was about to speak when she heard Douglas Marsh's voice booming jovially across the dining room. "Well, Pete!..."

The two men shook hands. "I'm glad you're back again," Douglas said. "And how are you this morning, Jo?"

Jo was about to speak when she heard Douglas Marsh's voice booming jovially across the dining room. "Well, Pete!..."

The two men shook hands. "I'm glad you're back again," Douglas said. "And how are you this morning, Jo?"

"Very well, thank you." She wondered if his mother had told him her version of the episode in the hallway upstairs the night before.

"Sit down and break eggs with us," Fragonet invited. "Have Drann and his crew been driving your guests away?"

"On the contrary, they've attracted them. And of course there are the usual curious females who are mighty disappointed to learn you didn't come up with the rest of the company."

Fragonet laughed easily. "That's one of the reasons why I didn't come with the rest of the company."

"You know," said Marsh, wrinkling slyly at Jo. "It must be awful to have to fight off women like Pete does."

Involuntarily, Jo reddened. Marsh saw her embarrassment and was instantly contrite. He stammered for a moment and then blurted out, "I didn't mean anything by that crack, Pete." He faltered again, and then rushed on, "We're all friends. Suppose I stop being a polite fool and we discuss this thing. Is Edna going to divorce you?"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Marsh," interrupted Jo quickly. "Suppose we don't discuss it. You see, I'd really rather not. And there's nothing to discuss anyway."

It was Marsh's turn to grow red. "I'm sorry, Jo. It was only that I made a rather foolish remark and was trying to pull out of it."

"That's something a fellow should never try to do," laughed Fragonet cheerfully. Abruptly he steered the conversation into safer channels. "Drann tells me he's going to shoot a few scenes this afternoon. You two had better come down and watch. He may go temperamental before he's through and exclude all on-lookers—even the owner of the place!"

"What time's the shooting?" "About two, I believe Drann said."

"Good!" exclaimed Marsh. "That's a date for 2 o'clock, Jo."

MARSH was waiting for her on the veranda when Jo appeared at two that afternoon. Tossing his cigaret away, he slid down from the railing and walked to meet her.

"I was afraid you might let me down," he told her. "I was such a fool this morning. But I'm a frank sort of cuss, and it seemed so silly for us to sit there and pretend."

Jo walked down the steps and out on the lawn in silence. Marsh added, "I'll admit it's something for you and Pete to decide. Jo. But, confound it, I feel rather responsible for you."

"Thank you."

"I mean it—I want you both to be sure of yourselves before you tie together, if that's what you're really thinking of."

"I haven't thought about it at all," Jo told him, shading her eyes to gain a better view of the lake shore where Drann and his company were already assembled.

Marsh sensed that her mood of the morning had not changed, that she still preferred not to talk about Peter Fragonet. The realization troubled him vaguely, made him feel shut out from Jo's heart, and he wondered whether in that life had begun—whether it was on that first night at the Olympic Bowl or later. Perhaps, he told himself, it began on the road to the Lone Tree Tavern, the magic night he had taken Jo in his arms.

His disturbing thoughts were diverted as he and Jo drew closer to the shore of the lake where Drann's carpenters had built a replica of a forester's cabin. The interior was unfurnished, and used as a storehouse for the sound and camera equipment, as the scenes in the interior of the cabin would be filmed at the Atlas lot in Hollywood 4.

Ranged in a semi-circle about the front of the cabin were Drann and his assistants, some looting in canvas chairs others running nervously here and there but always somewhat gravitating near the chair marked in blue white letters, "SILAS DRANN." Two cameras were set up behind him, and projecting out on a long crane-like arm was the black cylinder which Jo guessed to be the "mike" to catch the dialogue.

Americans Aid Austrian Blind

VIENNA. Through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Graves Mather, of New York City, Austria soon will have its own "Lighthouse" for the blind. It is proposed to organize the Austrian "Lighthouse" at Lilienfeld, where the blinded poor from all parts of Austria can gather to learn new trades. It will be conducted on similar lines to the blind institutions established in New York, Paris, China, Japan and South America by Mrs. Mather and her husband. The Mathers recently were in Vienna to push the organization of an Austrian training school for the blind. These tireless workers for the welfare of the blind came here from the Balkans, where they have been sponsoring similar projects in Turkey, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Greece and Hungary.

Letters From Our Readers

Opportunity will be offered people of Texas in the Aug. 24 election to assume their rightful authority to speak quickly in times of public emergency without waiting for the next regular session of legislature that convenes but once each year. To take advantage of this opportunity the voters should adopt the amendment to the constitution, which provides that "in cases of extraordinary emergencies affecting the state as a whole amendments to the constitution may be proposed upon the submission of the proposed amendment by the governor at any special session."

As the constitution now stands, the people are prevented from adopting any emergency measures, no matter how dire the need, without a wait that might mean permanent disaster. As an example, the next regular session of the legislature is in 1937, and, if some holocaust should strike now, in the combating of which the people would have to amend their constitution, we should have to wait a year and a half before an amendment could be offered. The rapidly changing policies of the national government—the changing social and economic life of the people of Texas both show conclusively that the people should be able to vote quickly on matters affecting their welfare. Especially is this true when extraordinary conditions exist affecting the state as a whole. The need of this privilege and this right is emphasized by the certainty that lawful authority must be furnished the state and local communities to care for the orphan, the destitute widow and the sick living in our midst when their needs are acute. As these orphans, widows and impoverished sick find their wants no longer can be supplied through national government relief sources, their cries will be directed as is now being done in many instances to the local communities and to the states as a whole. Surely the people of this state would not want to see these appeals made in vain, yet unless a favorable vote is given Amendment 4, no power exists in this state that will provide food, clothing and shelter for this group of our people. We should remember as we go to the polls on Aug. 24 that Amendment 4 does not involve an issue of opinion. It is merely a change in our fundamental law giving to the people a power and a right to do that which they always should have the power and right to do; that is, to change their fundamental laws as necessity demands. A vote for this amendment will not mean that any particular provision must be made. It is simply the granting to, or the assumption by, the people of a power to provide what might be reasonable and necessary to the public welfare. Any such questions of specific amendments, as authorized by the one now under discussion, when such needs arise. Then only will the people be asked to vote on a specific provision for the needs of these same widows, orphans and sick. A vote against this amendment would continue to tie the hands of the state and local governmental agencies and so prevent them from doing anything adequately to meet the situation. Citizens who are interested in public welfare can not afford to permit this amendment to fail. It is their duty to acquaint their fellow citizens with its purpose and its need; to organize their communities in active groups that will further an intelligent understanding of our problems so that on Aug. 24 a tremendous vote for Amendment 4 will be given by the people of Texas. JUDGE C. L. GARRETT.

Sister of Mrs. C. C. Robey, Wed Saturday, Visitor in Eastland Mrs. Robert Berry Smith, sister of Mrs. C. C. Robey, and formerly Miss Lucy Belle Ramsey until she was married Saturday at Dallas, is a visitor in Eastland.

The following society news story appeared in a Sunday issue of a Dallas paper: Miss Lucy Belle Ramsey, daughter of Mrs. Fannie Collins Ramsey of Cleburne, was married to Robert Berry Smith, Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin T. Clyatt, 5347 Morningside.

Dr. Jasper Manton, pastor of the Trinity Presbyterian church of Oak Cliff, read the ceremony in the garden, which was lighted to resemble a moonlight scene. Blue floodlights were used to secure this effect and around the fish pond and rock garden were lights in amber, red and green. The vows were taken before an improvised altar inside the white trellis. Palms, ferns and flowers were interwoven in the trellis and placed on either side of the altar were white cathedral candles. Tall wicker baskets contained white gladioli. A white aisle runner was laid from the house to the altar and miniature white gates opened the entrance to the garden.

Before the ceremony Miss Alice Holcomb, violinist, played and Mrs. Charles C. Robey of Eastland, sister of the bride, sang. Mrs. Jack Ramsey of Meridian was pianist and during the ceremony she and Miss Holcomb played.

Miss Emma Gannaway attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a gown of blue lace, pink picture hat, pink gloves and pink sandals and carried an arm bouquet of pink gladioli.

The junior bridesmaids were Carolyn and Rebecca Marchbanks of Cleburne, and niece of the bride. They wore frocks made ankle length of peach and green colored ruffled net, with halo bonnets to match. They carried colonial bouquets of pink rosebuds and tinted daisies.

The bridegroom's niece, De Lois Bell, carried the ring in a lily. The bride was given in marriage by her mother. She was gowned in white mousseline de soie over white satin, with which she wore white sandals, a white picture hat and other accessories in white. She carried a showered bouquet of white Killarney rosebuds and lilies of the valley.

The bridegroom was attended by Jess H. Edwards.

A reception followed. Receiving with the bride couple were her mother and sisters, Mrs. H. E. Snipes, Mrs. Charles C. Robey and Mrs. Carrie Marchbanks; the bridegroom's sisters, Mrs. John Kitts, Mrs. R. L. Snodgrass and Mrs. E. A. Bell; Mr. and Mrs. Clyatt and Mrs. Ralph Gillen.

Mrs. Ramsey wore black and white chiffon and a corsage bouquet of gardenias.

A table laid in white lace over pink held the three-tiered wedding cake, which rested on an antique cake stand. Sweet peas were placed around the mirror plaque under the stand and over the mirror was arranged a miniature wedding party. The bride cut the cake, which was served with heart-shaped ice cream. On each plate was a small doll dressed as a bride in flowing veil and carrying a bridal bouquet. Mrs. Beeman Fisher presided over the cake and Miss Maurine Earley registered the guests in the bride's book. Mrs. Bruce T. Jones, Mrs. R. W. Brown, Mrs. Tommie Belt and Miss Bobbie Shaw assisted in serving.

Mrs. Smith wore a going-away jacket suit in blue triple sheer, trimmed in touches of peach, with blue accessories. After a trip in West Texas, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will be at home at 5347 Morningside.

Out of town guests were Mrs. Sarah Robey, Greenville; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bendel, Greenville; Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Feagin, Fort Worth; Mr. C. B. Donovan, Cleburne; Mrs. S. P. Weaver, Miss Irma Weaver and Miss Zilma Weaver, Waxahatchie; Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Snodgrass and Robert Snodgrass, Houston, and Mr. and Mrs. Luther Trout, Honey Grove.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

JAPAN HAS AN AVERAGE OF FOUR EARTHQUAKES EVERY DAY!

CHALK IS COMPOSED ALMOST ENTIRELY OF THE SKELETONS OF ANIMALS!

IN VENICE, A GONDOLA IS MORE VALUABLE BEFORE IT IS PAINTED!

THE earth has an average of one quake every hour, or about 9000 a year. Messina, Sicily, had 87 in one single day, back in 1907. Italy has had about 14,000 in the last 30 years. Only one state in the United States—North Dakota—has never recorded an earthquake.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MARY E. DAGUE NEA Service Staff Writer

ABOUT this time of the year, in spite of their seeming sweetness, will serve as a fine tonic for tired summer appetites. Use them fresh in salads, fruit cups and desserts or as a breakfast fruit, or stew them for a complete. Better still, bake them for breakfast with bacon and eggs.

To bake pears pare and core them and arrange in a single layer in a lightly buttered casserole. Sprinkle with sugar, cover closely and bake slowly for an hour until tender. A little ground ginger mixed with the sugar improves the flavor. Or drop a vanilla bean in the center of the casserole. Chill and serve with whipped cream and ginger cookies. Two tablespoons of sugar for each pear makes the fruit sweet enough for the average taste.

For Stuffed Pears For stuffed pear salad, use cream cheese mixed with preserved ginger and finely chopped nuts. Peanut butter and cream cheese makes a good stuffing, too, and seedless white grapes and nuts folded into a fruit-salad dressing. If you do them in fritters, serve with ginger sauce. This is a good dessert for a vegetable dinner. Pare the fruit and cut it in very thin slices. Drop into fritter batter and fry in deep hot fat. Drain on crumpled paper and serve with ginger sauce.

Sautéed pears with chocolate sauce is a favorite dessert in my family. The fruit is pared and cut in halves and browned lightly in butter. Cover with hot chocolate sauce. Let stand until cool and chill for several hours. Serve with or without a garnish of whipped cream. Peanut butter and cream cheese makes a good stuffing, too.

Pear Compote Six cooking pears, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 cup water, juice and rind 1-2 lemon, 2 cloves, 1-4 cup marsh-malino. Pare fruit and cut in halves. Make a syrup of sugar and water. Add pears, lemon juice and grated rind of lemon and cloves. Simmer until fruit is tender. Remove pears from syrup and drain. Add marsh-malino to syrup and cook until thick. Pour over pears and serve very cold with or without a garnish of whipped cream.

Because pears are slightly acid they make ideal desserts to serve with fish. A frozen pear salad does duty for both salad and dessert in a fish dinner of steamed haddock, shoe-string potatoes and creamed broccoli.

Frozen Pear Salad Cook pears in thin syrup until tender. Drain and put in freezing tray. Mix 1 cup mayonnaise, 1 cup whipping cream whipped until firm, 1-2 cup finely chopped nut meats, 2 tablespoons minced preserved ginger, 2 packages cream cheese, 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Work nuts and ginger and lemon juice into cheese. Combine with whipped cream and mayonnaise and pour over pears. Freeze until firm and serve on lettuce. Garnish with cherries and more mayonnaise.

A HORROR TALE THAT BEATS ALL FOR CHILLS Peter Lorre, amazing new personality to the American screen, makes his bow in his first picture in this country in "Mad Love," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's creepy mystery drama now showing at the Lyric Theatre.

Star of "M" and other European sensations, he brings a bald, calculating murderer to the screen in the person of a mad surgeon in Paris. Creepy thrills, weird surgical experiments, a glimpse of the Grand Guignol horror theatre, the guillotine and other fantastic diversissements surround a gripping drama.

Karl Freund, European director, famous for his direction of "Metropolis," deserves much credit for the deft direction and almost uncanny topography of the new picture. Beautiful Frances Drake proves herself an actress of poignant intensity as Yvonne, the heroine, and Colin Clive is compellingly interesting as Orlac, the pianist.

Others in the cast are Henry Kolker as the police head, Ted Healy as the American reporter who helps solve the mystery, Edward Brophy as the knife-throwing killer, Sarah Haden, Keye Luke, Isabel Jewell, Harold Huber, Ian Wolfe, Charles Trowbridge and Murray Kinnell.

The picture, based on Maurice Renard's novel, "The Hands of Orlac," was adapted by Freund and Guy Endore, author of "Werewolf of Paris," with screen play by John Balderston and P. J. Wolfson.

Cane cutting, corn pulling, fodder shocks are all in order this week. That means more feed and savings for the farmer. Cotton is loaded to the gills, and looks like a million dollars. (A little rain won't hurt.) Boy, how things will move before long. Merchants can well begin to prepare for the biggest fall business in several years and fill their stores with stocks so when the people get ready for them they will be here.

Eastland trade trippers made a swing into the Colony community Tuesday night. About eight cars full of enthusiastic business men went on the trip with plenty of good words for Eastland and particularly the coming County Fair in September. They were well and pleasantly received by the excellent citizens of Colony and new friends were in the making. The next trip will be announced soon. Each trip should have almost and entire turnout of the business interests on these trips as they are valuable trade builders as well as cementing the bonds of friendship with the citizens of the Eastland trade communities.

RETURN FROM CAMP Ralph Mahon and Parker Brown of Eastland have returned from a two month's outing at the Dallas Young Men's Christian Association's camp, Camp Crockett, held three miles from Granbury. At the camp Mahon and Brown were counsellors and had supervision over 10 younger boys.

Monday's Menu BREAKFAST: Chilled lemon balls, cereal cooked with dates, cream, milk, coffee, toast. LUNCHEON: Corn souffle, creamed green peppers, chilled baked pears with whipped cream, ginger cookies, milk, tea. DINNER: Steamed haddock, shoe string potatoes, creamed broccoli, frozen pear salad, toasted crackers, milk, coffee.

Over 100 At— (Continued from page 1) "The county fair is the show window of the county," stated Heald, again urging a good booth from the community.

It was indicated the county agent would spend a half day in the community, assisting residents to select exhibits for their booth. Entertainment was furnished by J. E. Moreno and Cy Reed of Eastland in blackface.

A stringed orchestra, composed of Desmond Daniels, Luther and Johnson Smith, and Ben Pargin, played throughout the evening.

A quartet composed of Dace Myers, John D. Harvey and A. E. Herring sang several numbers. Edmund Herring played accordion numbers.

H. C. Davis, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, served as master of ceremonies and invited all to attend the fair.

He stressed that the affair is free and entertainment unprecedented is due at this year's event. Eastland residents making the trip included: Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hardwick, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Scott and daughter, Horace Wade, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Metz Heald, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roberson, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Miller, Fred Maxey, Ben Hamner, John D. Harvey, Cy Reed, J. B. Moreno, Desmond Daniels, Ben Pargin, Luth and Johnson Smith.

Will Turner's Team Wins Game 6 to 3 Team of Will Turner defeated L. Y. Morris' 6 to 3 Tuesday afternoon in the first game between "old folks."

The teams are composed of players over 35 years. B. O. Harrell of the group Wednesday requested that others in the over-35 category join the teams. Next game will be played Thursday afternoon at 6:15 p. m. on Connellee park field.

Judge, Mrs. Grissom Parents of Daughter Judge and Mrs. Clyde Grissom of Eastland, who are now in Haskell, have announced birth of a daughter, named Helen Virginia, at the latter town. Judge Grissom is an associate justice of the 11th Court of Civil Appeals.

There are many things that one can feel and say after an election but none as sincere as the word, Thank You! You have shown by your vote that you approved me to serve you as one of your city commissioners and at the same time impressed upon me more fully the duty I owe for the support you gave me and the present city commission.

I pledge my faithful service. C. T. LUCAS
